Chapter 851 Two Unborn Babies

Watching Anthony's expression as he strategized, Thalia couldn't help but furrow her brows.

He looked strikingly similar to Kenneth, as if they were the epitome of resemblance.

As Thalia watched him, she furrowed her eyebrows unhappily as if somewhat displeased.

Anthony noticed her expression and raised his eyebrows slightly. "What does that look of yours mean?"

Thalia wasn't afraid of offending him and spoke bluntly, "Tell me. You're a nice kid, but why did you have to resemble Kenneth of all people? You're so annoying!"

Anthony asked, "How does that me make me annoying?"

"Don't you think so? You're so irritating!" Thalia exclaimed.

As for the grudge between Thalia and Kenneth, Anthony didn't say much about it. It wasn't the first time they couldn't get along well, so it was normal for them to dislike each other.

Anthony narrowed his eyes, casting her a languid gaze. "So, who do you think I should resemble?"

"Of course it's Nat. People always say, daughters take after their fathers, and sons take after their mothers. Somehow, you're an exception. How come you didn't take after even a tiny fraction of Nat's beauty and temperament?" Thalia couldn't help but say.

Upon hearing this, Anthony looked at Thalia and asked, "How am I not like her? Didn't I take her skill?"

After hearing that, Thalia exclaimed, "If you could just swap them, you wouldn't be so annoying to me!"

Anthony replied, "If I take after Daddy's skills and personality, there's a high chance that we wouldn't be friends when we met, but enemies instead!"

"Why?"

"Because I would drive you crazy."

"You're doing that now," Thalia said.

Upon hearing that, Anthony slightly raised his eyebrows. "Well, that's not my problem then."

"Do you mean it's my problem?"

"I didn't say that, though."

"Isn't that what you mean?"

As the two people were engaged in a heated argument, they suddenly heard a shout.

"If they could be born, they would probably be as beautiful as you," Lina said.

Denise regained her senses and looked up at Lina, who had a gentle and longing expression at that moment.

The sorrow in Denise's eyes disappeared as she looked at Lina, saying, "You're so beautiful. They must be very beautiful too."

Lina listened with a faint smile, but she couldn't hide the sadness in her eyes. "Back then, I used to wonder if they would be beautiful, but now, I just wish they are still here. It doesn't matter how they look. I'll love them regardless."

Upon hearing this, Denise was deeply moved.

A moment later, she asked, "Have you ever heard of a story?"

"What story?" Lina asked, looking at her.

"In our hometown, there's a legend that says every child is an angel. When they choose their mothers, they search from atop the clouds. Once they've chosen you, they'll reincarnate as your child and wait to be born. However, if something unexpected happens and they can't make it, they'll return to the heavens and wait for a new opportunity."

Lina listened, her eyes sparkling with excitement. "Is that true?"

Denise nodded. "That's what everyone says back home, so I think they must still be waiting for you. You have to get better soon, or they'll worry about you. If they know your body can't handle it, they won't dare to come looking for you."

Lina listened and nodded. "I got it."

Denise looked at her, smiled, picked up the peeled orange and handed a few pieces. "Have some of it."

Lina looked at her, gently taking it from her hands. "Thank you."

Benjamin and Denise did not stay long at Lina's place.

After Magus' appearance, Denise spoke a few words and excused himself.

In the hallway, Denise and Benjamin walked together when Magus followed them out and said, "Wait a moment."

Upon hearing the voice, Benjamin and Denise turned around and saw Magus walking straight toward them. Benjamin immediately stepped in front of Denise and asked, "Is there anything else?"

Magus watched with a hint of complexity flashing through his eyes as he noticed the subconscious action.

After sizing them up, Magus spoke, "I came out to tell you not to come looking for her again. No matter what methods you use, I won't join you."

Benjamin chuckled lightly. "You're really overthinking it. If we really wanted to persuade you with this, we would have tried to convince Lina when you weren't here earlier and have her be the one to persuade you. Wouldn't that be better?" Benjamin asked, but his expression then turned serious. "You were thinking too much. We didn't come here for you."

Magus looked at him with a mix of doubt and belief.

Just then, Denise came out and looked at him. "Magus, do you know what illness Lina has?"

Hearing this, Magus's eyebrows furrowed. "What do you mean?"

"Thalia's boyfriend is an incredibly talented doctor known as the "Miracle Healer" in the medical field. Many people want his help with their illnesses, but he's not that easy to hire. Yesterday, Thalia visited the doctor to ask about Lina's condition and sent the information to her boyfriend. Lina originally wanted her boyfriend to come and help, but our problems were unfortunately too distressful, and he couldn't make it here. However, he clearly stated during the phone call that Lina's illness is not a common one. It's a kind of depression that has already taken root in her heart," Denise explained.

Regarding depression, there happened to be an actor playing a character with depression in the previous film Denise was in. When Denise watched the scenes on set, she often found herself moved to tears. As a result, she gained some understanding of the illness.

Sometimes the person may seem fine, but their life could be at stake at any moment.

Standing opposite, Magus narrowed his eyes slightly upon hearing her words. After a moment, he asked, "What exactly are you trying to say?"

"What I mean is, you've spent so much money on her treatment and accompanied her throughout, so she should have improved. Do you know why her condition has actually worsened instead of getting better?"

"Why?" Magus asked as she seemed to stir his emotions.

"Because the money you earn doesn't give her a sense of security. She's constantly on edge, fearing that something might happen to you while helping her with her medical treatment. She can't accept this reality. As a result, it only adds to her burden."

Miguel slept soundly as he snored away.

"It's been a while. I hope nothing has happened. I'm going in to take a look." Thalia's gaze kept darting outside, but she could not see Benjamin and Denise anywhere. She lifted her wrist to check the time and could not help but worry. She opened the door and headed out.

Meanwhile, Anthony was looking at his phone when he heard the sound of the door opening and said, "No need. They're already out."

Thalia's eyes swept across the area, and she saw Benjamin and Denise coming out from inside. Only when she saw them did she finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Opening the car door, the two of them got in.

Seeing this, Anthony tidied up the seats.

Thalia looked back at them and said, "If you hadn't come out, I would've gone inside to look for you."

After sitting down, Denise slumped against the backseat, looking quite exhausted.

"What's wrong?" Thalia asked.

"Let Ben explain," Denise said lazily. After talking so much with Magus, she felt she had used up all her energy.

Benjamin turned to look at Denise, knowing that she was always lazy, and did not refuse. He looked at Thalia and said, "We encountered some minor problems later on."

"What did you guys talk to Magus about in the corridor?" Anthony asked directly.

Benjamin looked at him and understood Anthony had hacked into the hospital's surveillance system.

"Magus is here?" Thalia asked.

Benjamin nodded. "Yeah. We were just talking with Lina when Magus went in, and he almost kicked us out!"

"How dare he!" Upon hearing this, Thalia frowned and exclaimed. Then, she turned her head to look at Anthony and asked, "How did you know Magus was here?"

"What else do you think I'm looking at on my phone?" Anthony retorted.

Thalia responded, "Why didn't you tell me if you already know?"

“Err, I was so focused on watching that I forgot.”

Thalia scolded, “You clearly did it on purpose!”

Chapter 855 The Last Thing He Wants

Upon hearing Denise's words, Benjamin's gaze shifted to Anthony's phone. He took the phone from his hand and began to examine the person on the screen. When he saw that face, Benjamin's eyes narrowed slightly.

A memory of when he was at the hospital came to mind. He recalled how Denise looked when she looked up and apologized to that person and how their eyes were filled with complex emotions when they smiled at Denise. Benjamin had felt a sense of disgust at that moment, which was probably also what made the impression of that person even more profound. "I think it's him!"

"Right, it's him..." Denise nodded fervently and said with great certainty.

She felt a sense of familiarity after seeing the photo. However, Denise was too stunned to react, having seen him so suddenly.

Anthony listened to their conversation, his expression turning serious. He looked at them and asked with great uncertainty, "Are you saying you met this person at the hospital just now?"

Benjamin nodded earnestly. "That's right. He almost bumped into Denise in the hospital corridor. Although there's some age difference, his face is still very easy to recognize!" he said.

Benjamin did not look at the photo when it was sent to them the previous day, so he had no idea what Denise meant when she said he looked familiar. However, not that he had seen the photo, he could still recognize the person, even though he had aged a little compared to the photo.

Upon hearing this, Anthony murmured, "It's been a few years since Magus was betrayed, so it's only natural he's aged a bit..." As he spoke, he suddenly thought of something and looked ahead. "Thalia."

Before he could finish speaking, Thalia suddenly turned the steering wheel and made an emergency U-turn.

Miguel was sleeping at that moment, so when they made such an abrupt turn, he had almost slammed into the door.

He opened his eyes and looked absolutely bewildered. Miguel glanced outside and then at Thalia in the passenger seat, asking, "W-What's going on?"

"Sit tight and shut up," Thalia said, taking another sharp turn and then speeding back the way they came.

Perhaps it was because of the tacit understanding between them, but Thalia immediately knew what Anthony wanted to say as soon as he spoke since they had spent so much time together.

Right then, Benjamin finally realized what they were thinking. He looked right at Anthony and asked, "Tony, what do you plan to do?"

"Shouldn't we ask Thalia?" Anthony answered, directing the question to Thalia.

After all, she was the real executor of their plan, so naturally, they would have to depend on her for this.

However, as Thalia drove, her eyes fixed on the road ahead, a gleam flashed across her eyes. After a while, a cold smile tugged at her lips as she said, "I haven't decided what to do yet, but it will definitely be the last thing he wants!"

Anthony listened and nodded with great satisfaction.

Thalia had almost turned the hospital upside down when she suddenly saw a figure sitting on the ground not far away.
She slowed down her pace at the sight of him. After hesitating for a moment, she finally walked toward him.
Magus was sitting on the ground with his head down. It looked like he had taken a huge blow. The malicious aura he had when he first saw them was gone, as was the unruly arrogance that made him seem invincible.
Walking up to him, Thalia asked, "Why are you hiding here all by yourself?"
Magus was slightly stunned, but he didn't raise his head.
"I'm talking to you!" Thalia gently nudged him with her foot.
However, he still hung his head and looked defeated.

Seeing that he wasn't speaking, the woman took a deep breath and walked up to him. "I'm talking to you—"

However, before she could finish speaking, Thalia suddenly saw the injuries on his face and shuddered.

"What happened to your face?" she asked. She was about to reach out to take a look, but Magus immediately turned his face away.

Damn!

Thalia had such a fiery temper.

She instantly grabbed his collar. "Did he cause this injury? You saw him, didn't you?"

Magus slowly raised his eyes, looking straight at Thalia, and spoke with a frivolous and mocking tone, "So what if I did?"

Chapter 857 Arrogance

Anthony understood his pain.

He had been searching for his enemy for so many years. Now that they had reappeared before him again, how could he possibly give up so easily?

Similarly, Anthony understood his current situation. It was because of Lina that he didn't dare to risk everything. Only by entrusting her to someone safe could he act without any worries.

Knowing his plan, Anthony narrowed his eyes slightly. "Magus, have you made up your mind? Do you want revenge and give up on Lina?"

Magus was slightly taken aback. "I'm not trying to give up on her..."

"How is it not? Isn't your current plan to abandon her for the sake of revenge?" Anthony asked, staring straight into his eyes.

Magus clenched his fists tightly. His eyes filled with hatred as he thought about the words that person had said to him. "So am I supposed to just do nothing and give up? He killed my child and caused Lina to become like this. I must kill him with my own hands, or else I won't be able to face my child, Lina, or even myself!" Magus said angrily.

Listening to him, Anthony remained calm and composed. "You know what I'd do if this were to happen to me?"

Magus narrowed his eyes.

The boy squatted in front of him, his gaze on him. "I guess in everyone's eyes, the only thing that could satisfy them is killing their enemy with their own hands. They're willing to give up everything for it. However, this will only lead to them losing everything they have."

"What exactly are you trying to say?" Magus asked.

"If it were me, I would definitely kill him, but at the same time, I would also make sure to protect everything I have!" Anthony replied, emphasizing each word as he looked at him.

Upon hearing this, Magus' lips curled into a mocking smile. "In this world, not everything can go as you wish. Also, not everyone is like you, born with everything they could ever want."

Anthony's eyes narrowed slightly, "Who told you I was born with everything? What I have now is the result of my own efforts. I've made wrong choices too, but I always regain my senses in time and correct them. I won't let myself pay the price for a lifetime because of one wrong choice. It's precisely because I understand this that I have what I have now."

In the next moment, Magus stood up, ready to leave.

Upon seeing the situation, Denise immediately spoke up. "Magus, if Lina didn't tell you, it means she doesn't want you to know. If I were you, I would definitely pretend not to know at this moment."

Magus turned to look at her, his eyes turning a deep shade of crimson.

The thought of that person crossed his mind, and he slammed his fist heavily into the tree. "I should have killed him right then and there!"

Denise looked at him. "Magus, you are the one who created this situation, so you deserve the pain you're enduring now. However, there's one thing Tony is absolutely right about. It is that whether or not you can climb out of this hole depends on you. It's up to you to decide if your life is over like this or if you can find a new way to live."

These children were there to lecture him.

Magus turned his head to look at Denise. "All this talk, you just want me to join you, don't you?"

"That's right. I won't deny it. However, this is a mutual choice. Right now, Tony needs you, and you need him too. Isn't this kind of relationship the most long-lasting? I admit that we have our own motives. In Tony's words, we may not be good people, but we do have our boundaries. You can be sure that what you're worried about will never happen!"

Magus gazed deeply at her.

Has it been so long since I last spoke that I can't even out-talk a child?

He wanted to counter her arguments, but her words were flawless, leaving him unable to find even the slightest issue to challenge.

Denise took a deep breath. "I've said what I've wanted to say. I just want to clarify that I didn't mention all this to help Tony invite you to join us. I just truly feel sorry for Lina. She should have been a happy mother just like my mom..." At this point, Denise heaved and continued, "Never mind. You probably won't believe me anyway. Let's just leave it at that."

After she spoke, without waiting for Magus to say anything else, Denise turned around and left.

Miguel stood at the side, saw Denise leaving, and immediately followed.

On the other hand, Magus stood still, watching Denise's retreating figure. Those once resolute eyes seemed to waver slightly at that moment.

In the car, Anthony was engrossed in his phone. The car door opened, and Denise and Miguel took their seats.

Seeing them return, Thalia turned around and looked at Denise. "What did you say to him?"

Denise thought for a moment and replied, "I just mentioned some things that would agitate him even more."

"Some things that would agitate him?" Thalia squinted her eyes.

"It's about his child," Anthony said without lifting his head.

When she heard that, Thalia looked at Denise, seemingly seeking confirmation.

Denise nodded.

Thalia asked, "Aren't you afraid he'll go crazy?"

"Of course. However, if he wasn't crazy, how could he have gone to find that person, and how could you guys have followed and found him?" said Denise.

Speaking of this, Thalia was astonished.

"We've known each other for so long. How come I never realized you are so thoughtful?" Thalia asked.

"I've been hiding it too well!" Denise answered.

Thalia was speechless.

At that moment, they looked at Anthony and asked, "Are we really doing this?"

After pondering for a moment, Anthony put away his phone and looked at them. "That person suddenly appeared. There must be something he needs from him. Since Magus didn't choose to take action today, he must have his own plans."

With that, Anthony looked at Thalia and added, "Tonight, Magus will definitely go to meet that person."

Thalia squinted her eyes and nodded thoughtfully. "That makes sense..."

Raising her eyes, she glanced at Anthony and asked, "Do you think the chances of making a move tonight are high?"

"I'm not quite sure... It depends on whether Magus can handle the shock Denise gave him today," Anthony said.

Upon hearing this, Denise furrowed her brows and asked, "What if he can't bear it?"

"There will surely be a tragedy tonight."

Denise thought for a moment. "After I spoke earlier, Magus was about to go find Lina. However, after I said a few more words, he held back. I think he still has some rationality left in him."

"I hope so," Anthony said.

Hearing their conversation, Thalia voiced her decision. "In that case, I'll go with him alone tonight, and we'll see how it goes."

"I'll go with you!" Anthony said.

"Don't go. If something really happens, I'll have to look out for you and won't be able to act freely."

Anthony thought for a moment and decided not to make things more complicated. "All right, then. Don't be impulsive. Contact me anytime if there's anything."

Thalia nodded.

At that moment, she turned her head to look at Miguel, who was beside her. "Take them back. Remember, don't fall asleep."

Miguel immediately nodded after he heard her. "I understand."

After saying that, Thalia directly pushed open the car door and jumped out. Looking at the people inside the car, she said, "I'm going."

"Be careful," Anthony suddenly said.

Chapter 859 Rich And Powerful

In the evening, Anthony and a few others gathered together to have a meal.

Denise kept glancing at the door, eagerly waiting for a familiar figure to return. As Anthony ate, he spoke without looking up. "Stop looking. She won't be back anytime soon!"

Denise looked away and glanced at her wristwatch. "It's almost twelve o'clock!"

"As the night grows darker, people become more restless, making it easier to accomplish tasks!" Anthony raised his eyes and fixedly looked at her as he spoke.

Denise pouted. Even though she was reluctant to admit it, it seemed that this was how it was always portrayed in movies.

Miguel was eating absentmindedly when suddenly, his phone rang. He casually picked it up, but the moment he saw the message on the screen, his eyes widened in surprise.

"Master, someone has unveiled the list!" Miguel suddenly exclaimed excitedly.

Anthony raised his eyes and looked at him after he heard that remark. "Let me take a look."

Miguel immediately handed over the phone.

Anthony picked up the phone and glanced at it. Then, he turned to the person beside him and said, "Pass me the laptop, please."

Miguel immediately handed him the laptop as soon as Anthony finished saying his request.

Anthony swiftly turned on the laptop, and just as he was about to enter his account information, Miguel approached him. However, Anthony's hands quickly typed in the account and password and successfully logged in.

Miguel was confused.

What's going on?

He looked utterly baffled. "Master, how... How did you know my password?"

Anthony's hands were effortlessly and swiftly typing on the laptop. Without lifting his head, he responded, "I accidentally saw it when you were inputting it yesterday."

Miguel looked puzzled. "I typed so fast, yet you were able to see it?"

Anthony, however, was clearly unfazed. He said, "I'm sorry. Next time, I'll try to pretend I didn't see it."

Miguel was speechless.

He didn't hear much sincerity in the apology. Instead, he felt it was quite arrogant.

Oh, a god is indeed a god. He's unparalleled.

As he was thinking, Anthony had already clicked on the bounty list. He directly transferred the money to the other party's account, and soon after, he received that person's personal information.

After clicking it open, both Benjamin and Denise gathered around. When Miguel snapped out of his thoughts, he also joined them.

"Stop pushing," Denise muttered.

Even so, Miguel still squeezed over. Seeing this, Benjamin furrowed his brows and said, "Don't push."

Miguel frowned. Seeing everyone's heads pressed closely together, he found a larger gap and squeezed in.

At that moment, the laptop screen displayed only a simple name. Miguel looked at it and murmured, "Lindon, a Jeradusan."

Upon further inspection, there was nothing else. Miguel asked, "Is that all? Just a name and a country?"

"It's already quite challenging to find the name and country," said Anthony, closing the interface. He then began searching for Lindon's information.

"Well, that's a waste of money!" Miguel said.

Upon hearing this, Denise responded, "What's the matter? Do you want a personal introduction to be made for you or something?"

"In that case, at least the money spent is worth it!"

Denise looked speechless. "Miguel, you're a hacker, after all. Can you not act like you've never seen the world before?"

"Can't you see I just feel sorry for Master?" Miguel retorted.

"There's no need to feel sorry for him. Tony has plenty of money."

Miguel was at a loss for words.

As Miguel looked at the extravagant demeanor of the family, he really didn't know what to say.

Why is there such a huge difference in fate between people? We're all hackers, but I'm not as skilled as the others, nor do I have a background as impressive as theirs. My only advantage is my youth, but this only makes me appear weaker in comparison...

He took a deep breath.

He told himself to stay calm and composed. In the next life, all he needed was to be reborn into a better family.

With this in mind, he gradually calmed his inner turmoil.

When he looked back at the laptop, he suddenly froze, his eyes seemingly drawn to something.

In the next moment, he yanked Denise away from in front of him and pulled her to the side. Then, he plopped down and stared intently at the screen.

Denise's eyebrows furrowed as she looked at him. "You..."

However, Miguel was completely captivated by the screen. "Master, what is this?"

"What's wrong?" Anthony asked.

Miguel asked again, "What is this? What are you doing?"

"Infiltrating the government system of Jeradus."

With an incredulous expression, Miguel asked, "You... You mean to say you want to hack it?"

"Is there a problem with that?" Anthony asked, swiftly looking at the laptop and continuing his operation.

Miguel looked at him. "No. I just think it's simply unbelievable!"

"Why not just take a good look instead of wasting time," Anthony remarked.

Chapter 860 The Dead

Sometimes, one couldn't help but admire the young girl's way of thinking.

A casual remark could sometimes reveal the truth.

Anthony nodded in agreement. "Makes sense."

At that moment, Denise said, "Anyway, we already know this person's name and where he's from. Now, the most important thing is to see if we can find any of his weaknesses. If we can, that would be great. If not, we'll have to wait and see what news Thalia brings back."

Listening to Denise's words, Miguel nodded. "That's right."

Anthony averted his gaze and continued to look at the laptop. To achieve victory in every battle, one must know both themselves and the enemy.

Miguel watched while Anthony was searching. Meanwhile, Denise and Benjamin started eating again.

Time passed by, and soon, it was already one o'clock. Denise was dozing off on the table, feeling tired. Just then, there was a sudden commotion outside.

The door was pushed open, and Denise jolted awake.

Seeing the person at the door, Denise immediately perked up. "Thalia, you're back?"

Thalia looked at them and asked, "Why? Haven't you all slept yet?"

Denise immediately walked over to her and held her hands. "How could we sleep when you're not back yet!" She then looked at Thalia and asked, "How are you? You're not injured, right?"

Thalia laughed. "Of course not."

At that moment, Anthony looked at her and asked, "So, did you find any useful information?"

Thalia walked over to the table and saw a cup of coffee. "Whose is this?"

"I prepared it for you," Denise immediately said.

Thalia didn't try to be courteous. She opened the drink and took a sip right away. After sitting down, she looked at them and said, "As you expected, Magus did indeed meet with that person today."

"So, what happened next?"

"That person must have sought out Magus for some task. The distance was too great for me to hear their conversation clearly. However, based on my guess, that person must have taken on a business deal and now needs someone to join him, which is why he went looking for Magus."

After learning about the situation, Miguel couldn't contain his curiosity and blurted out, "Where does this guy get his confidence from? Isn't he afraid that Magus will kill him?"

Thalia heard this and said, "Shamelessness makes one invincible, but I think he must have something up his sleeve. Otherwise, he wouldn't dare to approach so boldly."

Listening to Thalia's words, Anthony nodded. "Your analysis should be correct."

"Seriously, if it wasn't for that person having some sort of leverage, I would have gone straight over there tonight and killed him," Thalia said.

Anthony listened, his pair of black eyes seemingly planning something.

"So, what do we do next?" Thalia asked.

"I haven't decided yet," Anthony said.

"Did you really tell Magus that we're leaving tomorrow afternoon, or were you just kidding?" Thalia asked.

"Of course, it's true!"

"Then, how about that person?" Thalia asked.

Anthony looked at her. "Shouldn't I be asking you that? It depends on what you want to do."

Upon hearing this, Thalia's eyebrows slightly raised. "So, you mean I can do whatever I want with him?"

"Of course!"

"Why didn't you say so earlier? I could have taken care of him tonight," Thalia said.

"But if you take action, it won't be as satisfying as letting Magus do it," Anthony reminded.

"What do you mean?"

"It's exactly as you understand it." Anthony nodded in agreement.

Thalia thought of Magus' words. He had said that there would be no satisfaction if he didn't do it himself.

Indeed, it would be better for him to make a move.

"What about the thing he has in his hands?" Thalia asked.

"If he is dead, what can possibly be leaked? And even if there is something, don't you still have me?" Anthony said.

Upon hearing this, Thalia immediately gained complete confidence. "You're right. That makes sense. In that case, I'll go tomorrow morning and directly kidnap the person for Magus!" The more she thought about it, the more feasible it seemed. She added, "That's the plan, then."

"Even though Lindon grew up on the streets, there's a ten-year gap in his records that none of us know what happened during that time. So, when you take action, be cautious," Anthony said.

"Lindon?" Thalia frowned.

"It's him," Anthony said.

After hearing this, Thalia nodded and asked, "How did you know his name?"

At that moment, Denise, who was standing nearby, spoke up. "Before you came back, Tony had already found out that person's identity and information."

Upon hearing this, Thalia nodded. "I see." Then, as if recalling something, she looked at Anthony and added, "What exactly is your plan? You haven't said anything. Aren't you afraid I'll ruin it?"

However, Anthony said with a smile, "The plan is to have no plan. Just follow our hearts. No matter how the process goes, the outcome won't change."

"No. Why do you mean by that?"

Anthony closed the laptop immediately, then let out a yawn. "All right, it's getting late. Since you're back, I'll go to my room and rest. Be careful tomorrow." With that said, he picked up the laptop and headed straight to his room.

Seeing that everyone had left the room, Miguel wondered why he was still there. He hadn't slept at all last night and was extremely tired at this time. With a smile, he said to Thalia, "Good night." Then, he, too, headed toward his room.

"Good night." Seeing the situation, Benjamin went straight back as well.

At this time, only Thalia and Denise were left in the living room.

Watching them leave one by one, Thalia's eyebrows furrowed. "What's happening? What's the deal with everyone leaving?"
