

Chapter 75

They sat facing each other, chatting.

Iris stared at them in disbelief. She wondered why they were here together. After all, they were not particularly close.

Denise asked, "Do you know them?"

"That's my friend. Excuse me for a moment," Iris said.

"No problem, go ahead," Denise said with a smile.

Iris approached, and it was Henry who noticed her first. He greeted her with a warm smile. "Iris, what are you doing here?"

Iris smiled back. "I came with a friend."

Yvonne, glancing behind Iris, asked, "A friend? A man or a woman? I didn't know you had other friends besides me."

Ignoring her teasing, Iris simply said, "Can I talk to you for a minute?"

Yvonne stayed put. "We can talk here."

Henry chimed in, "Yeah, it's not like we don't know each other. Whatever you want to say, you can say it in front of me." He added half-jokingly, "You're not gonna talk bad about me behind my back, are you?"

Iris didn't know what to say. She was indeed going to tell Yvonne that Henry was an irresponsible playboy. As Yvonne's friend, she felt like it was her responsibility to warn Yvonne.

"Do you have any virtues worth mentioning? All you have are flaws. Even if I wanted to tell Yvonne good things about you, I couldn't, because you don't have any," she stated bluntly.

Henry was taken aback.

Yvonne leaned back on the sofa and tilted her head back. She had consumed a bit of liquor, but she had a high alcohol tolerance, so she's probably just pretending to be tipsy. "Don't worry about me, Iris. Let's see who's the player and who's the plaything."

Henry and Iris were both speechless.

Henry chuckled. "I don't mind being your plaything. How about we go upstairs to play right now?"

"Sure..." Yvonne said, standing up.

Iris quickly grabbed her arm and said, "You're drunk."

She then glared at Henry. "She's a very good friend of mine. Don't try to do anything funny."

Iris knew the things Henry had done in the past.

He made a woman pregnant but refused to take responsibility. He forced her to get an abortion instead, and she suffered heavy bleeding in the process. She had to have her uterus removed, and she could never have children again. In the end, Henry paid the woman $150,000 in compensation to settle the matter.

Iris knew Yvonne could handle herself, but she's a woman after all, and if anything happened, she would be the one to suffer.

If it were anyone else, Iris might not intervene, but Yvonne was a special friend to her.

Fortunately, Yvonne was not stubborn. She let Iris lead her away.

Henry asked, "Are you seriously leaving?"

Since their last encounter, he had struggled to forget about Yvonne and found it difficult to have interest in other women. He and Yvonne were both open-minded people and their sex was wild. Yvonne was so intense that he was pushed to his limit. For the first time, he met a woman who could conquer him.

He had tried reaching out to her after that, but to no avail. It was by sheer luck that he ran into her here.

He thought he would finally be able to quench his "thirst" this time, but Iris suddenly appeared out of nowhere and foiled his plan.

With her arm around Iris' shoulder, Yvonne asked her, "Honestly, what are you doing here? You're definitely not here alone, right?"

She knew Iris well enough to know that Iris wouldn't come to a place like this to have fun.

"A client brought me here," Iris replied.
