My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1991-Andrius pondered, yet he did not know how to respond.

He shook his head and looked at Byron and Rosalie in a puzzle. "Byron, Rosalie, do I look different now? Why don't I see it? At most, I only feel like I've changed my dressing style."

That answer made Rosalie and Byron feel that Andrius might not have changed. He was still as straightforward and as much of a blockhead as before.

Of course, Rosalie noticed her best friend's passionate secret glances at Andrius.

Her eyes were sparkling as though she was looking at her favorite food.

Andrius returned to his car and took the herbs from it.

Byron nodded and smiled in appreciation. "Thank you."

Rosalie saw that those medicinal materials seemed expensive. Some were even so precious that they could not be bought with money.

"These are all suitable for pregnant women. Looks like my bestie must have suggested these?" Rosalie looked at Mary.

Although Andrius might be familiar with the origins and price of the medicinal materials, he might not know their exact usage.

This time, Mary admitted readily. "Yes. Andrius knew those were good tonics but didn't know the usage. Last time, he brought tonics meant for pregnancy for my mom, making my mom urge me to get married and pregnant soon so that I could take those tonics."

Andrius scratched his head and grinned, feeling embarrassed when Mary mentioned it.

At the same time, Mary realized she should not have mentioned that.

Rosalie quipped, "Well, Aunt Wilson is right. You can take them when you get pregnant. Well... Andrius will get you any supplements you need if you get pregnant anyway."

Since the atmosphere between Mary and Andrius was ambiguous, Rosalie might as well help her best friend.

Mary panicked instantly. She quickly glared at her best friend, trying to warn her not to go overboard.

"Of course!" Andrius said suddenly.

Rosalie laughed, and Byron smiled.

Suddenly, Estelle's voice came from upstairs. "Godmother! Godmother, it's nice to see you! Did you just say Mommy is pregnant?"

Lucian and Nox popped their heads out of the swirling staircase and looked at their mommy. "Mommy, are you pregnant? Why didn't you tell us?"

Upon seeing the three little ones chattering merrily and wanting to head downstairs, Byron reminded Lucian and Nox of the wounds on their knees.

Then, their grandfather carried them while Estelle hopped and approached Rosalie.

Rosalie wanted to keep it a secret until the fetus in her womb became stable.

However, she had to tell the kids now. "Yes. You guys will get a younger sibling soon."

"Woah! Really? Mommy, you're amazing!" Estelle cheered and kissed Rosalie's cheek a few times as if trying to encourage Rosalie on her pregnancy.

Lucian and Nox had bright smiles on their faces. They held Rosalie's hands intimately.

"Mommy, you're great!" Lucian praised from his heart.

"Mommy, how many will you give birth to? Can you give birth to two? Will they be a brother or a sister?" Nox pondered about this.

Facing questions like these made Rosalie fluster, and she did not know how to answer them. How many could she give birth to? One was already good enough!

Looking at the little ones expressing their concern only for Rosalie made Byron feel it was unfair.

He was the daddy of the kids and the future baby. Whether it was a son or daughter, he had contributed too. Why did not any one of them praise him?

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1992-“Rosie, I’ve checked with the asylum. Kelly has indeed gone insane! She’s not in a clear state of mind anymore and is always babbling nonsense. Moreover, the doctor there mentioned she sneaked into the drug storeroom and took plenty of drugs. In the end, she was sent to the emergency room and escaped near death.”

Mary told Rosalie about what happened after the pathogen attack.

The mastermind, Kelly, was now loony. Many of the hospital’s medical personnel escaped the life-endangering pathogen attack and won the people’s hearts for being decisive and quick at resolving the matter. Even the higher executives of the Ministry of Health came personally to reward them.

The hospital was also nominated as the best and most authorized hospital by the government. They might even be listed in the official list of insurance-covered hospitals.

Andrius added, “Kelly’s charge has entered the stage of public prosecution. No matter if Kelly is sane or has lost her mind, she’ll be sentenced to at least 15 years in prison.

Chloe also got her sentence reduced because of Kelly!”

Byron and Rosalie looked into each other’s eyes and felt like everything was like a dream.

From now onward, Kelly or Wendy had nothing to do with them anymore.

“Oh, there’s one other thing. Byron, after you bought M Nation’s patent, Mr. Vanderbilt canceled all his scheduled business trips in our nation. Maybe he wanted to monopolize this country’s medicinal materials but failed. Maybe it is also because Kelly has gone insane,” Andrius continued.

Byron frowned and shook his head.

“No, he’s not a person who would change his decision because of Kelly. There’s only one possibility. His plan to develop here stopped abruptly because he’s broke. Think about it. What would you do if you wanted others to believe in the effect of your drug?”

That question shocked Rosalie and Mary.

Andrius’s gaze turned sharp. “I understand now. So, the hospital’s incident was only a test. Mr. Vanderbilt knew Kelly’s plan, yet he let her be!”

Byron nodded.

Andrius admired Byron more now. He had not thought about that possibility. It made him realize how immature he was.

After the four of them discussed, it was already a few minutes past eight. Only then did Andrius leave with Mary.

Rosalie was curious. How long would it take for them to date?

Byron smiled and said calmly, “I’m guessing they might date soon. Andrius is more like a man now.”

Rosalie shook her head, disagreeing.

The two of them bet on it.

If Mary and Andrius became a couple within a week, Byron would win, and he could have the chance to demand Rosalie to do anything he wanted.

“This is a good bet. I have to think about what to make you do. Maybe what you dislike most or what you’re most afraid of?” Byron smirked as though he had won.

Of course, if Rosalie won the bet, she could make Byron do anything she wanted.

However, she was troubled by the bet because winning seemed pointless to her, as her husband would do anything for her even now.

The weather during the night was cold.

Andrius rolled up the window and turned on the heater in the car.

When they left Lawrence Manor, Mary thought Andrius would drive her home immediately.

Unexpectedly, the man suggested that they watch the night sky together tonight as the moon was bright.

She felt it was incredible. Andrius would never say something like this before.

What had changed in him? Did someone change his brain?

Maybe someone transmigrated and replaced his soul? Doubts were running wild in Mary, but she was thrilled.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1993-The Halo Hill Scenic Park was located on a vast land after the highway.

The moon was bright that night, and scarce stars were blinking around it. There were a few groups of people sitting around the park. Some were families with kids, and others were young couples.

That place was a perfect dating spot.

Andrius might have prepared in advance for this moment. He took out a waterproof mat from the car and some snacks. Then, he looked for a space farthest from the crowd and arranged the things he brought in order.

Mary felt it was romantic and said, "It'd be perfect if there was a tent where we could lie down all night to watch the stars."

Unexpectedly, Andrius answered, "I do have a tent, but..."

Mary was flustered, and her cheeks blushed.

Andrius would see her face flushing red if not for the dark environment.

She was not prepared to spend a night in the tent with him yet.

Andrius continued spreading the mat before placing the snacks on the mat. He took the portable kettle from the car. Then, he started arranging everything.

“I notice your taste is becoming more and more like President Lawrence’s.” Mary diverted the topic.

“Is that so? I drank tea before just to taste it. Now, I drink it because I like it. Of course, I’m unlike Byron, who likes to taste different types of tea. I only like one type of tea, which is black tea.”

Andrius’ words were casual, but they sounded philosophical.

Startled, Mary stared at his perfect jawline in a daze. The moon vaguely shone on his face, making him look more charming. Suddenly, Mary’s heart hammered.

All she could think of was how handsome he was at the moment.

He was finally done arranging the things, and he said, “Have a seat. The moon is beautiful tonight, isn’t it?”

“Yes. It’s beautiful.” Mary felt like she was back in her school years. She was excited, shy, and nervous to be with the man she had a crush on.

She could not remember how long it had been since she was able to enjoy nature and the moonlight.

The night breeze and the beautiful moon gradually calmed her down. Mary enjoyed the precious leisure moment.

They drank hot tea, ate snacks, discussed the past, and shared stories.

Although she could not see his expression, he seemed livelier than before.

Mary felt happy for him. It seemed that he had walked out of his misery.

When Andrius handed her the cup of tea, their fingers brushed each other’s. Mary was shy, and her heart thumped.

“Oh, I remember something interesting. When I was in high school, I came to this park with my friends. It was still a small park back then. We buried our wish bottles by a slope.

I wonder if the wish bottles are still there,” Andrius mentioned suddenly.

“Really? I’m curious. What wish did you make back then? Where did you guys bury them? Will we be able to find them now?” Mary was curious, indeed.

“Come on. I’ll take you there to dig them out. Maybe they’re still buried there!” Andrius smiled and stood up as he stretched out his hand to Mary.

She stretched out her hand to hold his.

However, at the same time, he wanted to retract his hand because he felt it was inappropriate to hold her hand.

Fortunately, Mary was quick and placed her hand on his before he could retract.

Andrius was startled but smiled and pulled her up from the ground before leading the way to the wish bottles.

He counted his steps to estimate the distance and finally saw an unnoticeable slope. Then, he cleaned the weeds and dug the soil.

Those wish bottles were buried deep. He had to dig 30 centimeters below before he heard a clanging sound.

“I found them. They’re still here. Let’s make the hole bigger. We buried four because there were four of us,” Andrius said excitedly.

It was like an adventure. Even Mary was a little excited and quickly helped by pulling out the weeds in that area.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1994-They spent plenty of time and effort before finally digging out all four wish bottles in 15 minutes.

All four wish bottles were closed with corks to prevent rainwater from eroding the papers inside.

Someone even suggested putting a drying agent in each bottle. It had preserved the papers well. Not even mold had grown on them.

Holding the four bottles, Andrius smiled. “Let’s go and wash them before taking a look at the papers. More than ten years have passed since then.”

Mary nodded and smiled. She felt as if she had been taken back in time.

They looked for a tap nearby and washed off the mud on the bottles. Then, they walked back to their spot only after wiping the bottles dry.

“Which one of these is yours?” Mary looked at the transparent bottles. The four of them used different colored papers.

There were four colors—purple, blue, pink, and white.

She guessed the white must be Andrius’. According to his past personality, he would choose a simple and pure color.

“Is that pink paper Chloe’s?” She also thought of this possibility.

Andrius smiled and nodded. ‘Yes. It’s Chloe’s. But I just realized we shouldn’t open their secrets without permission. So, let’s keep their bottles for them and pass them on later.’

Mary felt he was right. It was inappropriate to read others’ wish notes without getting their consent.

‘We can open mine. It’s the one with the blue paper!’ Andrius put away the other bottles and took the one with the blue paper.

He seemed to be recalling the past as he muttered, “Back then, Byron and Luther had come with us too. But they both refused to write their wishes. Luther’s is the white one. I think he didn’t write anything. I’m not too sure. We can open it someday when he’s around.”

Blue represented gloom, rationale, and hope.

Mary thought this color suited Andrius’ character back then.

Noticing her anticipation, he opened the bottle and smiled sheepishly. 'To be honest, I've forgotten my wish back then. It's been so long, and my memory has become blurry.'

'That's why we should take a look. I'm curious!' Mary stopped hiding her curiosity and stretched out her hand when she saw Andrius taking out the blue paper.

"Alright. I'll let you take the first look." Andrius handed her the blue paper.

It was a simple blue paper folded into a smaller square. Mary unfolded it carefully and read the words on it with the help of the torch on her phone.

[Mary Wilson, are you willing to be my girlfriend?]

There was a moment of silence.

Mary was in a puzzle after she read it.

She thought she was seeing things and read the line again.

It was not her imagination!

That was what was written on it!

However, it was impossible...

Mary lifted her head in surprise as she looked at Andrius in disbelief. She used the torch on her phone to shine his face.

"Andrius, something must be wrong... This..." She suspected she was out of her mind and was seeing things. However, a smirk appeared on the man's face.

So, he had been putting on an act from the beginning until the end?

Digging the wish bottles and mentioning what had happened years ago...

All of this probably only happened hours ago!

Mary only snapped out of her daze after a long time. Her expression turned from one of shock to surprise.

That man... used this as a surprise confession.

She was overjoyed and could not control the tears in her eyes.

“So, Mary, are you willing to accept my confession? Andrius’ gaze on her was as gentle as the moonlight that night.

Mary nodded her head hard as she answered, “Of course! I’m happy to be your girlfriend.”

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1995-The moonlight was especially beautiful that night!

“Andrius, be honest with me. Are you really Andrius? Did you swap your soul or brain with someone?”

Feeling his grip on her hand, she did not only feel his warmth. She also felt a warm current striking her and making her fluster.

She could not believe Andrius would use such a way to confess to her.

However, in hindsight, she had herself to blame for not having the slightest doubt about him. When they dug the wish bottles, it was obvious that the surrounding soil had been loosened.

That was why Andrius managed to dig a hole so easily.

“No, I’m still me. Maybe the way I express my feelings has become different. Besides, I didn’t lie to you about the wish bottles. I dug them up many days ago, before I went back to work.”

Only Andrius knew about this matter.

One day, he suddenly thought of the wish bottles from more than a decade ago and went to the park to dig them out.

He could not remember what his expectations were for the future.

After a long vacation, he found that he did not like an empty life.

To find an answer, he opened his wish bottle.

On his paper were a few words. [ I hope I'll achieve a career in the future with Byron! I hope that in the future, I can find a woman I love and marry her!]

When Andrius read these two sentences, he could not snap out of his daze.

It turned out that many years ago, his wish was what he had been doing all this while.

It was just that the pressure he faced at home and the struggle in his career over the years gradually made him lose his path.

Slowly, he got tired, and his resistance grew. Finally, it trapped him in depression.

Looking at his wish from more than a decade ago, he thought about it for a day and a night. Finally, he thought everything through.

He would no longer fear and escape. After pondering, he thought of using this method to confess to Mary.

“Andrius, I'm happy to see your change!” Mary moved closer to him and leaned her head on his shoulder.

The two of them enjoyed the night breeze and chatted.

“Chloe will soon be released from prison. Perhaps her wish bottle will give her some inspiration,” Andrius muttered.

They were not young anymore.

“That's right. But what about the purple one?” Mary asked curiously.

“Well, you won't believe this. I don't know who wrote it. I only remember Byron bringing it, and the note was written by a girl.” If it were before, Andrius would keep that a secret from Mary.

But now, it did not matter anymore. After all, Byron and Rosalie were having their fourth kid.

However, Mary still reacted exaggeratedly. She felt it was unfair to her best friend. "So, this wish bottle belongs to another woman? A woman who has something to do with Byron? No! I have to tell Rosie about it!"

Andrius furrowed his eyebrows, looking troubled. Did he end up snitching?

However, Mary was now his girlfriend. He had to listen to her.

After thinking about it, he was also curious. Who was the woman who asked Byron to bury her wish bottle for her instead of doing it herself?

"Come on, let's go! I want to gossip for once!" Andrius immediately decided to 'betray' Byron for once.
