

SHE MADE A COMEBACK AS A RENOWNED DOCTOR

Capítulo 1044: Chapter 1044: Zoey Sanders Surprised by Liam Cloud's Perilous Situation

Felix Shaw saw Eliana Shaw storming down the stairs angrily, then glanced at Roman Frost, whose face was serious.

She asked doubtfully, "Did you have an argument with my sister?"

Roman Frost sighed, his expression somewhat weary.

Eliana Shaw has always had a temper, and if she walks away with a cold face, she generally won't pay attention to him for a month.

Roman Frost didn't know what to do.

"Lil' Shaw, help me persuade your sister."

Felix Shaw crossed her arms, leaned lazily against the stair railing, "Alright, then tell me, how did you make my sister angry?"

Roman Frost furrowed his brows tightly, didn't speak; if he said it now, he might get a good scolding again.

Felix Shaw, just like Eliana Shaw, has a hot temper.

Careless, he might even get a double assault.

Felix Shaw raised an eyebrow, staring at him, “You... didn’t cheat on her outside, did you?”

Although Roman Frost and Eliana Shaw usually did not have any ambiguous or intimate behaviors in the organization, everyone knew they were together.

Felix Shaw actually quite approves of her future brother-in-law, but looking at him stammering now.

There’s definitely something up here!

A woman’s sixth sense is always accurate.

Felix Shaw crossed her arms, pacing back and forth to scrutinize him.

Roman Frost, already feeling guilty, was now sweating buckets.

“Speak, did you cheat on her outside, or did I just get it right?”

Felix Shaw kept her eyes tightly fixed on him, not missing any expression on his face.

“Not quite.” Roman Frost sighed.

“Not quite? What do you mean by not quite?” Felix Shaw’s voice instantly sank, icy cold, carrying a deadly danger.

As if Roman Frost dared to betray Eliana Shaw, she’d draw a knife and slash his throat.

Roman Frost deeply sighed, “It was an accident.”

Felix Shaw figured it out.

There’s cheating, but it was an accident.

Saying the cheating was accidental?

Felix Shaw didn’t believe him one bit!

Her face instantly turned cloudy, particularly cold.

Roman Frost still wanted to say something, “Lil’ Shaw, I can expla…”

“Get lost!”

No one’s listening to his excuses.

Felix Shaw directly turned around and left.

Roman Frost raised his hand to pinch his brows.

A light laugh sounded behind him, Roman Frost looked up to see Liam Cloud had already walked up beside him, patting him on the shoulder, "Serves you right!"

Roman Frost was even more headache-stricken.

Upstairs, in Zoey Sanders' room.

Listening to Liam Cloud saying Zoey Sanders was in a bad mood, Hope Williams thought the girl was crying under the covers.

Unexpectedly, she was holding her phone, slaughtering in a mobile game.

Seeing Hope Williams come in, Zoey Sanders finally put down the phone, got up and looked at Hope Williams, "Aunt Williams, please sit."

"Alright." Hope Williams sat beside Zoey Sanders, looking at her like she was her own sister.

"Liam Cloud said you were in a bad mood, came up to check on you."

Zoey Sanders lightly pursed her lips, momentarily unsure where to begin.

“Aunt Williams, can I ask you a question?” Zoey Sanders took Hope Williams’ hand, leaned close to her, her voice soft yet cautious.

“Sure, ask away.”

“Can you tell me about Liam Cloud? For instance, what kind of person you think he is.”

Hope Williams lightly arched her delicate eyebrows.

Seeing Hope Williams didn’t speak, Zoey Sanders hurriedly said, “I don’t mean to talk behind his back or badmouth him, just felt he’s very cold, the kind where you want to get close, but the vibe he gives off feels like he’s telling you to stay away. This feeling... is very bad, I feel like he might dislike me, I’d like you to help me analyze it.”

Being disliked by someone you like is not pleasant.

Zoey Sanders was quite distressed.

Hope Williams pondered Zoey Sanders’ words slightly, rested her arm, supported her head, and spoke, “I think you might be worrying too much, you haven’t done anything wrong, why would he dislike you?”

“I haven’t done anything wrong?” Zoey Sanders had been self-condemning for a long time.

“Coming here brought him so much trouble, like Evelyn Sinclair, like Olivia, even bothering him to save me. I think he must feel I’m a nuisance, definitely unwilling to see me.”

Zoey Sanders lowered her head.

“So you’re staying upstairs, not going down?”

Hope Williams helplessly smiled, patted Zoey Sanders’ head.

Young ladies’ thoughts are indeed delicate, sensitive, and hard to guess.

“Silly girl, Evelyn Sinclair and the four families originally had a grievance with Liam Cloud, kidnapping you was like adding a small spark to the fuse, he was going to confront them eventually.”

The hangnail on a nail, if not removed, inevitably feels uncomfortable.

Even without Zoey Sanders’s incident, other events would have sparked the conflict sooner or later.

Might as well resolve things all at once, cleanly.

“Don’t let the heads of those four families pretend to be respectful and submissive to Liam Cloud on the surface, secretly they have countless hidden intentions.”

They've fought for years, so many people died, do they really harbor no resentment? Impossible. They just can't win, so they quiet down; but if they find the slightest flaw in Liam Cloud, they'll still rise up to attack him.

Especially George Sinclair, who thought of using Olivia to bind Liam Cloud, proving he's ambitious.

If you consider it, if the child were indeed Liam Cloud's, George Sinclair's plan would succeed, using Liam Cloud's influence to expand his own family.

Once expanded to a certain degree, he'd still want supremacy, turning on Liam Cloud.

Ambitious people, you'll never know the extent of their ambition.

That's something Ted Williams taught Hope Williams.

Conversely, it's impossible for Liam Cloud to let them succeed, which inevitably compels George Sinclair to hatch other plans.

Like using this incident to incite everyone to attack them, especially since they're currently in the Hidden Continent, the territory where the four families and various intertwined forces reside.

Everything related to Liam Cloud is a big piece of meat, hungry beasts have long been staring fiercely.

Hope Williams spoke like chatting, unhurriedly with Zoey Sanders.

Zoey Sanders anxiously asked, "Since he knows it's dangerous here, why doesn't he leave?"

Hope Williams smirked, "Perhaps wants to totally reform here, eliminate future troubles; if George Sinclair dares to take things too far, it's like handing a knife to Liam Cloud's hand, then he's finished."

Zoey Sanders pondered, nodding thoughtfully. If Hope Williams hadn't told her this, she wouldn't have imagined so much.

Hope Williams looked at Zoey's dazed expression and smiled lightly.

"But rest assured, the paternity test report hasn't come out yet, they haven't torn apart, won't take action, he's already arranged for us to leave tomorrow, considering our safety."

Zoey Sanders blinked, "When we leave, it's just him and his people left here, isn't it very dangerous? I see he didn't bring many people this time."

"Presumably he's aware of this; his people aren't limited to those we see, probably in places we can't see, there are unexpected numbers."

He's a Big Boss through trial and error in the field, he thinks more than we do regarding these matters, so don't worry."
