My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1850-Byron and Rosalie were at the entrance of the marriage registration unit.

Rosalie held the marriage certificate and was in a trance as if she had returned six years ago.

That year, she had also married Byron without any preparation.

It was just that back then, Byron had registered their marriage hastily. He even left immediately after the registration. Luther was the one who drove her back home.

It was as if it was only a business occasion.

At the moment, Byron wore a stylish suit and smiled with roses in his hands.

“How did it occur to you to get our marriage registered first?” Byron approached and kissed Rosalie’s forehead without caring they were in public.

Next to them, many of the couples waiting to register could not take their eyes off them.

The man’s and woman’s appearance was breathtaking.

“We’re busy people, so it’s better to register our marriage first. After all, you’ve proposed, and I have to give the kids a promising life. Later, I must add your last name to Lucian’s and Nox’s birth certificates.”

Rosalie smiled and explained, yet what she saw was Byron’s serious expression. However, his gaze was gentle, just like what she had hoped to see years ago.

“You’re kidding. You’re a rich woman now. The Lawrence family’s heirloom right can’t attract you anymore.” Byron handed her the roses, letting her hold them. Then, he took out his phone and switched to the selfie camera.

He crouched slightly and positioned his face beside Rosalie’s.

“What are you doing?” Rosalie was still a little confused.

Rosalie immediately looked at the camera, and a smile bloomed on her face. It was sweet and happy.

After taking several photos, Byron came up with a comment to go with the photo.

"I don't think it's appropriate as you have so many contacts on your social media account. There are also your clients and relatives! Shouldn't you be more careful about what you post? That is also why you've never posted anything these years!" Rosalie hesitated as she tried dissuading him.

Byron shook his head and said, "I can give up my principles because of you!"

It startled Rosalie to hear that. She was also curious about what sort of comment he left.

Was it 'wanting to hold your hands for the rest of my life' or 'I love you'?

She quickly logged into her social media and found Byron's post.

When she lifted her head, her eyes met Byron's gentle gaze.

At the same time, Byron posted it.

"Nothing can separate us from now on except for death!"

There was even a photo of the marriage certificate.

"You copied this from somewhere!" At this moment, Rosalie was touched.

Byron smiled. It was alluring.

"From now on, my social media will be the diary of our life with the kids!"

Rosalie nodded. Suddenly, she noticed the crowd and quickly reminded Byron they should leave.

"Come on. Let's go and get our wedding photos shot! Let's start today by choosing the clothes. Do you have any requirements?" Byron took Rosalie by the hand and got into the car.

She shook her head, not caring much about the details of the photos.

As long as she could take the photos with Byron, the scenery would not matter anymore.

However, Rosalie apparently underestimated how hard it would be to shoot wedding photos.

She thought she would be able to choose the dresses easily.

The studio's various styles of wedding dresses made her want to try them all on. Each dress looked pretty and elegant.

Two hours had passed, yet she had not decided after choosing for so long.
