My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1988-Byron turned and went to his three children. He crouched and checked Lucian and Nox's wounds.

"How do you feel? Does it hurt? Tell me what you really feel!" The look in Byron's eyes had turned softer as he rubbed both Lucian and Nox's heads lovingly. He also hugged Estie.

Lucian and Nox gave each other a look and they nodded. "It does hurt a little, Daddy!"

"Good!" A smile appeared on Byron's lips as he asked the second question. "Do you feel angry?"

This time, Nox answered, 'Yes, I am! I feel really angry!'

Lucian nodded as well. This was what they truly felt.

Even Estie pouted and said, "I'm really angry too, Daddy. It's horrible that they bullied my big brothers!"

Byron accepted all his children's answers. He was not in a hurry to comfort them, but instead, his tone turned grave." So, tell me, what should be done to make you feel less angry?"

The three children immediately looked at each other. They were unable to give an immediate answer.

When she saw them that way, Rosalie instantly felt moved by the scene.

She understood what her husband was trying to do by guiding the children this way.

After all, all three children had grown up either missing a father or mother, but they had always been well-protected by her and her husband.

That was why it was always the adults that made the decision whenever they ended up getting hurt. They had never been able to decide how they felt about things.

The other four children and their parents did not dare make a peep. Daniel glared continuously at his son, Zack.

It was finally sinking into him that he would be the one that would end up the worse today.

Lucian's eyes suddenly lit up after a long time and he nodded heavily, "Daddy, I know what I want to do about this!"

Nox followed suit. "I know what to do too. I'm angry as well. Why should we get hurt from them giving us just one push? I want to retaliate!"

Even Estie blinked and said to Rosalie, "Mommy, I really don't like four of them. What I want is to never see them again!"

Byron and Rosalie looked at each other and nodded when they heard their children express their thoughts simply.

Next, Byron turned to look at the parents, who were already filled with fear.

"Listen up. We'll hit back however we were bullied! Your children pushed my two sons. Now, my two sons should do the same and push them back!" He said breezily.

Those parents were immediately relieved. It should not be serious to be punished by children.

However, Rosalie added, "I believe you've heard my daughter's opinion as well. I will submit a complaint wherever I can for all four of your children to leave this school!"

The other parents were stunned to hear that.

Although, at deeper thought, their children had never been able to catch up with the school's standards. As long as this did not implicate their jobs and careers, it was still an acceptable punishment.

Daniel was the only one whose expression changed. He felt that if this issue got widespread to his superiors, he might not be able to retain his management position.

It was all the little brat's fault!

With Byron and Rosalie's encouragement, Zack and the other three children stood in a row. They put on a face that looked indifferent to everything around them.

They did not believe that Lucian and Nox would be strong enough. In fact, Lucian and Nox might not even be able to push them even an inch.

However, as Lucian and Nox increased their running speed, two of the children hit the ground hard. They begin rolling on the ground as they cried out in pain.

Zack and the other remaining child watched with fear as their hearts thumped.

They had no idea that Lucan and Nox had picked up some simple fighting skills from the lead bodyguard.

After the success of their first attack, Lucian and Nox looked at each other and smiled widely. They seemed to have forgotten the pain in their knee wound and began moving backward as they started their second attack.

This time, Lucian aimed at Zack.

He dashed and Lucian shot out like a mini cannonball as he made a direct hit at Zack's back. The momentum was so strong that a soft bam could be heard from it.

Zack immediately fell to the ground face-first. He screamed in pain. By the time he got up, his nostrils began spurting blood.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1989-"It hurts, it hurts..."

Zack wailed. There was pain in Daniel's expression but he did not dare help his son up.

When the other children saw how badly Zack fell, it scared them and they had fear in their eyes when they looked at Lucian and Nox.

Lucian and Nox stared at their hands when they returned to their parent's side. They shook their head slightly with stunned look on their faces.

When Byron saw them acting this way, he immediately crouched and rubbed their heads.

There was a calm look in his eyes as he said, "Remember this, Lucian and Nox, there are many kinds of people in this world. Your kindness must be used on the right people and should not be given to just anybody. When facing unreasonable people, there is no need for you to be reasonable. There is no need for too much mercy!"

Rosalie felt a little moved when she heard this.

These two boys had grown up with her and were both warm and kind. However, they lacked a certain steeliness in their personalities.

If they continued growing up this way, it would be at a disadvantage for them when facing a complicated society.

She supported her husband's way of educating them. After all, her husband was not teaching them to treat violence with violence, but to respect their inner feelings and learn how to retaliate. They should not allow bad people to have their way just because their children were kind and merciful.

Daniel and the other parents did not dare to run to their children and they continued letting them cry.

These children had finally experienced what it was like to be bullied.

In the end, Byron said nonchalantly to them, "You can leave now, but your children better not appear in this school anymore."

His words undoubtedly informed everyone that those children had to leave his school.

It did not matter if they chose to leave the school on their accord or let Byron blow up the issue and reflect the matter with the school board, the result would have ended up the same.

Those parents immediately nodded. ‘Yes, it will definitely be done. My son’s result isn’t great. It would be a waste of money to continue studying at the art school. Thank you for having a big heart, President Lawrence!’

“My son has always been difficult to control. I’ll make sure to educate him properly after he leaves school. Thank you, President Lawrence!”

“I’ll take the children away now, President Lawrence. It was our fault for what happened today...”

The other parents dragged all three children away and ran off as if they just avoided a catastrophe.

Daniel knew that he could not leave now because President Lawrence was still not happy with this.

Byron raised an eyebrow and a smirk appeared on his lips. He looked at Daniel. “Mr. Lundgren, I guess you must hold quite a high post at work. You must have quite a lot of assets that are best left in the dark, am I right? If you don’t mind, can I raise this with anti-corruption agencies in the country?”

Daniel’s face turned pale with fright immediately.

He did not expect Byron to let him off so easily, but he never expected it to be such a vicious retaliation.

However, he did not have it in him to fight back. After gathering his thoughts, he immediately looked agitated and his eyes filled with tears as he began begging furiously.

‘This is my fault, President Lawrence. I’m a terrible person. I’m conceited and arrogant, and I did not educate my son well. I’ll make sure to change. A man like me isn’t fit to be a father. You can punish me however you see fit, but please have mercy on me and let me keep my job!’

Byron immediately frowned and glared coldly at him.

Daniel would never have come to this realization if the person he bumped into was not Byron. He would have allowed his son to continue becoming a tyrant in the future.

Byron ignored him. It was useless even if Daniel knelt in front of him. Byron crouched and picked up Lucian and Nox in his arms as he nodded at his wife.

Rosalie immediately picked up Estie and the whole family walked out of the school gates.

Daniel shouted continuously behind them, "Please show mercy, President Lawrence! President Lawrence..."

They heard Zack getting beaten up in frustration by Daniel after that as Zack screamed and cried.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1990-Their whole family had just arrived at the manor when Luther called to report, "President Lawrence, evidence of Daniel Lundgren's corruption has been gathered and delivered to the relevant departments. It won't be long before he would be fired!"

When dealing with someone like that, there was no point in letting him off because Byron would never want to see his face again.

Byron got off the car after parking the car and carried both sons into the house.

Estie was in Rosalie's arms and when Melody saw this, she mumbled, "You're already such big children and yet you're still in your parent's arms."

Benedict, however, immediately noticed Lucian and Nox's knees were wounded. He immediately went to them and checked their wounds. "What happened? Did you fall?"

"They're fine, Dad. I've helped them clean their wounds. It will heal in two days, minimum!" Rosalie replied and put Estie down.

The little girl immediately went to check the wounds on her two older brothers and noticed something as she said with delight, "Mommy, that medicine works really well. It has already started scabbing!"

Melody realized that their father was carrying them because they were hurt. She quickly went to them to check their wounds as well.

After making sure they were fine, the anxious looks on Benedict and Melody's faces disappeared.

"Lucian, Nox, you were hurt on the knee and the wound might be more difficult to heal. You have to move about less and don't let your wound come in touch with water!" Rosalie reminded them once more and both boys nodded obediently.

Not long after dinner, Andrius suddenly drove to their house with Mary alongside him.

This surprised Byron and Rosalie.

"You... What are you..." Rosalie looked at Andrius, then at Rosalie, and she noticed something.

Both of them were dressed quite impeccably today.

Andrius was in casual wear and looked quite different from his stoic manner. He looked elegant and mature.

As for Mary, she was wearing a dress that accentuated her curves and showcased her charm.

Even Byron could not help praising Andrius. "Just look at the way you're dressed today. You look quite a bit like me when I was younger!"

"..." All three of them looked at each other.

How old did Byron think he was? Why was he speaking like an old man?!

Rosalie's next question immediately got both of them looking embarrassed.

"Were you two on a date today?"

Andrius suddenly panicked. He had just sat down when he stood up again uncomfortably. He snuck a glance at Mary.

Mary acted quite nervous as well, as if a secret of hers just got exposed. Her face turned scarlet immediately and she glared fiercely at Rosalie.

“No, no, we’re not...” Both of them spoke at almost the same time. They were quite quick to deny this.

Byron sighed deep in his heart. Those two were too obvious!

A smile twinkled in Rosalie’s eyes as she watched both of them looking shy and nervous. This was quite fun.

“I was just buying Andrius a meal to thank him for his help at the hospital the last time!” Mary was still busy explaining herself while Andrius remained quiet.

“Buddy, sister-in-law, we came here because we got our hands on a few rare medicinal materials from purchasing supplies in Northwest. Sister-in-law is pregnant now and this will help with her nutrition!”

Andrius explained their trip here and Mary nodded in agreement.

‘This is too kind of you, Andrius. You seem to be going through a big change recently. Did something happen to you?’ Rosalie was curious about this.

Since Andrius returned to his post for the second time, it felt like his actions and mannerism had gone through a series of changes, as if fate had determined for him to enhance himself as a whole.

Byron maintained a calm demeanor but his ears perked up in anticipation of Andrius’ answer.
