My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1931-“Uncle Jonah, I’ll do it!” Rosalie shouted. Byron also reacted and held onto Jonah.

Rosalie took a silver needle and wanted to open the study room door.

At the same time, Lucas shouted from inside the room.

“Byron, Rosalie, don’t come in. I have to face this no matter what. I want to get my mother back to normal.”

Rosalie stopped and turned around to look at Byron.

“No! Don’t do that. Son, don’t trigger your mother. It’s painful for her to face it!” Jonah looked worried.

“Uncle Jonah, please calm down!” Byron snapped.

It snapped Jonah out of his anxiousness, but he was still worried. “Byron, what should we do? She should not be in that state for long. Didn’t Rosie say that before?”

‘Yes, I know, but the person inside now is your son. Why would he hurt his mother? He has the same feelings as you. Do you understand, Uncle Jonah?’

If this continued, it would be an endless circle.

The last time, they went looking for an ancient witch in Africa and managed to make her normal for some time by hypnotizing her.

However, the witch was dead. There would not be a second one with the same ability.

Byron pondered and decided to support Lucas’ decision to try.

Rosalie understood her husband’s decision.

Thus, she comforted Jonah, saying, “Uncle Jonah, I know what Lucas is about to do. Since Auntie Tamsine has two personalities, let Lucas try to help her overcome the personality that should not exist. Maybe he'll succeed! Don't worry. If anything happens, I can save her!"

Although Rosalie was unsure whether she could succeed, she had to assure Jonah to calm him down.

That worked, and Jonah was convinced.

"Lucas, pay attention to her condition. Call us if something is wrong with her!" Byron shouted.

Lucas nodded and looked at his mother, Tamsine.

That was not right! He observed and noticed his mother's other personality had taken place. As his mother could not accept her sister's death, she created an imaginary character of Lucas' aunt, Tamara.

"Have a seat, Aunt Tamara. Maybe we should talk."

Not knowing why, Lucas gradually calmed down.

In the past, seeing his mother's fierce expression, coupled with those curses, he could not bear the pressure.

He did not feel that way anymore now.

His mother was Aunt Tamara now, so he decided to talk to her.

"What do we have to talk about? Lucas, it was you who killed me! You let me die in the well. You're heartless! Lucas, I'm your mother's sister, and I look exactly like your mother. Why are you so cruel?"

Waves of hysterical roar constantly rang in Lucas' ears.

However, now, he was no longer afraid. Instead, he looked at his 'Aunt Tamara' calmly.

"Aunt Tamara, even now, I'll only admit that it was an accident. I didn't mean for you to fall into the well. Have a seat!"

His voice was surprisingly calm.

'Tamara' still looked in grief, gnashing her teeth as she glared at Lucas.

“W-Why did you do that to me? Have you ever thought about how good I was to you? I bought you anything you wanted when you were a kid. I used to love you so much!” She went on and on.

Lucas looked at his mother sadly and continued.

‘Yes, Aunt Tamara. I admit that what you say is right! However, it’s clear that you changed first... Somewhere along the way, you became jealous of my mom and wanted to replace her, didn’t you?’

He began to attack and questioned his ‘Aunt Tamara.’

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1932-Suddenly, Tamsine reacted strongly and shook her head profusely, denying Lucas’ words.

“No, I didn’t! I haven’t changed. You’re the one who killed me, and I’m not going to let you off with it. Lucas, you’re talking nonsense!”

“I’m not talking nonsense!”

Lucas snorted.

His voice was so loud that even Rosalie and Byron could hear him from outside.

Jonah held his hands together, pacing back and forth, worrying that something would happen.

“Aunt Tamara, don’t forget, you poisoned the food. You wanted to kill your sister to cripple her. That way, you could be with my dad forever, right?”

Lucas had decided to use the hard way. Maybe it might trigger his ‘Aunt Tamara’ and make her do something worse.

However, right now, that was all he could do.

“Lucas, I didn’t do that! I didn’t do that!”

“Aunt Tamara, don’t run away from it! You did it! You even tried to stop me from telling my mom. Why don’t you tell me what I did wrong by wanting to let my mother know?”

Lucas had been in the psychological medicine field for so many years. He never thought he would one day communicate with someone else’s second personality and even argue with them.

The subconscious mind was different from the conscious mind, which was according to the will of the patient. The conscious mind was not.

“It was you who killed me!”

‘Yes, that’s right! I blame myself too! I had no choice but to protect my mother. What you did was wrong, Aunt Tamara. What I did was not. I never wanted you to die.’

It seemed that it was a little effective. ‘Aunt Tamara’s’ consciousness seemed to be less aggressive.

However, her expression was still full of hatred, and her eyes burned with anger.

“My nephew, how can you still be alive? You should blame yourself! You should die! Did your mother ever really forgive you? How could your mother do this? I’m her sister!”

When Lucas heard this, the sadness in his eyes deepened.

He understood why his mother, Tamsine, got insane and even developed a second personality. The most fundamental reason was that she still felt that her sister’s death was partly because of her.

With another personality, she could vent her emotions.

“Aunt Tamara, my mother has always been very sad. Your death was too painful for my mother. Too painful, indeed.”

Thinking of his mother’s experience in the past ten years, Lucas’ voice sounded sad.

“Aunt Tamara, you’re my mother’s sister, but you had the heart to hurt her. Do you think you were right to do so? Why would you let my mother suffer if you're the one who did something wrong? You should disappear! Leave once and for all. Our family can no longer endure the torture you brought to us!

"My mother has done enough. She treated you better than anything, and her biggest mistake was to let you get to know my dad and have those malicious thoughts. You were the one who made the biggest mistake! How dare you continue to pester us?!"

Those questions he attacked her with showed he had taken his mother as his aunt, Tamara.

He raised his head with a complex expression.

'Aunt Tamara,' sitting opposite Lucas, was at a loss for words. Her hands shuddered, and she looked reluctant to accept that.

"Is that so? Is it really so? Am I the one who made a mistake?" She still wanted to explain.

However, her expression froze the next second as if she was startled.

Then, her gaze became soft.

"Lucas, I heard you! Lucas, are you okay?"

"My dear son, don't cry!"

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1933-Tamsine's consciousness was back.

Her gaze was soft and filled with love as she touched Lucas ' cheek.

"Mom! Mom, are you okay?" Lucas was surprised and observed his mother carefully.

The aggressiveness and hatred had dissipated completely.

Tamsine nodded and smiled. "Son, I heard all your secrets."

“Mom, do you know what just happened?” Lucas was taken aback.

Did his mother hear the conversation between him and his ‘ Aunt Tamara’?

Tamsine nodded. “Yes, I didn’t only hear it, but I also saw it. It wasn’t like this before. I used to feel like I was locked up in a dark iron cage where I couldn’t see or hear anything. Even if I tried to escape, I couldn’t.

‘This time, I heard your voice. I was very worried, and I kept scratching and scratching. Suddenly, the iron cage disappeared like smoke. I couldn’t move, but I could see you.

“Your Aunt Tamara probably knew she was wrong and didn’t want to trap me anymore!”

When Jonah heard his wife’s familiar voice, he opened the door and walked in.

Rosalie and Lucas also entered. Tamsine smiled at them and told them how she felt when her second personality took over.

Without the help of any drugs and treatment techniques, Tamsine’s consciousness returned.

“Jonah, Lucas, I can feel that my sister has disappeared in my head. It should be alright from now on!”

Tamsine said calmly. Her emotions were stable.

“In the past, maybe it was because I couldn’t let go, or maybe my twin sister’s telepathy was too strong.

Subconsciously, I started to fantasize about myself being my sister. I kept feeling like she died in grief. Ten years... That’s enough. I’ve been torturing Lucas enough by making him search for medications for me. My son is the best.”

Noticing everyone was worried, Tamsine comforted them.

She looked at her son, Lucas, and a smile appeared on her face. What else would a parent want when they already had a child like him?

“Anyway, you don’t have to worry anymore. I’ll be fine from now. Tamara did something wrong, and the accident took her life. I haven’t paid my respects to her in over a decade. Tomorrow, we’ll go back to the southwest to my hometown and visit her grave!”

Tamsine had moved on from her bad experience. Rosalie and Byron could finally be at ease.

When they were back in the living room, Jonah thanked them.

“Now that Aunt Tamsine is fine, well excuse ourselves. If you need anything in the future, don’t hesitate to call us,” Byron said to Jonah and Tamsine.

Lucas escorted the couple to the yard, and he was excited.

“Byron, Rosalie, thank you so much. If it weren’t because of your help, I might still be using the wrong methods to cure her...”

Rosalie shook her head gently and smiled. “Lucas, don’t say that. You showed us the determination of a son. If it weren’t for your determination, Aunt Tamsine wouldn’t have been able to overcome her guilt!”

Byron answered simply as he patted his shoulder, “Don’t forget to focus on being the CEO of Petal Talk!”

“No problem. This is what I should do!” Lucas agreed.

After leaving the Montgomery family’s place, Benedict and Melody asked them what had happened when they returned to the manor.

After listening, Benedict and Melody sighed. They did not expect Tamsine to be tortured by her other personality for years.

Psychological disorders were indeed terrible!

Fortunately, everything was over.

Benedict and Melody decided to pay a visit, but Byron stopped them. He told his parents that the Montgomery family planned to go to the southwest. Thus, Benedict and his wife decided to change the plan.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1934-Byron and Rosalie went to the art school to pick the kids up.

At the school gate were plenty of luxurious cars. After all, those families who could pay more than one million in tuition fees a year would undoubtedly be wealthy.

However, there were also some students who got admission for free because of their talent.

When Byron sent the three little ones in, he wanted to pay for their fees. However, the school investigated the portfolios and grades of the three children and directly admitted them free of charge.

Of course, the school also intended to build a connection with the Lawrence family as it was a good way to advertise their school.

As long as other families saw the three children of the Lawrence family studying here, it might increase the admission rate of the school.

Sure enough, they used the achievements of the three kids to advertise the school, and the number of students immediately increased dramatically.

In this school, there were no grades. Their ranks were mainly arranged according to the mark of the students' art projects.

For example, music class, dance class, film class, and so on.

The three little ones got straight As and were in the same class. The students in that class were only about 30.

No matter their age, these children were intelligent and had IQs like gods. They were crazy talented, each with more than one talent. Some even had four to five skills.

Estelle's target was learning to design traditional clothes, history, programming, and languages.

Lucian and Nox took more lessons than her. Lucian took history, literature, logical thinking, law, and programming. It was mainly these five majors, but he also took science and investigative memory.

There had been times when amazing memories had been used to help police solve mysteries.

Nox had many majors, which were history, programming, cultural relics, network security, and business logic. He also took climate science and nuclear energy exploration as his small projects.

They took on the most projects among the students in the class.

On the way out of the school, countless parents and classmates talked about the three little ones.

‘They’re the three children of the Lawrence family. The two boys are handsome, and the girl is beautiful and sweet. It’s envious to see the family have such good children. The kids in the Lawrence family are indeed lucky!’

“I have a different perspective on this matter. Birth is only one aspect. I envy their talent. They aren’t only in the intellectual class but are also the top students in the class. Their focuses on learning are unlike other kids who choose to learn music or dancing! Their aims are higher than what we can reach.”

“Yes, they’ve accomplished so much at such a young age. Look, that little girl is the founder of Comfy. I heard that President Lawrence isn’t managing it for her. He only employed a team for her, yet the brand has a market value of billions of dollars.”

“Competitiveness is toxic! I’m willing to trade my life to have my kids be so outstanding!”

The three little ones were used to such comments.

Now they were walking fast, wanting only to see Mommy and Daddy.

If anything, their mommy and daddy were the best.

Their daddy was the king of business. The huge business empire of Lawrence Corporation was still the most powerful in the country, and it would not be easily shaken even in the future.

Their mommy was a miracle doctor. Her medical skills were godly, and she invented many medicines, saving many patients' lives.

The three little kids rushed over when they saw Byron and Rosalie.

The couple looked at each other. Their eyes were filled with love and care for those kids as they carried them.

Lucian and Nox threw themselves into Byron's arms. Their daddy carried each with one arm.

Estelle jumped into her mother's arms. When Rosalie picked her up, she leaned close to her mommy's beautiful face and kissed her.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1935-When the three kids got into the car, they all began sharing exciting things about the art school.

Estelle made friends with a nice girl who had just transferred to the school and liked designing. Although she was two years older than Estelle, she admired the fact that Estelle could establish the brand Comfy.

'The girl's name is Siena Jenns. She's good at biology in addition to design. So, she told me a lot about biology. Unlike the other girls at school, she's polite and not arrogant. Next time, I'm going to invite her to our house. Is that okay?'

Estelle looked at her daddy and mommy in anticipation.

Rosalie immediately smiled and nodded. "Of course. You should welcome your friend grandly. Maybe I'll teach you guys how to make a specialty dish or how to make fruit yogurt?"

"Okay, Mommy. As long as you teach me, I'll learn!" Estelle agreed happily.

Lucian and Nox also shared they had recently participated in the history course and discussed many historical stories and characters. Byron noticed some mistakes in their understanding and corrected them.

The joyful atmosphere made Rosalie feel warm.

Back in the manor, Melody and Benedict came to pick the children up.

Benedict was eager to have a historical quiz competition and a chest game with Lucian and Nox.

Melody wanted to do some tailoring with Estelle. Estelle had agreed to make her a special gown, which excited her.

Meanwhile, Andrius had made it a habit to pick Mary up each day after work in the hospital.

He had already taken Mary's mother and Mary around Coast City. Now, he was planning on a drive around the nation.

However, Mary had to work and could not take a long break.

She packed up, walked out of the office, and met the two female doctors, who she greeted hastily.

"Dr. Wilson, are you getting off work? I just saw Mr. Quirke waiting downstairs. Seeing you having someone pick you up after work is envious!"

"Dr. Wilson, you're lucky, indeed. You helped Mr. Quirke with his gastric issue, and he's now your boyfriend. When will I get such luck?"

Their words made Mary blush, and her heart hammered.

She quickly waved his hand and explained, "Don't get it wrong. Mr. Quirke and I are still friends."

She denied it, yet she felt happy to hear their comments.

"Don't deny it, Dr. Wilson. Perhaps Mr. Quirke isn't good at expressing himself. Well, Dr. Wilson, you should take the initiative. All you have to do is cross the line. We're all grown -ups. Be decisive!"

“Yes, anyone can see that Mr. Quirke is concerned about you. He bought cherries for you the other day. It’s not cherry season, so they’re certainly not easy to find.”

Mary was happy that they quipped about her and Andrius. She smiled without explaining anything more about her relationship with Andrius.

In order not to let Andrius wait too long, she said goodbye to two doctors and walked quickly into the elevator.

When the elevator slowly went down the floors, something struck Mary.

Since it was challenging to get Andrius to make the first move, why could she not take the initiative?

However... what about the reserved character a female should have?

Then, she denied her thought. If she took the initiative, she would be on the losing side in the future.

The elevator doors opened, and she walked quickly to the parking lot, wanting to see that man’s smiling face soon.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1936-Lucas made a decision when he took over the CEO job. He wanted to make an interactive collaboration between Petal Talk’s fourth batch of products with Comfy.

The product released this time were up to 500,000 sets. In order to thank the buyers, they were giving out a set of Comfy’s children’s attire upon purchase.

At the same time, Comfy was also carrying out a similar event. When one purchased more than the required amount, they would be rewarded with any of Petal Talk’s set products.

With this interaction event carried out, the market exploded.

After the event, Lucas started his second move. He became the ambassador of Petal Talk and shot the commercials himself.

As a result, their sales rose, and they sold more than half a million sets, resulting in Petal Talk announcing an increase in production capacity.

Of course, such a terrible rising speed caused other brands to panic.

For several days in a row, many users appeared on the network platform to wantonly guide the attack on Petal Talk. Some even tried to smear the name of the brand, and some took the lead in going against the brand.

Lucas was quick to deal with this matter. He employed a public relation company to explain and even cooperated with the police to investigate.

They noticed the users' IP addresses were mainly registered overseas. They could not find the people behind this even if they investigated.

After brilliantly resolving this crisis, Petal Talk received more buyers and fans of their products.

There were even men who hoped Petal Talk would produce products suitable for men.

In Lawrence Manor's living room, Rosalie praised how well Lucas had been managing Petal Talk, yet Byron did not praise him and only nodded in approval.

'These are normal business strategies. There's nothing to be excited about!'

Rosalie wanted to retort at first upon hearing the man's words. However, she soon realized that the man had been the top businessman and the wealthiest man for years.

What he said was undeniable!

"Surely, Lucas wouldn't dare to say he's good before you, but I'm satisfied with his work. Now, Petal Talk is valued at 70 billion! I don't even know how much money that is!"

Finally, Rosalie could only purse her lips and lament about Byron and his friend, who were like money-making machines.

"In fact, if your drugs were sold at high prices and then listed, the value of your hospital and research institute would be ten times higher than that of Petal Talk!" Byron did not dare to boast before Rosalie.

In terms of commercialization, the value of his wife's research institute and drug company was better than anything else.

In terms of business, it could be a method for her to make as much money as she wanted.

"Really? Well, you know I'm not selling those to make money!" Rosalie said.

Byron nodded, acknowledging his wife's achievements.

They chatted casually until Luther came to report about work. Then, Rosalie left the living room and went to her study to research the new drug.

"President Lawrence, I've been following the whereabouts of Kelly. After tracking her, we found she's still in H Land. A week later, she might attend an event with Mr. Vanderbilt in the country!" Luther lowered his voice and carefully observed Byron's reaction.

Byron's mood sank.

"How dare she come back?! Well, I guess she has someone who can support her. I didn't expect Mr. Vanderbilt to be interested in her!" Byron muttered as he pondered on how to punish Kelly.

Otherwise, she would keep pestering them.

She would be a constant threat to his wife and his children.
