Chapter 871 Something Was Wrong With Anthony

Anthony hesitated for a moment and looked at her as he corrected, "I think calling it 'deliberate' isn't quite appropriate--"

Thalia had a sudden outburst and almost slammed the table. "I'm already polite enough by not pointing out how you're taking advantage of us! Anthony, do you really think I will believe your vague explanation?"

Anthony was stunned and looked at the angry Thalia. After a while, he blinked his innocent eyes and said softly, "I was showing you guys some respect. Understandably, Benjamin and Denise were used because they lacked experience or didn't guard against me, their elder brother. But you're Darknetz Ace. Isn't it more embarrassing if somebody finds out that you were manipulated by a child?"

These words undoubtedly added fuel to the fire.

Thalia glared at Anthony, her eyes blazing with anger. Even at a time like this, he was still playing with words.

As she stared at him, her fists were clenched tightly and made cracking sounds. She sneered, "Yeah, you're right. If people find out that I, Thalia, was manipulated by a kid, I'll be d*mned. In that case, I have no choice but to silence you to protect myself!"

When Thalia reached for him, Anthony immediately shouted, "Miguel, save me!"

Almost instinctively, Miguel reached out and shielded Anthony behind his arm safely.

Thalia looked him in the eye and asked, "What is it? Are you willing to die for him?"

"I..." Looking at her, Miguel did not know what to say, but after a moment of hesitation, he blurted out, "He's my master. I can't just stand by and do nothing!"

Thalia chuckled lightly. "Can you beat me?"

"No," he replied.

"Are you here to court your own death?"

"I don't want to die either!"

"Then get lost!"

After careful consideration, Miguel put his arm down. "Okay!"

The result had Anthony's eyes widened in disbelief, and he stared at Miguel. "Are you really going to just abandon your master like this?"

"Master, don't worry. In my lifetime, I will avenge you. Even when I'm a hundred years old, I will never let her off the hook!" Miguel swore.

Pfft! Nobody can wait until then!

Before Anthony could even say anything, Thalia's hand reached out directly. Now, it was too late for him to escape.

Upon hearing Natasha's voice and her words, Anthony's anxious heart finally calmed down.

He smiled slightly. “That's true.”

“What's wrong? Is there something going on?” Natasha asked.

“No, nothing's wrong. It's just...” Anthony glanced around and happened to catch Denise's eager gaze, so he immediately explained, “It's just that Denise was missing you, so she asked me to call you to check in!”

Everyone was speechless.

Obviously, Anthony was the one who missed Natasha.

Over there, Natasha directly asked, “When will you guys be back?”

“In another two days at most!” Anthony replied.

“Two days and then another two days. It's been quite a few 'two days' already!” Natasha expressed her dissatisfaction.

“This time it's real!” he promised.

“All right, got it. Come back soon!”

“Will do!”

“All right then, I'm going back to sleep!” Natasha murmured.

“Okay!”

And so, the phone call ended.

Chapter 873 The Exact Location

The next night, Anthony had just finished bathing and was drying his hair. Suddenly, the room door was flung open with a bang. Miguel rushed in while holding a laptop in his hands.

"Master, I got it! I got it!" Miguel exclaimed excitedly.

Anthony stared at him for a moment before he snapped out of it. He looked at him displeased and said, "What's the matter? Do you not know how to knock before entering?"

"We have a signal now!" Miguel said while staring at the laptop.

Upon hearing this, Anthony's displeasure subsided, and his spirits lifted. "Give it to me!" he said.

Miguel immediately handed over the laptop. Upon seeing the flashing signal on the screen, Anthony quickly placed it on the table and began tracking.

At that moment, Miguel continued, "I tried to track it, but the signal was only available until this area. I wanted to pinpoint it further but couldn't get it more accurate."

Anthony stared at the computer while his eyebrows were brought together. His black hair was still wet and dripping with water. Without hesitation, he said, "Let me try."

Then, Anthony's hands swiftly tapped on the keyboard, while Miguel watched him by his side. Anthony's hands were smaller than the keyboard, but his typing speed was fast. His hands were moving back and forth swiftly across the keys.

They were well aware that individuals like Lindon, who shut down their laptops regularly, would have a certain level of caution and be on guard. Therefore, they must seize every opportunity since Lindon would shut down his device anytime.

Miguel was watching too. He could feel his heart pounding wildly. He knew that they would lose signal again in just an instant.

At that moment, he thought of something and said, "Master, let me send a message to Magus first. I want to ask him to buy us some more time."

Anthony nodded.

Then, Miguel turned around and left to find Thalia. He needed Thalia's help to reach out to Magus.

Anthony continued to stare at the laptop screen. He had a rough idea of the location but would have to put in more effort to get a more precise location.

Just then, he suddenly lost signal when he was about to pinpoint the exact location.

Soon after, Anthony took out a silver handgun from the drawer and played with it. Just then, the door was pushed open, and Benjamin walked in from outside.

"Tony, did Thalia and Miguel go out?" Benjamin asked.

Anthony turned around in his swivel chair while spinning the handgun with his fingers. He gave a slight nod and said, "Yes."

Benjamin casually walked inside and inquired, "What are you doing?" Before he could finish speaking, his gaze suddenly fell on the silver handgun in Anthony's hand. His eyes lit up instantly, and he whispered, "Don't move!"

Startled, Anthony abruptly stopped twirling the handgun and looked at his younger brother. "What's wrong?"

Benjamin walked toward him, his gaze fixed on the object in his hand. When he got closer, he reached out and carefully took the handgun from Anthony, saying, "Let me have a look!"

Anthony's eyebrows furrowed slightly as he watched his handgun being taken away, but he seemed indifferent. "Go ahead and look. There's no need to make a fuss about it!"

After receiving the handgun, Benjamin carefully examined it in his hands. Upon discovering something, he couldn't help but raise his eyebrows slightly. He couldn't resist asking the person beside him, "Tony, where did you get this?"

"I found it while I was looking through the drawer," Anthony said casually, glancing at the bottom drawer that had not yet been closed.

"Did you just find it randomly?" Benjamin's eyes widened in disbelief. "Are you sure you're not joking?"

"Is there a problem?" Anthony asked back in response. Benjamin's reaction seemed a bit over the top.

Seeing Anthony's confused expression, Benjamin couldn't help but explain, "This handgun was designed by a Granatanolan. Despite its delicate and compact appearance, it has high accuracy and a long range.

It's also very comfortable to hold. It is uncommon to come across a design that maintains such precision in this form factor, and this is one of them. However, after all these years, this model has long since been discontinued. Although there have been many imitations, their accuracy is far inferior!" With his eyes wide with surprise, Benjamin could not help but admire the handgun in his hand as he spoke. "I never expected to see one after all these years!"

Anthony, not quite understanding the situation, glanced briefly and remarked, "Isn't it just a handgun? Why make such a fuss about it?"

"You don't understand, do you? If a handgun has high accuracy, it can save someone's life in a critical moment!" Benjamin replied without exaggeration.

When Anthony heard that, he raised his eyebrows slightly and said, "But it also depends on whose hands it is in. If it's in Daddy's hands, what you said should be possible!"

"You're right, that's one of the issues, but now we're talking about this design, this model!" Benjamin emphasized. Seeing that Anthony was about to say something, Benjamin suddenly added, "Forget it. You wouldn't understand even if I explained it to you!"

Anthony was rendered speechless.

Chapter 875 A Chance At Redemption

Sitting in front of the computer, Anthony searched carefully, and, sure enough, he found Lindon's figure in an inconspicuous corner.

He stood by a car, making a phone call. The time and the location matched up perfectly.

Squinting at the blurry license plate, he adjusted his view from several angles before finally making out the clear license plate number.

The next second, Anthony's lips curled into a smile.

In an era where the internet was so developed, no one could escape the fate of being monitored.

Hence, based on the license plate number, he traced Lindon's trail online and found out that he eventually got off the car somewhere.

Since Lindon took a taxi, it drove away as soon as he got off, and he then entered a certain alley.

The area where he got off the car had limited surveillance coverage, and there were blind spots everywhere.

Anthony had searched for a long time, but he couldn't find any trace of Lindon again.

However, even in such circumstances, he could be certain of one piece of information. Lindon must have taken shelter somewhere within that vicinity because everything there met his requirements.

With that thought, Anthony immediately picked up his phone and dialed Thalia's number.

As soon as the call was answered, Anthony asked directly, "Where are you now?"

"What's the matter? I'll be back soon," Thalia responded.

"Well, it's nothing major, but I've stumbled upon another location that, if all goes as expected, could be where Lindon has taken refuge," he explained.

"Are you sure?"

"I am eighty percent certain!"

Thalia thought for a moment and replied, "Then I'll go over there now!"

"All right, you come back first, and then we'll go together!" Anthony suggested.

"Okay!"

The single phrase “I will listen to you” carried so much meaning with it.

Anthony raised his eyes and met Magus', his gaze deep and mysterious. He was unsure if it was just his imagination, but he couldn't shake the feeling that Magus' attitude toward him was no longer as indifferent as before.

Even Thalia, who was driving beside them, cast a surprised glance in their direction.

Magus' words were indeed quite surprising.

However, Thalia didn't explicitly state what she had seen through. She looked at Magus and said, “I've talked to him about this matter. Now, we should focus on Lina's safety. As long as you do as he says, she won't be in any danger.”

Upon hearing her words, Magus nodded. He then said as if he had recalled something, “By the way, I did what you asked me to do today and insisted on a conversation with Lina. However, he seemed to be quite busy at that time and rejected my request. Do you guys think that Lina might have already...” As he spoke, his expression suddenly turned serious.

Anthony understood what he meant. After hearing what the latter said, he thought carefully before saying, “No, as long as he wants to control you, he will ensure Lina's safety. Besides, he may be immoral, but he is far from being utterly despicable. His goal is to steal what he wants and get the money he desires. His purpose is not to kill. As long as you stay away from him, Lina's safety remains guaranteed.”

Listening to Anthony's analysis, Magus pondered for a moment and nodded. “I understand.”

“However, this is just my analysis. I'm afraid that there might be some unexpected situations, so you should make such demands every time you make a call. He will definitely let you hear her.”

Magus listened and nodded.

“Also, you need to ask Lina different questions every time,” Anthony said.

Magus was momentarily puzzled. “Why?”

After pondering for a moment, Anthony fixed his gaze intently on him and said, “Just in case he tries to deceive you with a recording.”

Magus instantly understood. He stared at Anthony, and after hesitating for a moment, he nodded and said, “Got it.”

And so, the car continued down the road.

Very soon, they arrived near the location Anthony tracked down.

When the car came to a stop, Thalia raised her eyes and scanned the surroundings. “This should be it.”

Anthony looked at his phone and compared the location with it for a moment. He then nodded in agreement and exclaimed, “This is the place!”

Magus looked around and asked, “So, Lindon is here?”

Magus held up his phone, his eyes deep and his gaze obscure. A moment later, he answered the call.

"Hello."

"Where's the stuff?" Lindon asked directly on the other side of the phone.

"I want to have a conversation with Lina!" Magus firmly demanded.

A cold smirk appeared at the corner of Lindon's mouth when he heard Magus' demand. "Magus, you never used to bargain with me before!"

"Yeah, so that's why I've gotten the short end of the stick, right?" Magus asked rhetorically.

Lindon fell silent for a moment. He then continued, "Fine, you want to talk, right? Give me a second!"

As he spoke, there seemed to be some commotion on the other end of the phone.

The volume of his phone was not very low. Even through the phone, Thalia and Anthony beside him could hear their conversation loud and clear. However, Anthony didn't even lift his head. His eyes were lowered as he was looking down at his phone, watching as the screen rapidly scrolled upwards, with rows and rows of numerical coding flashing by.

At that moment, a voice suddenly came through, "Go ahead, she's listening!"

Magus immediately asked, "Lina, how are you? Are you alright?"

The person on the other end of the phone immediately spoke when she heard Magus' voice. "Magus, no matter what he asks you to do, don't agree to it and don't worry about me. Go, leave as far away as possible. Leave this place, leave with those people!" On the other end of the phone, Lina's hysterical voice came through.

"Lina!"

Just as Magus was about to say something, Lindon suddenly took over the phone. "How about that, did you hear her?"

"Lindon, how is Lina doing now? I'm telling you, if there's anything wrong with her, I will never forgive you for my entire life!"

This threat really didn't mean much to him.

Lindon chuckled indifferently. "Don't worry, I'll definitely take good care of her and feed her nicely. After all, you're my buddy, right?"

Magus could not quite understand the location displayed on the phone, but as soon as Anthony finished talking, Magus swept his gaze all around the area on the spot.

"Lina..." he murmured, all ready to set off.

Fortunately, Anthony was one step ahead of him and gave Thalia a signal. The latter wasted no time in halting the man in his tracks.

"Calm down, Magus. Were you to act rashly and alert the enemy, every ounce of our efforts will go down the drain." Thalia deliberately emphasized each word to get her point across.

"But no one knows how Lina is right now. Since she's only nearby, can't we just rescue her already?" Magus asked in puzzlement.

"Do you know exactly how many of them there are? Do you know what weapons they have? Fine, then. Assuming there are four of them based on our initial estimate, but the moment we charge in, they'd have more than a hundred different ways to take Lina's life at any time. Do you really think we can save her that easily?" came Anthony's elucidation.

His statement indeed rendered Magus speechless.

"Don't be reckless, and just hear me out," advised Anthony while pinning his gaze on the man.

After hesitating for some time, Magus eventually bobbed his head in approval.

Right at that moment, Anthony turned to Thalia and went on, "Fifty meters isn't far. I've thought about it, and if I'm not mistaken, it should be right around that corner up ahead."

Thalia narrowed her eyes to slits at that claim. "How so?"

"At the intersection up ahead, there are at least three routes to leave this place. Based on Magus' earlier description of Lindon, I believe he must be a rather cautious person, always having a contingency plan for himself no matter the situation. Therefore, those three exits up ahead must be his best choices. Most importantly, the view there is excellent, so it's definitely a place they'd pick." As Anthony spoke, his eyes were fixated on the not-too-distant intersection.

Thalia listened to his speech and felt that he did have a point. After pondering for a moment, she asked, "Are there any other reasons?"

"Of course."

"Say it!"

"Look around here. This area can be considered a residential district, crowded with people from all walks of life. Most of the residents chose to live here either for the sake of convenience or to save money. At this time of the day, most of them have already turned in. However, there are still two units over there with their lights still on. They even have several rooms all lit up!" Anthony analyzed bit by bit.

Thalia gave a nod as she continued to pay attention. "You're right. That place truly serves as an excellent choice. If I were him, I'd definitely choose that location as well."

"I just went in to check the situation, and it's pretty much as what we analyzed. There are four of them and three rooms inside, but there's no sign of Lina. If my guess is correct, she should be in the innermost room because only the door to that room can be locked from the outside. As for whether there's anyone in the other room, I'm not so sure. Based on my years of experience, that other room must be where they'd be resting. For now, all four of them should be in the living room."

Hearing that, Anthony nodded thoughtfully. "It seems that the situation's not much different from what we predicted. Even if there are discrepancies, they'll only have, at the very most, two more people on their side."

Thalia bobbed her head solemnly. "Agreed!"

All of a sudden, a thought popped into Anthony's head. Quick as a wink, he sought Thalia's view. "What do you think about the combat prowess of those people?"

A chuckle came from Thalia. "It's hard to tell, but they're all involved in petty theft and shady jobs. Most probably, they can't hold a candle to those professionals. Even if there are one or two exceptions, it'll be a piece of cake."

Upon hearing the phrase "petty theft and shady jobs," Anthony shifted his gaze instinctively toward Magus. The latter quickly caught on and opined, "Don't mind me. Thalia's right. This kind of sneaky business can never see the light of day."

Anthony raised his eyebrows. "It's all good if you can understand."

"That said..." At this moment, Magus suddenly spoke up with his gaze fixed on Thalia. "There's one thing you said that's not quite right."

"What's that?" questioned Thalia.

"Among those four people, each has their own strengths, but two of them surely knew a thing or two about combat arts. They are there to fight off threats should there be any unexpected incident. That's why we ought to not underestimate their abilities," pronounced Magus.

That made Anthony intercept the conversation. "May I ask what kind of people were you scouting out before?"

After pondering for a moment, Magus shook his head. "These people were all brought together by him alone, and as I said, each of them has their own strengths. All we needed to do was follow his plan, so we didn't get to know much about one another's backgrounds. He's always been the one who has all the details about us."

Anthony knitted his brows at that. "But isn't it common for such operations to involve only people who are most familiar with each other? That way, there can be a certain level of tacit understanding, allowing them to quickly weigh the pros and cons if any issues arise during the operation. If it's as you say, though, that means every one of them has their very own ulterior motives, and the chances of the operation failing would be quite high.”

Even when listening to what the boy was saying, Mogus remained indifferent, his visage unchanging. He simply recounted in a calm tone, “He’s the driving force behind everything, having arranged in advance what each person should do at each point. So, all we need to do is carry out our part of the job to get our share of the money. We don’t have to worry about anything else.”

In his perspective, if that was the fact, Lindon must be a talented individual to be able to assemble a group of strangers and have them collaborate with each other so well, not to mention achieve such a high success rate. He had to have

Anthony's gaze turned to Magus and said, "Although it's a bit dangerous, at least it can ensure Lina's safety. What do you think?"

Magus unhesitantly replied, "Of course, Lina's safety comes first!"

Anthony nodded and said, "Alright, that's settled then. When the time comes, Miguel will join Thalia. As for you, I'll be ready to support you anytime!"

As soon as he said that, Thalia, standing nearby, suddenly said in a light and airy tone, "You? What can you do?"

After pondering for a moment, Anthony looked at her and said, "Although I might not be the best in terms of physical strength, I'm still quite capable intellectually!"

"Come on, if something happens to you, how am I supposed to explain it to Mommy and the entire Darknetz?" said Thalia and couldn't help but add, "And what do you mean by not quite the best?"

Your physical strength is the worst.

Anthony looked at her and sighed helplessly as he said, "Let's see, you have to say I'm not good enough for you to be satisfied, right?"

"That's right," said Thalia as she nodded, her eyes filled with playful teasing.

Anthony sighed helplessly. "So what now? Do you have a solution to this?"

"Well, you see..." said Thalia.

"If you have nothing else to say, then shut up," said Anthony.

"Who says I don't have anything else to say?" retorted Thalia suddenly as she looked at Anthony and added, "So you think I have been just messing around, huh?"

Upon hearing this, Anthony caught a hint of the underlying meaning.

Looking at her, his black eyes narrowed slightly as he asked, "What do you mean by that? Do you have a solution?"

"Not only do I have a solution, but I also have the right person for it!" said Thalia, glancing at Anthony with her face lighting up with a proud little expression.

"You have the right person for it? Who is it?" asked Anthony immediately.

Thalia had always managed to give him unexpected surprises.

Upon seeing Anthony's ingratiating gaze, Thalia instantly put on an attitude and said, "Oh, I seem to recall someone just telling me to shut up." As she spoke, she even acted like a madam, casually picking her ear with an impatient expression flashing across her face.

Anthony was bereft of speech after he heard that.

He took a deep breath.

He patiently looked at Thalia with a smile on his face as he cajoled, "I was just joking, don't take it seriously."

"That's how you joke? I can't tell," said Thalia, still maintaining her composure.

At this moment, Anthony looked at her and said, "Alright! Alright! I'm sorry. I was wrong. Can you please let it go in consideration of Magus's anxious expression? Can we move on?"

Thalia glanced around and upon seeing the silent Magus nearby, decided to let it go. She mumbled softly, "I'll let you off this time for Magus' sake!"

"Come on, tell me," urged Anthony as he looked at her expectantly.

Tholio spoke up. "They are not the only ones who have people assisting them, I can ask for backup as well!"

"Ask for backup? Where do we go for backup?" asked Anthony.

"Of course, we go look for backup among our buddies in Dorknetz!" said Tholio.
