Brilliant Plan

The remark read, "Spill the tea-I work at the same place as Linsey. Our company is super picky about who they hire, but somehow, she, a total newbie, waltzed in with the highest interview score. It's insane. Word is, she's got some kind of connection to one of the interviewers, which is probably how she landed the job so easily."

The netizen then remarked, "And get this-she's a total pain to work with. Most of us can't stand her. She uses her connections with a few big clients to throw her weight around like she owns the damn place. She's seriously problematic. I can't believe she'd pull something like this-it's just unbelievable."

The netizen's comments shot to the top, racking up likes, and tons of people were asking questions.

"Hey, OP, what company is she with?"

"I've got a brilliant idea! Let's complain to her company. No boss is going to put up with an employee like that. Let's get her canned!"

"Come on! Anyone have found out her company? I'm ready to pounce!"

Marisol and Joanna watched the online pile-on against Linsey with smug satisfaction.

"These people online are so gullible-they'll eat up anything we feed them," Marisol said, pleased with herself.

Joanna grinned. "Marisol, you're a genius. This was a brilliant plan. If this keeps up, Linsey's toast."

Meanwhile, Cynthia scrolled through the nasty comments about Linsey on her phone, a wide, excited grin plastered on her face.

All she had done was throw out two jabs to start things, and unbelievably, so many people had actually fallen for it.

And with Anthea out of the country, there was no way she could come to Linsey's rescue.

Cynthia smirked. She knew Linsey wouldn't get away with this.

As the online hate for Linsey reached fever pitch, Joanna felt a rush of pure triumph.

After numerous defeats at Linsey's hands, Joanna finally relished the opportunity to witness Linsey's downfall.

She remembered Linsey's past arrogance with a bitter taste.

As she scrolled through the seemingly endless barrage of hateful comments directed at Linsey, Joanna's spirits lifted considerably.

However, she reminded herself to stay focused on the overall strategy and not get carried away by the moment.

After a moment of contemplation, Joanna decided to reach out to Linsey directly.

Linsey answered promptly.

Joanna paused, and when Linsey remained silent, she assumed that Linsey was wallowing in despair due to the online backlash.

Adopting a deceptively gentle tone, Joanna inquired, "Linsey, starting to feel the pressure?"

Linsey responded evenly, "Joanna, what's your point?"

Joanna scoffed. "Linsey, I suggest you cut Felix loose and issue a public apology to us. Otherwise, you'll live to regret it.

Marisol and I are giving you one final opportunity," she warned, her voice hardening.

Linsey let out a dry laugh. "Joanna, I think you've got your facts twisted. You're the ones who started this smear campaign against me. If anyone owes an apology, it's you to me. The public might be clueless, but you know the truth. Felix betrayed me because of you, remember? That's what drove me to marry my husband."

She then quipped, "You and Marisol are masters of manipulation, always playing the injured party."

"Linsey!" Joanna hissed, her teeth clenched. "You're still talking tough, huh?"

Linsey spoke with unshakable calm. "Joanna, I don't regret my decision in the slightest. Do whatever you want-I'm unfazed by your threats."

Joanna responded with a scoff and a chilling laugh, her eyes glittering cruelly. "Linsey, don't blame us for what's coming." With a sharp click, Joanna ended the call, her mind already weaving darker schemes against Linsey.

Despite the ominous nature of Joanna's threats, Linsey remained detached and unaffected.

She leisurely scrolled through her phone, her eyes skimming over the barrage of insults flung at her online.

Collin, glimpsing the toxic spew on her screen, halted and advised, "Linsey, ignore that garbage. It's not worth your peace of mind."

He understood that Linsey had strategies up her sleeve, yet the venom in those comments still gnawed at him.

Turning to face Collin, Linsey offered a comforting smile. "Don't worry. Tomorrow marks the third day of our plan. Once it passes, we'll be free from all this chaos."

As she reassured him, a shadow flickered across Linsey's expression, hinting that the time for action was drawing near.

Linsey meticulously prepared her material, uploading it to her account for automatic posting over the ensuing days. Her anticipation was palpable; she knew the storm that was about to break.

By the next morning, the online world was in an uproar, with Linsey at the eye of the storm.

Her silence over the past few days had been deafening, but finally, she broke it with a post that captured the Internet's frenzied attention.

As the controversy swirled, Linsey grudgingly acknowledged Marisol and Joanna's role in the chaos.

Their dramatic antics had unwittingly amplified her message, ensuring it erupted across social media like wildfire.

When netizens clicked on the post, their screens lit up with the damning truth.

For five years, Felix was supposedly devoted to Linsey, but the post laid out undeniable proof of his entanglement with

Joanna

It left no room for doubt-hotel receipts with dates, Joanna's romantic social media posts, and even photographic evidence of them together.

The climax of her revelations was a gut-wrenching account of Felix's actions on what was meant to be their happiest day. Instead of cherishing Linsey, he had abandoned her at the altar for Joanna, leaving Linsey humiliated and alone in front of their guests.

The latest piece of evidence-an audio recording of Joanna's smug conversation from last night-had sent shockwaves through social media.

But the tale thickened far beyond mere infidelity. After Linsey's wedding, Felix's behavior took a dark turn, crossing straight into criminal territory. His obsession turned violent-not only did he harass her nonstop, but he also tried to kidnap and rape her.

Backed by official reports and police statements, the post left no room for doubt-it was all there in writing.

As netizens scrolled through the revelations, confusion and astonishment bubbled over in their comments.

"What... what the hell is happening here? This can't be real, can it?"

"So all this time, Linsey was the one being wronged? That's wild."

"I knew it! The Wells family isn't as innocent as they seemed. Some people are just too naive—do you really think the police would lock up the wrong person?"

"Linsey's really taking the high road, not holding any grudges against the people who dragged her name through the mud. She could've sued all of you for defamation by now."

"Are you kidding me? Weren't Marisol and her family supposed to be the victims? This plot twist is insane!"

"We were just trying to help. It's not our fault! If anyone's to blame, it's the Wells family for their award-worthy performance."

"That's right! And Marisol had the audacity to do a livestream. How were we supposed to think she was lying?"

"I can't believe this! Marisol and Joanna played us like fools."
