Chapter 416

Chapter 416 Complicated

While Jenny was busy collecting information on the Wagners, Simone called to inform her that she had successfully taken over as president of the Bloom Conglomerate. In addition, Sam and Yvonne no longer had shares in the company and had only the money they received from selling their shares. Jenny was pleased with the news but didn't have time to celebrate due to her efforts to save Stephanie.

"How do you want to deal with Yvonne?" Simone asked. If Jenny hadn't helped her with the secret information she provided, it would be impossible for her to get rid of those old geese in her family. After thinking about it, Jenny answered, "It's up to you. Just make sure she can't harm others." "Alright." Simone had expected that answer.

Yvonne had harmed people in the past through her status as the eldest daughter of the Dickmans and using the Blooms as leverage. While things were different for her now, she still had a lot of money. If she wanted to harm someone, she could still devise a way to achieve her goal. Therefore, Simone had to make sure she was penniless to render her incapable of harming others. After the call with Simone ended, Jenny stopped thinking about Yvonne and continued searching for information on the Wagners on her computer. She was trying to uncover information that would be unfavorable to them. However, things didn't go so smoothly.

When Christopher came, she had just collected some information on them, but those alone were enough to give the Wagners a hard time.

She was going to discuss them with Christopher when she noticed he seemed down and asked anxiously, "What's wrong?"

She was a little worried. "Could it be because of Paul? Is it possible that the Spades can't swallow the Wagners?" she wondered.

"Jenny, I'm afraid I'll disappoint you this time," Christopher sighed. After some investigation, he realized that Paul was not easy to deal with. The situation was more complicated than he had imagined.

Jenny groaned internally, trying her best not to let her frustration show. "What do you mean? Can't the Spades take down the Wagners?"

The Wagners were not very well-known in Parrington. They were not as famous as the Fausts or on par with the Blooms. Were they so difficult to deal with?

"We can't," Christopher confirmed her fears, feeling rather frustrated himself. "I thought he was just an ordinary person, but there's more than meets the eye. He has connections in both corporate and the criminal underworld. He also has sizable manpower in Bardoff City, so taking him down would be very troublesome."

Christopher was sure his family could do it if he had no choice but to take them down. But the question was: was it necessary?

Bringing down the Wagners would not be of great help to his family. If he had to risk everything, he would rather take down the Fausts instead. At least, this would help the Spades more.

Jenny was silent. Christopher's words meant he had decided not to take action against the Wagners. She couldn't say anything. After all, she was the one who asked him for help, and it was perfectly reasonable for him to refuse her request.

As if he was afraid that Jenny would be upset, Christopher hurriedly said, "But I can help the Walkers get through this difficulty for the time being. At least, I can free them from the Wagners' control."

"For the time being?" Jenny frowned.
