My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1831-Mary patiently everything in the inspection report to Andrius, which included the pathology, causes, and possible future development of his condition.

In the end, she raised her eyes to look at the man and quietly thought, 'He's not a medical professional, so he probably didn't understand.'

"I understand, it seems that there is a problem with my medication. If it continues to develop, it will turn into stomach cancer! If I want a cure, I must stop the medication and take good care of it for three or four months. Right?"

This summary saved Mary a lot of trouble. He understood it all!

"You've been taking long-term medication? What kind of medicine?" Mary grasped the key point. She could not help but wonder why he needed to take long-term medication since he appeared to be well.

Andrius looked a little hesitant.

"It's best not to hide anything in front of a doctor. You have to understand that this is about your life!" Mary raised her voice, showing a serious expression.

However, Andrius still kept quiet.

His eyes were a little dazed.

Mary was even more anxious, but she noticed the sudden melancholy in the man's eyes. She had no choice but to hold back her impatience and waited.

"Actually, I have very serious depression!" Andrius suddenly smiled.

That smile, however, tinged with a few wisps of self-deprecating bitterness.

Mary was dumbfounded.

She thought about other hidden diseases, but she never expected it to be depression.

'However... He doesn't look depressed no matter what!'

Andrius gave the impression that he was serious, mature and down-to-earth no matter when or where.

How could such a person be depressed?

Mary did not find it ridiculous. She just could not believe it.

As a doctor, she understood the pain of depression better than anyone else.

She was stunned for a few seconds, but Andrius turned around and said with a smile, "You can't believe it right?"

Even my family members don't know about this disease! Of course, I hope you can keep a secret now that I've told you!"

A depressed person's world would be gray and hopeless. They would have no interest in anything.

How could this have anything to do with Andrius?

He brought the Quirke Enterprise to its pinnacle and had been following Byron's footsteps in the business world for a longtime.

He made people feel that he was always so sincere!

Mary nodded emphatically and promised to help him keep the secret.

Fortunately, what Andrius said next made her feel somewhat comforted.

"Thankfully, though I wasn't sure if the medicine has taken effect, or my own mental state is constantly adjusting.

Recently, many dark thoughts have disappeared, especially my brother Byron and sister-in-law have gotten together. That felt like an encouragement. Slowly, I don't feel too heavy anymore."

Andrius looked at Mary seriously, and suddenly asked, "Do you believe me?"

"Of course! Of course, I believe you!" Mary responded hastily.

Her eyes quickly moved away, for fear of causing a misunderstanding to Andrius.

At this moment, she felt complicated.

Those melancholy eyes gave her the urge to hug him tight.

"Okay, now that we've found the problem. It's probably because your medicine is too aggravating to your stomach. So, if it's not necessary, don't take any more of that medication. Is that okay?"

Back to the stomach problems, Mary discovered that these two problems Andrius encountered were really troublesome.

Neither depression nor stomach cancer were something to be taken lightly!

“Well, I understand now, and I will stop taking the medication. Also, what is the next treatment plan?” Andrius asked.

“I just sent the inspection report to Rosie. I can handle western medicine. She is better at traditional medicine and ancient needling. In short, don’t worry, you will be fine!” With conviction, Mary promised.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1832-Mary prescribed some medicine, reminded Andrius how to take it, and finally let him relax.

If he was not afraid of gastroscopy, he should do a followup review once a month.

Andrius was indeed a little scared, so Mary smiled coyly and promised to change the doctor next time.

After he left, Mary informed Rosalie of his situation.

“It was caused by medication. What kind of medicine did he take to cause such serious damage to the stomach?!”

Rosalie asked inevitably because of her professional habits as a doctor.

Mary stretched the truth because she had agreed to keep it a secret.

“It’s a medicine to promote sleep, and I don’t know where he got it. Anyway, I told him to stop now because he can’t take any more of that medicine. Please prepare some prescriptions for him to nourish the stomach!”

Rosalie agreed.

After a day of work, the three little kids immediately surrounded her when she got back home.

“Mommy, you must be tired, hurry up and drink some water.”

"Mommy, Daddy said, you always have to stand while doing experiments. Come, let me massage your feet for you!"

' Mommy, I want to help, I want to help too. I'll massage Mommy's shoulders!"

Rosalie had the feeling these kids had personal agenda that they would show such courtesy voluntarily.

"Tell me now, what do you want to buy, or where do you want to go?"

She scanned Lucian, Nox and Estie's faces, and found that their eyes were shining.

"We don't want toys or anything. We want to go to the orphanage. We have saved some money and want to donate it to them. Is it possible?" Estie looked expectant.

Rosalie was stunned for a moment. She did not expect that they would take the initiative to make such a request.

She nodded immediately and agreed. "This is a wonderful thing, why would you worry about Mommy not agreeing? No problem, I'll take you with me."

The three little kids were immediately overjoyed.

When Byron came back, Rosalie told him what the three kids asked for.

Byron smiled too and praised the kids again.

Tomorrow happened to be the weekend, so the family decided to go tomorrow.

At dinnertime, Rosalie mentioned about Andrius's serious stomach problem which caught Byron by surprise. However, he felt relieved when he heard that Rosalie and Mary were going to treat him personally.

"Why don't we ask him to come along tomorrow? He's a workaholic who knows nothing but work. It's good to let him participate in more activities."

"Sounds good. If that's the case, let's call Mary too. It's her day off tomorrow too. She would have more opportunities to get in touch with Andrius."

Rosalie immediately called her best friend in the middle of dinner.

At first, Mary wanted to complain about her directorship workload; that even though it was a day off, she actually still worked at home.

However, Mary's heart skipped a beat when she heard that Andrius was going too. She immediately agreed.

“Haha, you agreed as soon as you heard about Andrius. You don’t even know how to hide it!” Rosalie giggled and teased her.

Mary had other considerations in her mind.

‘Perhaps, going to the orphanage to help those children would give him some healing energy for his depression.’

Mary did not explain much but just responded casually.” Yes, yes, I’m focusing my entire being on Andrius right now. Go ahead and make fun of me, like the pot calling the kettle black. You have been willingly waiting for Byron for so many years.”

The two chatted a while more.

After hanging up the phone, Byron suddenly asked about the wedding dress shooting.

“I’ll follow your arrangement. We can shoot whenever you want. I’ve been waiting for so many years, doesn’t hurt to wait awhile more!”

Rosalie’s words made Byron feel slightly nervous again. Her tone was somewhat resentful!

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1833-Rosalie and Byron set off with the three little kids over the weekend.

In terms of donations, the little kids have not disclosed how much money they have.

Although Byron and Rosalie were very curious, they waited for the kids to initiate the reveal.

First, the family went to the supermarket and bought a lot of toys, snacks, and books.

Immediately, they let the supermarket arranged a medium-sized truck to send all the goods directly.

When they arrived at the orphanage, Mary and Andrius had been waiting for a long time.

Mary wore a beautiful sundress, while Andrius was dressed casually.

The two of them were also not sloppy either. Mary brought a medical examination team from the hospital over to give the children in the orphanage a free examination.

Andrius contacted several sponsors overnight to provide some accommodation facilities and daily necessities for free.

The two had already greeted the director of the orphanage. They were just waiting for Byron's family.

After the group entered, they received a warm welcome.

Under the director's guidance, the three little kids quickly got into action.

They started communicating with all the children.

The children's mental wellbeing seemed to be given excellent care by the staff of this orphanage. All the children were enthusiastic and happy.

The whole process went smoothly.

The three little kids donated more than one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

This number surprised Rosalie and Byron.

They never gave the children pocket money at all because they did not lack anything.

"How did you save so much money?" Rosalie was a little worried, and quickly looked at Lucian and Nox.

She was afraid the kids would use those powerful hacking techniques to seek ill-gotten gains.

However, Estie explained directly. "It's not the two brothers, I did it. I helped many websites to fix bugs with the technology I learned from my brothers. So, that's the reward

I got! I earned a lot of money from that!"

Lucian and Nox nodded. Part of the donation sums were earned from the boys' website by making online class videos.

"Estie earns more, but we earn less. Next time, Nox and I will donate more!"

The director of the orphanage looked at the three little one with a smile on his face, thanking them for their kindness.

“Thank you. I will tell all the children about the help you have given them, so they would help others when they can.”

Mary and Andrius were still busy.

Mary brought her team to do the physical examination. There were dozens of children, so it took a longer time.

Andrius, along with his sponsors, were upgrading the children’s living conditions, replacing many new beds and new equipment.

In the afternoon, the director and the staff member cooked a meal to entertain Rosalie and the visiting party.

When it was almost time, Rosalie and Byron took the three little kids and bid goodbye to all the children.

“We will come again. Brothers and sisters...”

The director personally sent them to the gate. There was another burst of sincere gratitude.

It made Byron feel embarrassed, so he promised that there will be other donations in the future.

Andrius and Mary were not done yet, so Rosalie and Byron did not interrupt them and let the two carried on.

After Rosalie’s family left, Mary sorted out the results of the physical examination and handed them over to the director in the evening.

Among them, several children needed to go to the hospital for further examination with professional equipment.

On Andrius’ side, the beds and facilities had been installed properly. The children’s living environment had been completely renewed.

Andrius felt a burst of relief in his heart looking at the fruits of his labor.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1834-In the evening back at the villa.

Once again, Rosalie emphasized to Lucian and Nox to be wary of criminals. They must know how to distinguish and beware of doing things for others online.

For example, it would be unacceptable to be hired to attack a website, or to ask for money in return for helping others.

“Estie doesn’t understand but both of you have to. You must help her gatekeep! Don’t turn good intentions into bad actions.” Rosalie emphasized strongly.

The two nodded and made a promise to identify clearly.

Estie was still immersed in happiness. The joy of helping others, which was the simplest form of human emotion.

Among the children they had met, a girl gave her a beautiful hair clip, which she cherished very much.

Not long after, Benedict and Melody came by car.

This was not the first time Benedict came to teach Lucian and Nox how to play chess.

It did not take long for the grandfather and his grandsons to kick up a ferocious battle.

Melody came over and cooked personally. She wanted to make soup for the kids.

Byron did not say anything. He just went upstairs to the study room and got busy with work.

Rosalie was also working at first. She has been prescribed some medication for Andrius. Once she was done, she went downstairs to take a look.

Suddenly, Rosalie heard a scream from the kitchen. She hurried over.

Melody’s face was in agony. The palm of her right hand was red and soaking in a basin of water.

She was never accustomed to chores, and she seldom cooked on weekdays.

So, she did not pay attention after the soup was ready as it overflowed and splashed onto the back of her hand.

The burn was so painful that tears almost fell out.

However, she held back.

“Auntie Melody, are you burned? No, this wouldn’t do! Hurry!”

Rosalie approached and immediately took Melody’s hand out of the basin, turned on the faucet, and let the water rinse continuously over the wound.

“The first step in scalding is to rinse with cold water for fifteen minutes. Soaking the burn in water is not enough, it would blister very quickly!”

Rosalie’s tone was professional like a true doctor.

Melody was embarrassed when Rosalie grabbed her hand. She was apologetic as she looked at Rosalie.

“I’m so terrible, I can’t do such a simple thing well. I’m sorry, Rosalie.”

“Auntie Melody, you could just let the kitchen staff prepare the soup. You don’t have to do it yourself.”

Rosalie knew that Melody was trying to make up for what she owed for the past six years.

“I just want Lucian and Nox to taste the soup I made. Sigh, I’m just too careless!” Melody’s awkwardness at the beginning gradually disappeared as Rosalie continued to hold her hand. She began to feel something different inside as she looked at Rosalie.

“Okay, I understand. You keep it under the running water first. I’ll go upstairs to get the medicine to apply it for you. Fortunately, the burn is not serious.” Rosalie hurried upstairs after giving instructions.

Benedict heard the conversation between the two and rushed over to check on his wife’s situation.

“Why are you so careless?” He exclaimed. His brows were furrowed but his eyes were full of concern.

The children heard it too, and they all asked with concern.

“Grandma, are you okay? Let’s skip the soup next time so that you won’t get burned.”

“Grandma, does it hurt? You can ask us to help. Or ask Daddy and Mommy to help. Mommy said that you must be careful of burns in the kitchen.”

When Melody heard Lucian and Nox’s concern, her frown slowly relaxed.

She shook her head and comforted the children in turn.” Grandma is fine, don’t worry. Your Mommy will apply the medicine for Grandma later, and I’ll be okay soon.”

At this moment, she felt inexplicably peaceful and full of warmth.

Melody glanced at her husband with a slight smile on her lips.
