My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 2062-Suffered So Much

Rosalie's mood calmed down a little.

Byron deeply considered Detective Carter's input, so he asked for some details about his mother-in-law before her death.

Rosalie tried her best to recall.

At that time, she was too young as she was just around five to six years old. Her memory was vague.

She only remembered that her mother had been ill for a long time. However, every time she came home from kindergarten, her mother would smile sweetly and cook all kinds of delicious food for her.

Her mother adored flowers and had a lot of potted plants, so many flower pots filled the entire yard.

As a result, Rosalie felt that her childhood was accompanied by the fragrance of flowers all year round.

At that time, Gordon had just started his business and built a small factory. He often went outstation, and when he came back, he always brought back many small souvenirs and snacks from various places for Rosalie.

He would also buy her mom a lot of gifts. Each time, it would be either clothes or jewelry.

Her parents were very loving, and Rosalie was blissfully happy.

No one expected that her parents would start to quarrel frequently.

Things only got worse from there. Her mother's sadness and anger did not work on Gordon. He would smash things, then turn around and leave.

He would always leave a mess everywhere.

In such a situation, the young Rosalie could only hide in the room while trembling.

She was worried that Gordon would beat her mother. Fortunately, that did not happen.

She was unsure what agreement was reached between her parents, but suddenly, there was no more quarreling.

Her mother started to get a little busy, going out almost every two or three days. Rosalie could only wait at home alone.

Although things at home had quieted down, she felt that her mother stopped smiling so often. The sadness in her eyes was always endless.

Sometimes while holding Rosalie, she would silently shed tears.

From then on, her mother's health began to show symptoms.

It seemed that the symptoms of mercury poisoning had started to show.

Rosalie was heartbroken when she saw her mother sick.

Perhaps, that was the time that Rosalie began to take an interest in studying medicine.

That year, her mother's illness developed rapidly. In the end, it became difficult for her to get out of bed.

Many house chores fell on the weak little Rosalie.

Her father rarely appeared again. She took care of her mother while she went to school, trying not to worry her.

Her mother became more and more emotional, crying uncontrollably every day. Rosalie did not understand at the time, so she only knew to hug her mother tightly and share the pain with her.

When Gordon reappeared, he brought Violet with him.

They also brought Ethan and Sophie along.

Suddenly, Rosalie had a younger brother and a younger sister.

This time, her mother was completely shocked and angry.

Both of them had a big fight.

During the quarrel, Rosalie heard the word 'divorce.' However, her mother desperately refused. She was scolded by Violet, and many obscenities were hurled at her.

Before, Gordon would give her mother and Rosalie some money. Suddenly, he stopped doing that too.

Her mother could only sell all the valuable things in their home in order to let Rosalie continue her studies and live a normal life.

She never expected this illness to last for three years, and it tortured her mother for three whole years.

In the end, her mother passed away. Gordon appeared and forcibly took Rosalie away to a strange villa.

Less than a year after her mother's passing, Gordon and Violet held a wedding. They dared not have a big banquet and just invited some close friends to act as witnesses.

Her memories ended here...

Rosalie was deeply trapped in grief and unable to extricate herself.

"Honey, honey..."

Byron called out several times before she slowly recovered.

Immediately afterward, her tears were about to fall again." Darling, my mother suffered so much in her life! If I don't avenge her, I'm unworthy of being her daughter!"
