My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 2067-Mary could not accept such a hefty gift.

This was too much!

Rosalie smiled casually. "Hurry up and sign it. Don't worry, I've advanced the commencement date, which is before your registration of marriage with Andrius. So, this is considered your pre-marital assets. In this way, you can join the Quirke family with your head held high, okay?"

This was because Rosalie once had the same state of mind.

Back then, when she married Byron for the first time, she often felt lowly and insignificant.

Therefore, she gave her best friend these shares in order to relieve that pressure when facing her future in-laws.

Furthermore, Mary was an important member of Petal Talk Group. The hospital she was in charge of was actually the hardest job.

After some back and forth, Mary finally agreed and signed the agreement.

When Camelia came in, she was in shock to hear her daughter mention the five-billion-dollar gift.

She waved her hands quickly. No way, absolutely not. Rosalie, we both owe you enough."

Rosalie did not bother to explain anymore. She asked Aunt Wilson not to meddle in their business as this was Petal Talk Group's internal matter.

Camelia had no choice but to keep her mouth shut.

There was deep gratitude in her eyes as she looked at Rosalie.

In Quirke Mansion, the mighty convoy of luxury cars set off at dawn.

In the limited edition Rolls-Royce in front, Byron was the driver. It was the first time in Byron's life that he took on this role for a wedding. Andrius sat beside him, and behind him were Xavier and Clara, Andrius' parents.

The second car contained Lucas and Chloe, as well as Lucas' father, Jonah Montgomery, and Chloe's father, Everett Lincoln.

The two elders chatted for a while, but Lucas and Chloe were quiet.

Somehow, the topic turned toward them.

"Byron married early, and even Andrius is married now. It's just our children left. We're late to the party!" Jonah said to Everett with a laugh.

"That's right. You two should work harder. You're not getting any younger!" Everett muttered to the two young people.

Lucas smiled. "Uncle Everett, I'm not in a hurry. I'm at my most carefree state right now, and I have to enjoy this wonderful world."

This statement made Jonah roll his eyes.

Chloe also retorted, "Dad, can't you see? Byron and Andrius are both successful in their careers, while Sister Rosalie and Miss Wilson are also careerwomen. I must work hard to have a good career too! Marriage is the last thing on my mind."

Everett could only shake his head with a helpless expression.

Their families were well-to-do, but their children did not want the easy way out.

"I dare say, in another two years, if the both of you can't find a partner, you might as well get together!" Jonah was purely joking when he said this.

On the contrary, Everett was stunned for a moment.

Suddenly, he smiled slightly and responded, "Hey, you don't say! This sounds like a fine idea. Our families are close, and Lucas and Chloe grew up together. This might work!"

Lucas immediately protested strongly. “Dad, Uncle Everett, don’t play matchmakers. I can tell you, I’m not Chloe’s type of guy. Coincidentally, Chloe isn’t really my type either!”

With that, he turned his head sideways and smiled goofily at Chloe.

In the past, Chloe would definitely have complained immediately, jabbed at Lucas, and then added, ‘Yeah, I don’t like you either.’

However, Chloe just smiled slightly this time. She did not retort immediately.

“Lucas, focus on the road!” She tried to change the subject to cover up her emotions.
