

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 467

Andrius saw through his buddy's thoughts and wanted to persuade him again, but the man had already issued an eviction order.

'I have a meeting in a while. If there's anything else, let's talk about it another day.'

Hearing this, Andrius had to get up and leave sheepishly.

After Andrius came out of the office, he was full of remorse when he recalled his analysis just now.

'If I knew that the gap between these two people was so deep, I would have reworded what I said!'

'It's better now, not only is Rosalie unresponsive, but Byron also decides to give up on his pursuit as well.'

'The two adults can do whatever they want. I just pity Estie. The Auntie she likes so much happens to be her biological mother.'

The little girl must have always thought that Rosalie would become her mother.

Unexpectedly, her Daddy would give up like this.

With all these twists and turns, no child can stand it...

Anything he could think of would have crossed Byron's mind as well.

At noon that day, Byron appeared at the kindergarten gate.

When Miss Leigh Ann received his call, she immediately sent Estie to the entrance of the kindergarten.

"President Lawrence, you..."

She wanted to ask the reason why Byron suddenly took the little girl away.

But when she saw Byron's cold face, she swallowed her question and said, "I have approved Estie's leave of absence."

Byron nodded and reached out to his daughter.

The little girl was a little reluctant and acted coquettishly to her Daddy. "Daddy, do we have to go back now? Can you wait until after school at night?"

She wanted to speak to her little brothers!

Byron nodded expressionlessly. "Come here."

The little girl had to obediently walk out of the school gate. Before leaving, she did not forget to remind her teacher. "Miss Leigh Ann, please help me tell the little brothers!"

Miss Leigh Ann smiled and agreed.

On the side, Byron heard his daughter's concern for the two little boys, and his eyes were imperceptibly dark.

"Daddy, do we have anything to do when we go back?" The little girl followed Byron for a distance and looked at his Daddy puzzled.

Byron stopped suddenly and lowered his eyes to meet the little girl's gaze. 'Daddy wants to transfer you from this school.'

Hearing this, the little girl was stunned.

'Transfer? So I'm going to change schools? I can't play with the little brothers anymore?'

Realizing this, the little girl refused without hesitation. "No! I don't want to transfer schools!"

She did not even want to come to kindergarten before, it was only because of her little brothers that she felt that going to school made her happy.

Now if she was asked to change schools, the little girl would rather not go to school!

Byron was unmoved. "Then study at home. Daddy will hire you the best tutor."

Then he took the little girl to the principal's office.

"I don't want!" Estie clutched at the hem of her father's clothes tightly and completely refused to transfer to another school.

'If I change schools, it is very likely that I will never see Auntie and little brothers again in the future!'

Thinking like this, the little girl's voice gradually broke. "Daddy, you are having problems with Auntie, why should I transfer schools? Estie didn't even see Auntie at all!"

The little girl's words seemed to add fuel to the fire.

Hearing her mention the woman, Byron's face instantly sank to the bottom.

"Estie don't want to transfer schools! I don't want!" Her little face was now full of tears.

Byron could not be ruthless upon seeing the little girl like this, so he could only pat her head gently to soothe her. "Alright, let's go back and talk about it."

After that, he carried the little girl and got into the car.
