

A Glitched 1101

Chapter 1101 Level Up And Quest Completion

"Sylphy! If I wasn't for your equipment I wouldn't have been able to do it though! Thanks a lot!" Luck said. "Here, please take it all back. I can't afford to lose more money using it. After all you said I had to pay for every minute..."

"Yep. Well done, and thanks for your preference." I smiled slightly greedily, taking the equipment and storing it inside the inventory. "You spent 46 minutes with the equipment, so that'll be 460.000 Gold."

"C-Can I pay you in quotes?" He sighed.

"Sure! No interests for my friend." I smiled.

"Thank you..." He seemed slightly relieved.

"Are you sure you're a friend, Sylphy? Asking him so much money for using your equipment..." Celica sighed. "Aren't you too greedy for a rich girl? You've got plenty of money already."

"Hey Celeste, don't get involved on this. We already decided I would pay! And I feel indebted enough that I won't be able to sleep well if I don't know I'll pay her for all the help she gave to me." Luck said reluctantly. "So please don't get in the way. This is what I want too."

"You heard him." I smiled, crossing my arms. "What? Are you jealous you can't make as much money? You've been slacking too much on your alchemy lately. The Witch of the Blue Mountains is going to smack you for having grown so rusty."

"T-That's not the point...! Don't change the topic!" Celeste was caught off guard, blushing in embarrassment.

"Anyways, how was the EXP?" I wondered, checking the System Windows pop up after hearing the Phoenix fall into the dunes one last time. Looks like they managed to slay it. Well done, my parents! And thanks for the easy shared EXP.

"Wow, everyone leveled quite a lot! Dammit, I wish I could level up too..." I cried internally. "Well! It still nice you guys are growing super strong! Well done, Luck. You can also Rank Up now."

"I know! I knew this power was also due to that..." Luck said, he was really happy. "Can we do it now, Sylphy?"

"Hmm, I don't know." I said. "Our parents are just coming here. Let's wait until tonight, alright?"

"Well, sure, I can wait." Luck nodded. "But the rest of the familiars are max level too, right?"

"Yep, tonight it is." I nodded. There was nothing changing my mind. "I would rather wait until everything has calmed down instead of doing it in front of everyone... Every day I am questioned about my abilities by my parents, it is really exhausting."

"Hahah, my bad, I get it." Luck giggled.

Everyone else seemed excited their Familiars reached max level. This also meant they would grow stronger as a result of their bond together. And even before evolving, the Familiars after leveling twenty times in a row, looked at least twice as strong. Each one emanating a powerful Aura of Mana and their respective element.

"Kyuuh, chuu!" Snowflake was overflowing with an aura of light.

"Uwaah! S-Snowflake, you're too bright, my eyes..." Mist cried, covering her face.

"Whoosh!" Cumulus made the sound of winds and gusts, flying over Zack.

"Hahaha! You sure are happy about it!" Zack laughed with his single spirit.

"Chuu, chuu!" Onyx, Celeste's bat-shaped spirit, was biting her head.

"Ouch, stop it! Why are you the weird one out of the four?!" Celeste complained.

Meanwhile, Mister Teddy made no sounds as a golem, but was flexing his huge arms made of incredibly hard fabric. Celica clapping her hands.

"You're all strong now, Mister Teddy! Well done! Hahaha!" She was almost euphoric about her golem reaching level twenty.

As I finished storing the firebird corpses below the scorching sun, I noticed the giant golem carrying the slimes approach with Pyuku. He had been mostly protecting them while firing his powerful water and slime bullets from a distance, leaving huge dents on the birds' feather armor which we abused to slay them more easily.

"How's everyone? Is it safe?" He wondered. Looking everywhere, he quickly nodded. "Looks like it's safe!"

"Yeah, the monsters are gone for now." I nodded. "And the pyramid should be safe to enter I assume... Ah, our parents are coming. They're bringing that whole Phoenix with them, yikes."

"T-They sure are your parents." Pyuku muttered.

"Hahah..."

And as I was thinking about how the meat of these creatures would taste, a Quest Window popped up. I do remember something showed up when the birds appeared, but I had little time to even look at it.

Chapter 1102 Time To Explore An Ancient Pyramid

[You completed the Special [Challenge Quest]: [Defeat All The Firebirds and their Phoenix Queen, and Free the Pyramid of their Tyranny!]

[Wonderful job! Thanks to your party's efforts and your great strength, you've managed to defeat almost forty Tier 8 Monsters, and your party even managed to slay such a powerful monster as a Tier 10

Phoenix! This is no little feat. Even if you didn't help much in that at all, because those that slay it are included in your party, you are credited with some of the kill's EXP.]

[Now that the nest and the monsters are finally dealt with. I wonder what dwells inside of that pyramid... You better go take a look! You might find a rather slimy surprise inside. But hurry! We don't want the same thing that happened to the other slimes happen to these, right?]

After everything was said and done, a Quest Completion window popped up. I guess a quest was well deserved when we were fighting a Tier 10 Monster and their Tier 8 army that were nesting over the pyramid where another group of Pyuku's family was located.

However what surprised me the most were the rewards! I got Dragon Flowers again after so long since the last time! These always enhance my physical cultivation and dragon heart progression the most! However, I won't greedily eat them all so quickly. I want to plant them inside my dungeons so they can multiply! Heheh.

Oh right, and twenty Skill Proficiency Potions are always welcomed... I wonder if I could discern the ingredients somehow and replicate it. Though that seems rather impossible in many ways. If it was made by the System and all, its components must be materialized out of its internal energy.

"Alice, I wonder if I can recreate the potions the system gives to me through alchemy..." I said, thinking about it.

"Hmmm, I don't know. It might not be possible because it doesn't possess normal components. The ingredients themselves are all synthesized out of using divine power." Alice answered. "It is not a traditional item that is made using the ingredients of your world, sadly."

"Ah, that's a pity. Oh well, at least I can do something with the dragon flowers!" I nodded.

"Yep! Don't lose hope, Sylphy! Also make sure to plant the other seeds you got that enhance your growth." She said. "You've eaten two of each already, make sure to plant some. Even if they won't work on you anymore, it might help your friends."

"Oh, right. I'll do that too." I nodded, checking the items. "I got a second piece for my subclass rank up... Another one to go and we're done with both! I wonder when I can get another Rank Up. Is it calculated or something?"

"I believe so. Though it is all done by the judgment of the Quest System." Alice said. "I can sometimes influence some things, but I have little saying on how these things are judged. But I would assume it has to do with the cultivation growth, most likely... Maybe if you manage to reach Rank 7 you'll get quests that'll get you fragments for more Class and Subclass Rank Ups?"

"I hope so... I was stuck at the normal Classes for way too long." I sighed. "I don't want my friends to end up getting even higher starred classes... Aquarina already surpassed me."

"Well, it cannot be helped." Alice smiled. "Don't worry, Sylphy. It's alright. You're plenty strong yourself! Don't be too greedy."

"I know, I know~"

"Well done kids!" My father greeted us.

"You've done an excellent job! And it looks like Luck grew stronger too? You acquired some new divine beast spirit, didn't you?" Asked my mother.

"Y-Yeah, something like that!" Luck nodded.

"Interesting, we'll have to train your abilities in the future to see how you can unlock the rest." Ninhursag said. "More importantly, shall we move on to the pyramid? We can talk on the way."

"Sure, let's do that then." Nepheline agreed.

"I'm fine with anything, but this heat... It weakens my shadows quite considerably. Let's move on."
Shade nodded. "Aquarina, how are you handling things?"

"I'm fine, dad. Don't worry! T-This is nothing... Ugh." Aquarina groaned, sighing.

After taking a last look at my items, we regrouped with our parents' party and then we decided to move directly to the pyramids. We'll have time to eat what we hunted later. Pyuku quickly led us to these ancient ruins. The entrance seemed blocked by magic. Somehow, the inhabitants inside of this place had employed the ancient technology of the god's ruins and used it to protect themselves inside.

"Yeah, it's really closed." My mother analyzed it. "I can assume that the slimes hid inside of here from the birds, right?"

"But why did the birds nested here to begin with?" Asked Aquarina. "What's so special about this place?"

"Most likely the pyramid itself." Nepheline said. "Look over there, Aquarina. That golden metal. There are several dents all around the pyramid."

"Don't tell me... the birds ate this metal?!" Zack gasped. "Is that why their damn feathers were metallic too? Wow."

"Most likely." Shade agreed. "Well, should I get inside then? I'll see what I can do."

"Y-You can get inside?" Pyuku wondered. "But uncle Shade, it's completely-"

FLASH!

However, my father-in-law completely disappeared from the scene, turning into a mass of shadows and sliding through below the gates. We thought it was completely sealed, but shadows is an incorporeal mass, and with his incredibly high cultivation, he was able to force his way through the magical contraption.

Clank... CLANK!

Creeaaak...!

And then just half a minute later, the gates opened completely. Allowing us inside. Shade was there but no slime. He had simply used his spells and abilities as a rogue to get inside and unseal an ancient ruin's gate with ease!

"Let's get in. I can feel a lot of living beings deep down."

Chapter 1103 Rescuing More Slimes

We stepped inside of the pyramid after Aquarina's father did the trick. There was a very long, dark corridor ahead, barely illuminated by the golden walls. We noticed many writings and engravings across the walls. Which my mother quickly identified as the language of the gods again. We ignored them for now, feeling they weren't as important. Pyuku looked very excited as he ran in front of us. The golem carrying the rest of the slimes sticking close to us as well.

However, I couldn't really shake off this feeling of uneasiness, the same feeling I had when we entered that abandoned temple where we confronted Apollo, or the other one with Yggdrasil's Clone. It was all a bit scary, even though I had grown so strong. We never know what sort of things await us at the end of these corridors. The temples of the gods tend to harbor either weapons of mass destruction, forbidden artifacts, or horrors beyond our comprehension.

"Sylphy, you okay?"

I felt Aquarina's warm hand touch mine, as she quickly held it tightly. Her beautiful azure eyes soothed down my heart. I had grown a bit scared of these temples after all. But with her at my side, I think I can handle just about anything.

"Yeah, I'm fine, just a bit... nervous. I hope we can find the slimes alive." I whispered to her, while sighing.

"It's fine. We'll find them, Pyuku can sense their life signals, remember?" Aquarina winked at me. "I know each time we've explored these temples we've found some horror or another. But let's just have faith. And we got our parents here too!"

"Yeah, yeah, I know~" I said, smiling a bit. "I-I'm not scared or anything! I'm fine. Completely."

"Okay, then can you let go of my hand? You're grabbing it very tightly..." Aquarina raised an eyebrow.

"No." I denied her request nonchalantly.

"Hahah, then you're still nervous." She giggled, pecking at my nose with a little kiss.

"I'm fine, cut it off!" I pouted a bit, feeling more embarrassed than anything.

Any nervousness or fear I had over what awaited us at the other end of the corridor had already dissipated after all the teasing from Aquarina. And without realizing, we reached the end of it, landing on a huge, expansive area. There were many little houses built out of stone and clay, contrasting the gold floor and walls.

There were many vestiges of civilization here, of people, of their houses. And of the things they used, amongst other things. However, everything seemed empty of life. There was nobody here... Until I expanded my senses, feeling hundreds of faint life signals.

"There are people around here." I said. "Somewhere. Let's look!"

"Pyuku, can you sense them?!" Asked Aquarina.

"Y-Yeah!" Pyuku nodded. "Everyone, please me help me find them too!" As he called for help, ever slime being carried by the golem leaped out of their transporter and started searching everywhere.

lightsNovel We did the same. With Aquarina, we ran to the nearest house, entering, and finding inside three small, dried slimes. They looked several times smaller than they were originally, and looked more like dried fruit than the gelatinous bodies they hold! What happened to them?!

"Aquarina!"

"Y-Yeah, I'm on it!"

She let go of my hand as she conjured water magic and poured it over the dried slimes. Their bodies swiftly absorbing all the moisture as she kept splashing them, finally. They regained their sheen and transparent color, becoming all bubbly and big.

"Gubo?"

"Guuu!"

"Geeh?!"

They panicked after seeing us, quickly leaping away and beginning to tremble at a corner of the room. We slowly walked back while feeling relieved.

"Don't worry, we're not enemies."

"Are you okay?"

As we asked them, they couldn't really understand our words. Until Furoh summoned himself out of my Soulscape, and completely mimicked Pyuku's appearance, and also his dialect.

"Let me handle this."

He talked with them using Pyuku's slime language and convinced them we were not enemies. The trio calmed down and explained to Furoh they were a family taking refuge from the monsters outside that had suddenly taken over their routes towards an Oasis right behind the pyramid, which we didn't see.

"I see, without the oasis you had to hibernate here, and... you've been here for two years?!" Furoh was shocked. "We need to quickly give water to everyone else, before it's too late!"

"Yeah, let's go!" I nodded.

Like that, we continued finding new slimes. Some of our friends that didn't know water magic spells brought them to us themselves. Aquarina used her water magic in great quantities, conjuring a rain of water over the entire place to quickly hydrate the slimes. Meanwhile, I used my Mist and Aqua Spells to spread moisture around the entire area.

Eventually, after an arduous hour and a half, we were able to save every slime we found. There were roughly one hundred and fifty of them living here. Including a larger, purple colored slime, their chief.

"W-We did it everyone!" Pyuku was in tears once more. "I'm so glad you're all okay!" He ended stretching his huge arms and hugging everyone together.

The slimes were confused, but instantly trusted him after seeing his strange yet divine appearance to them. They quickly started calling him a messiah too. The other tribe greeted them. Some of the older slimes still alive recognized each other from before they split their tribes.

Apparently, although slimes cannot grow stronger, they are very resilient and can live without food or water for up to five years. So even if we were two years late, they could have still hold on for a bit longer... Nonetheless, I'm relieved. They're also long-lived, the oldest slimes here, according to Pyuku, were roughly three to four hundred years old.

"So that's what happened. I see." My mother nodded, after hearing from Pyuku what the slimes from the pyramid told him had happened. "Those birds led by the Phoenix took over the pyramid and blocked the way to the Oasis where you get your food and water. Is that Oasis behind the Pyramid? We never saw it. We should go check it out now that I think about it! Oh, and don't worry, we've slain those monsters."

The slimes celebrated after Pyuku told them that, so happy they hugged us and leaped over our heads... They were adorably playful.

Chapter 1104 Eating Phoenix Meat For The First Time

The night had already arrived, and with that, we moved to the Oasis outside and decided to leave the exploration of the rest of the pyramid for later. The Oasis was bigger than we thought, being a gigantic lake of crystalline water, surrounded by a small jungle. The jungle I made ended slowly connecting with this one, making the greenery even larger and robust than before. The slimes didn't mind it.

lightsNovel The beautiful Oasis was enormous and lustrous, shining brightly beneath the moonlight. Our parents decided to cook up a feast. And I decided to help out using my Cooking Skill and Cooking Magic combined for greater effects. We had lots of Firebirds and a giant Phoenix to butcher and cook, so we put all our efforts into that.

Taking away their feathers was the hardest part, they were very rooted into their hard skin, making it very complicated. At the end we gave up and skinned them completely while ignoring the feathers. We'll have to separate them from the skin later. The firebirds were alright to butcher, but the giant Phoenix was a whole different deal.

Its meat was so hard any knife, even the strong mithril ones usually broke apart when we tried to pierce the flesh. This is the meat of a Tier 10 Monster after all. My mother ended calling dad and he used his sword to swiftly butcher it entirely though, making all the difficulties we went through feel completely pointless as he did it all in a flash.

My father is truly a master swordsman... I don't think I am near at his level yet. And I may never be for several decades. Aside from his swordsmanship being inborn talent, he has been training it since an incredibly early age and has learned swordsmanship from many other masters he met through his life.

He's just too awesome, but somehow, I want to one day surpass him...

"All done!" He smiled, patting my head. "This meat is a bit hard to cook though. Phoenix are generally immune to fire so you can't cook them. But you can directly eat their meat. The thing is, it is too hard for the teeth and mandibles of anybody below Tier 10 so... I don't know what to do in this regard."

"I'll do it." My mother said. "I've cooked dragon meat before, remember? This shouldn't be too hard either. And fire its not the only heat that can cook things." My mother smiled, as several spheres of radiant, burning light surged from her hands. "These [Miniature Stars] should do the trick."

Yeah, my mother's also a ridiculous magician! I've learned so many spells from her, yet I still feel completely powerless in front of such overwhelming potential. My only way to catch up with them ever is with my System and all the abilities that come with it...

FRSSSH!

The sound of meat being slowly grilled by my mother's magic made my thoughts fade away. I don't know why I was even considering that anyways though. Maybe I am a bit obsessed with growing stronger due to how weak I felt in my previous life.

But even then, I'm totally okay with my parents being stronger than me forever. I'll grow on my own way and forge my own path. I don't need to surpass them on their own fields to begin with.

"That smells nice. Mom should I do something?"

"Leave the Phoenix to me. Can you cook the firebirds with your friends, dear?"

"Sure! Leave it to me!"

I quickly gathered with my friends, and we decided to cook the Firebird meat in a variety of ways. I even asked those that didn't cook that much to help too, so they could practice their Cooking Magic, and to see if any could learn a Cooking Skill along the way.

The meat of the Firebirds was very red, almost like beef. However, it carried a certain tenderness once it started being cooked. Unlike the Phoenix, although it was slightly resistant to fire, it still cooked, just slowly.

I used my Holy Flames to cook it faster, which seemed to work surprisingly well!

And with the power of my Cooking Skill, the food was swiftly enchanted with more flavor and essence which we could gain out of eating it.

We decided to prepare a few recipes with this super tasty chicken. First we decided to just cover several of their gigantic legs on a lot of spices, salt, and vinegar, and then roast them at low heat.

Then, we cut down the breast meat and covered them on batter and crunchy breadcrumbs, deep frying it inside of oil made from the grease of the Sunstone Plateau Goats.

And lastly, we cut down and minced the rest of the meat and made them into burgers which we deep fried too, after covering on batter and breadcrumbs. These had onions and other veggies added too, for extra flavor.

The minutes went by slowly as we waited for the meals to get done. The smell of chicken permeated the air. We really just wanted to get to eating already!

After half an hour, the first things that were done were the burgers and the chicken breasts, so we decided to quickly sit down and enjoy, with a side of roasted potatoes and colorful salad.

The Pyramid Slimes were shy at first, but with the rest of the slimes assuring them that it was alright to join, they lost their shyness and quickly joined us in our meal.

"Wow these are amazing!" My dad said. "I can't believe you can come out with such simple yet delicious recipes, my princess. I love the burgers! So soft and crunchy! And the veggies inside really are nice."

"I agree, you also added a lot of spices, yet it doesn't feel overly flavorful either. Everything melds together quite nicely." My mother nodded.

"And they have different flavors? Like some have different grades of spiciness. Some have white onions; others have more garlic..." Nepheline said.

Everyone was fascinated with the meals. But I was looking forward the most to the phoenix, to be honest. Thinking about it, wouldn't the meat of a tier 10 legendary monster power up my physique a lot?!

Chapter 1105 Zephy Goes Through The Blood Bath Ritual Too!

"I can't believe you can come out with such simple yet delicious recipes, my princess. I love the burgers! So soft and crunchy! And the veggies inside really are nice." My father complimented my cooking yet again.

"I agree, you also added a lot of spices, yet it doesn't feel overly flavorful either. Everything melds together quite nicely." My mother nodded. "I have taught you a lot of cooking, but you do have a lot of talent yourself! Your imagination is what makes it possible for you to create these recipes."

lightsNovel Com "And they have different flavors too, I've noticed! Like some have different grades of spiciness. Some have white onions; others have more garlic..." Nepheline said, eating two cheeseburgers at the same time, while snacking on potato fries.

"Yeah, we made a lot of different ones, we experimented with combined flavors and ingredients." I nodded.

"I made a lot too!" Aquarina said proudly. "I made the purple onion and garlicky ones. I also made the tiny ones! Sylphy named them Chicken Nuggets."

"I can tell, they're the tastiest." Shade nodded, eating a cheeseburger. He really just loved everything his daughter made. "And Chicken Nugget? That's a rather funny sounding name."

Actually it was Alice who said they were like Earth's "chicken nuggets" so I called them like that. She was right next to me, sitting over the table and snacking on a big burger all on her own. I could notice her belly was growing a bit fatty, so I touched it a bit. It was very cute.

"You're getting a bit bigger, huh?" I giggled.

"H-Hey! I don't get fat! This'll be absorbed soon enough." She said, munching on the big burger.

"Okay, hahah." I laughed, noticing all my Familiars and friends were enjoying the meals. The atmosphere was nice and relaxing, the night was beautiful too, showing the stars and the full moon.

However, I suddenly noticed something. "Oh, the legs are almost ready now!" I ran to pick them up. As I started bringing them to the table, my mother talked about what everyone was interested on the most.

"The Phoenix will take a little while." My mother said. "But once we can eat it. We better eat everything, that'll help our physique's cultivation soar, similarly to the dragon you once ate." My mom said. "I want to give a blood bath to Zephyrus later, he's still young and developing, so it should have some effects."

"E-Eh? A blood bath?!" Zephy was a bit scared. "That's a bit disgusting, mom..."

"Come on now, dear. You were unable to bathe in the blood of a dragon because we were all out of it back then." My mother said. "So this is your new opportunity to bathe in the blood of a legendary tier 10 monster. Don't miss it. Your physique could improve drastically with the power of a Phoenix."

"I don't know if he's compatible though." My father said. "Sylphy was because she inherited my fire attribute affinity. But Zephy has darkness and blood so..."

"Affinity doesn't matter, its powers will adjust to them over time." My mother reassured him. "Don't worry, dear. It won't be that much of a bother."

"Uuuhh... Ugh, fine." Zephy sighed. "B-But you better make me some cake afterwards mom!"

"Hahaha! Okay, I'll make your favorite. Pistachio cake." My mom nodded.

"Yaaay!" Zephy instantly got happier.

A Phoenix Physique... Now that sounds amazing. Zephy should do that asap. I guess he wouldn't want to do it in front of mom and dad though. I can understand that, but he needs to do that so he can grow stronger.

For some reason I can't give him a System, and that somehow worries me. So if he can improve his physique and gain a Phoenix Trait to it, it would be for the better!

Anyways, as we ate the giant legs of the firebirds, another hour and a half passed. And the phoenix meat was finally done.

"It's finally done! Sorry for the wait, everyone! Let's eat!" My mother brought the Phoenix piece by piece.

My mother prepared it all. The breast meat, the legs, and everything else. Even the wings had enormous quantities of meat. The entire creature was stripped clean of all meat. Even the organs were cooked.

"Yes! Finally!" My father screamed in euphoria.

"It's here, at long last!" Nepheline was just like him.

"Smells good." Shade nodded.

"I have to eat a lot of its meat if I want to inherit this monster's Spirit into my transformation..."
Ninhursag nodded. My mother had given her part of the Phoenix's magic crystal, enough for Ninhursag to channel its powers and transform once she consumed enough of their meat.

We stuffed ourselves with the delicious meat, it was like a wonderful combination between chicken and beef. The spices mother used, coupled with her cooking magic, made everything even more amazingly tasteful.

"Oooh! This is so good! What the hell?! Can't stop eating this!" Zack laughed.

"Zack, give me some of that piece too, please!" Mist was gluttonously devouring the meals.

"Amazing, so delicious!" Luck wolfed everything he grabbed.

"Even I find it tasty, it is so full of Mana!" Lara said.

"Quite delicious, yes!" Celica nodded.

"I never thought I would eat this fancy in my whole life..." Celeste gulped.

"This is good!" Zephyrus agreed.

With each bite, we could feel the power of the Phoenix coursing through my body. Even though I wasn't receiving its full power, my Physique was being swiftly cultivated.

However, my mother had saved the best parts for Zephyrus. The Phoenix's Heart, its Eyes, the Tongue, and the Blood was all what she analyzed would bring his physique to absorb its powers.

The slimes also feasted with us, in a state of craze as they realized they were eating the damned monsters that forced them to hide and starve for so long. It was as if they were finally taking revenge on them by eating them, which was quite funny.

"Hahhh... I'm all stuffed." Aquarina patted her big belly. "Ugh, I'm so sleepy..."

"Me too... Ugh." I groaned. "W-We ate too much."

The night arrived, and as we finally finished eating, we felt completely full. I slowly made my way to the camp we set around the Oasis, the slimes going back to their city for now. They already talked with Pyuku, and agreed to come to Agarthia with us after realizing how dangerous this monster-infested continent was.

We made our way back to the camp with Aquarina and then went immediately to sleep. We practically passed out due to the enormous influx of Mana and Power we gained after eating all of that.

However, my sleep felt so fast that from one day to the next, I woke up, feeling the heat of the desert hitting hard against the tent. I yawned, stretching my hands. And decided to walk to the Oasis to wash my hands, where I found Aquarina just taking a bath there, without clothes.

"Ooh, Sylphy! Awake early today too?" She winked at me. "Come, let's bathe together in the oasis while everyone's sleeping." She invited me.

She really looked like a beautiful Spirit of an Oasis, seducing me to enter and bathe with her.

And quite honestly, it was hard to resist.

"Alright~" I threw away my clothes and dipped into the cold water with her.

I couldn't miss this opportunity.

Chapter 1106 Bathing In The Oasis With Aquarina

It was rather hard to not enter the Oasis' waters when my girlfriend was inviting me inside. The cold water was incredibly refreshing below such scorching sunlight, and the clear blue sky made for a memorable time. We played along, splashing water at one another. We also dived deep into the Oasis, finding all kinds of colorful fishes deep down, which Aquarina caught by summoning a trident made of ice. We got a big haul.

Of course, we didn't just do that, Aquarina embraced me while we were diving and floating above the water. We kissed a lot while relaxing, our tongues intertwining as I felt my entire body get hotter by merely being touched by her. She really liked grasping my breasts, constantly complimenting me on how big they were.

"Hmm~ Ahh, A-Aquarina, I think we should get going. Somebody is going to catch us!" I said, as I separated my lips from hers.

"Aw, come on, let's kiss a bit more." She bit her lips, looking at me coquettishly. "I can't get enough of your kisses, please~ Pretty please!"

"What am I going to do with you?" I sighed. "Fine a bit more and we go..."

We ended sitting down near the shore, giving each other kisses while enjoying the view. Aquarina wouldn't let go of me, always embracing me with her strong arms, and pushing my lips into hers. And I can't really resist either, I was completely in love with her. I simply couldn't fight her, she had me to her mercy...

"Hmm~" She kept kissing and licking my tongue, sometimes pushing it outside of my mouth to suck on it lasciviously.

"Ahh~ A-Aquarina... T-That's enough for now." I mustered a bit of my strength, as I kissed her forehead. "Alright? Too much kissing and you get too distracted!"

"Ugh, fine..." She pouted a bit. "But I can't help it, you're too cute! If it were for me I would be kissing you 24/7!"

"Hahaha, you dummy." I giggled, hugging her. "I love you."

"I love you too, more than anything!" She said, quickly grabbing me and making me sit over her legs. I had noticed she was already taller than me, and her strength was quite noticeable.

"Uwaah! W-What...?" I felt slightly embarrassed, but she giggled while having me sitting over her thighs.

"I've always wanted to do this! I see Zack always doing it with Mist, so I wanted to try..." She hugged me from behind. "You're so cute and small that it is rather effective." She hugged my belly.

"Hahaha, I guess I could get used to this~" I played along with her for a bit.

After a while, we decided to walk back to the camp. However, in the way, I noticed something we had missed before. There was a huge nest made of twigs and metal scraps above the pyramid. And I felt some faint presence. Could it be another firebird we missed?

"Aquarina, can you see that? I think that's the Phoenix's nest." I said.

"Oooh, right! Should we go look?" She asked.

"Sure, I was about to ask you that, actually." I nodded.

We swiftly flew into the skies, I used my Draconification Wings to easily soar up above, while Aquarina imbued water below her foot and used her ability to control it to easily lift herself off the ground. This was her way of flying. Her sea dragon form doesn't have wings after all.

"Oh, it's full of jewels and metal scraps!" Aquarina's eyes shone brightly, as she started gathering them and analyzing them. "Oh, this is Gold Mithril?! I have never seen this kind of metal! And this other is... Lesser Orichalcum?!"

"Looks like what they eat the most is the Orichalcum of the pyramid." I said. "The Metal the Gods utilize to create their constructions... There are also a lot of spirit stones. Probably what keeps this nest so hot even now- Huh?"

However, as we were looking around, I noticed something. There was a bright gold egg-shaped metal. I touched it, and it was burning really hot. If it wasn't because of my blessing and skills, I would have surely burned my hand touching that.

"This is... An egg-shaped metal?" Aquarina wondered.

"No, this is... A Phoenix Egg!" I was shocked. "It's still alive and it is developing well. I think it might hatch quite soon... In a couple of days, give or take."

"W-What?!" Aquarina gasped. "That's crazy! Aren't phoenixes like super legendary beasts?"

"Yeah..." I nodded. "If we could make it our familiar, we would have an incredibly strong guardian that cannot easily die. But I feel a bit guilty if I take it. I have so many Familiars now..."

"Maybe I could take it?" She wondered.

"Be my guest. Try it out, maybe you'll be able to bond with the egg right away." I nodded.

"Alright~" Aquarina smiled, touching the burning egg and resisting the pain.

A thread of golden light coming from her soul connected to the egg's interior. The life force of the little Phoenix was like a powerful blazing golden flame, and so was its soul. It looked like it was accepting Aquarina. That's nice! She only has Pyuku as her non-spirit familiar. Having a Phoenix would really help her out-

ZAAP!

However, to our surprise, the connection was forcefully closed, as Aquarina felt a burning sensation over her body, falling to her knees.

"Ugh!"

"A-Aquarina!"

I flew to her side and covered her on healing spells until she felt better. Her hands healed from the burns quite easily. Combining my Yggdragon Aura of Protection and Healing with Light, Life, and Nature Attribute healing spells always helps the most.

"I-I'm fine, thank you Sylphy." Aquarina sighed in relief. "But that hurt! This little rascal didn't accept me even when it was inside an egg!"

"That's weird, usually monsters that haven't even been born have very weak wills to resist a familiar contract." Said Ignatius, who had just woken up, materializing at my side, floating in midair. "I guess it is because it's a Phoenix. Even before being born, they're prideful birds."

"Maybe Sylphy could make an easy contract, seeing how their elements align..." Aquarina said. "But she doesn't want it though."

"Well, let's bring it with us and see what we can do." I said.

Chapter 1107 Phoenix Egg

"Why am I carrying this damn egg?!" Ignatius was complaining as he brought the egg with us.

lightsNovel "Well you're made of fire and all, so you're the perfect incubator." I nodded. "We're bringing the nest too but that's inside of Glutton and he can't store living beings inside."

"You're perfect for the job, dragon!" Aquarina laughed. "You're literally made of flames, and you can carry it anywhere because you float. You're perfect for the job."

"Uuugghh..." Ignatius sighed, looking at the golden egg he placed inside of his chest made of fire.

He was completely made of spiritual flames. So his body was semi-corporeal, and he could store things inside. Usually they would melt instantly though, but this temperature was just ideal for a Phoenix Egg to be incubated quite well.

"Here we are."

We made our way back to the camp, noticing our parents were already up and beginning to pack things up. My mother was preparing breakfast with my father and Ninhursag's help.

"Oh there you are." My mom said. "Where have you girls been? Huh?" Her sharp eyes easily noticed the egg Ignatius was carrying.

"Don't tell me you got that egg from the nest of the phoenix?" My father said what she was thinking right now.

"Yep, pretty much." I nodded. "We found it, and we brought it here for now. Aquarina tried making a familiar bond, but the egg rejected her..."

"Why didn't you try yourself?" Nepheline asked me.

"I don't really want it, I have too many Familiars to take care of now, another one would be a big issue." I sighed. And that's not even considering that there's another one slowly incubating inside of my soul scape.

"I see, fair enough." My dad nodded. "You do have a lot right now... Well, if Aquarina can't take it, who would?"

"Wait... Zephy should have already absorbed the phoenix's power by now." My mother said. "After we ate, we bathed him last night and I made him drink an elixir I made using the tongue, eyes, and heart of the phoenix too. I'm going to go wake him up."

My mother, who was always interested in making her children as powerful as possible, ran back to the tent where Zephyrus slept. Celica's bed was also there, both usually shared their tent because they were rather close. I often hear them reading fairy tales before bed.

"So mom just did all of that last night already?! Damn she's fast." I was shocked.

"She sure is, hahaha!" My father laughed.

As we talked to pass the time, uncle Arafunn appeared, slowly descending from the skies. As usual, he goes wherever he wants and comes back whenever he wants too.

"Good morning everyone. Is breakfast ready?" He yawned.

"Not yet... Were you sleeping in the skies? With this heat?!" Nepheline laughed.

"I am used to this heat. And with my winds, I can be protected of most of it with its cooling abilities~ There's nothing better than sleeping atop the clouds, gazing the moonlight only to be greeted by a beautiful golden sun the next morning." Arafunn said. "Only Heroes of Wind will ever experience such bliss- Ah well, Zack too, in the future. I hope he continues the tradition."

"Is sleeping in the clouds and being uninterested about everything part of being a hero of winds?" Ninhursag wondered, crossing her arms. "Well, I'm glad my son won't be a true hero of winds then..."

"Hahaha! That boy is very reckless and fiery. I doubt he'll ever inherit most of my traits, as hard as I try, he is his own kid now." Arafunn shrugged. "That doesn't mean he'll stop singing and making songs though! I have already thought about his next test. He needs to pick an instrument of his liking!"

Everyone facepalmed, Ninhursag in specific was slightly frustrated that my uncle was torturing Zack with having to do all sorts of cringe things he disliked doing.

"Look Arafunn, can't you just teach the kid how to use wind magic better and stuff? Or a cultivation technique?" Asked Ninhursag. "Does he really need to learn how to sing and make music? I find it a bit cute, but he clearly dislikes it a bit..."

"Dear, I am the one teaching here and my methods will be whatever I want." Said Arafunn. "Trust me, I am not doing this for my own amusement... Well, a bit. But not too much. Learning music and attuning with melodies is essential for the Wind Spirits to like you. They always flock around musicians the most. That or Nature Spirits. Every bard or singer I've met always has either a nature or a wind spirit contract to them, ninety percent usually a wind one. They help you amplify your voice to be heard loud and clear and can even deafen other sounds around you so you can concentrate in your melodies! Through their wind, it is even possible to imitate the sound of many instruments, creating a whole orchestra!"

"I-I see... Okay, sorry. Maybe I got a bit too cocky saying that." Ninhursag sighed. "Do as you may, Arafunn. I'm leaving my boy to your care. Please be nice with him, okay?"

"I'm being the nicest I can possibly be, Ninhursag. But if I am not strict enough, he won't learn." Said Arafunn. "Leave it to me, girl. Don't you worry."

"I guess this is how most of your strongest magic techniques are made, uncle?" I asked him. "After all, they're all conjured through melodies and songs."

"Indeed, my little dear." He nodded, patting my head merrily. "I won't ask him to do the same. Everyone has their own way to understand the winds... But he will have to harmonize with the rhythm to an extent."

"I never though Zack would become your apprentice from all people." I giggled a bit. "I am looking forward to his struggles..."

"Hahaha, it was already hilarious how hard he tried to do that song." Aquarina giggled slightly evilly.

"Haahh... I'm rooting for him." Ninhursag sighed silently.

After our little conversation, mom brought Zephy with her. Celica also came right behind her, looking also quite sleepy. As he walked closer, I noticed something within him. His Aura... had grown much stronger. And it seemed somewhat divided? Like my own Yggdragon dual aura.

Chapter 1108 Zephyrus' Amazing Growth!

lightsNovel com "Mornin'!"

"Good morning..."

Both Zephy and Celica looked sleepy as hell, but greeted us cheerfully, nonetheless. I noticed that Zephy held a strange, dual aura. His original elements remained, but there was another half of such Aura, now glowing like burning golden flames. I had underestimated how much power he could get out of all the things mom prepared for him! Did his elemental affinities strengthen thanks to the Phoenix's heart and blood?

We explained to him what happened, and after mom asked him to try, he walked towards the golden egg, touching it with his little hand to try out something. The heat didn't affect him either. His skin had become mostly immune to extreme heats thanks to the Phoenix blood, amazing.

"S-So I just try to make it a familiar?" Zephy wondered timidly.

"Yes, give it a go." My mom nodded.

"Okay... here goes nothing." Zephy said timidly.

FLAAASH!

A black and red thread emerged out of his soul. While most people's souls were gold, white, or green, his own was of black and dark red color, constantly swirling together. It was a very unusually strong soul, with a clear and rare color to it.

The connection to the egg was swift. Surrounding his Soul Thread, there were golden flames made of his dual aura he had acquired, strengthening his abilities. The will of the young Phoenix had protested at first, disliking my brother's soul.

However, after these golden flames fused into his soul thread and entered the egg, it calmed down a lot. The Phoenix chick felt at ease, perhaps because of how similar this presence was to its mother. Naturally, it gave in, and the bond was made, a familiar contract for life was created faster than we imagined.

"I-Is it done?" Zephyrus wondered, feeling something within him and the egg. Their auras were now connected. "Ouch, my chest hurts- Aagh!" He suddenly started gasping for air.

"Zephy?" My mom asked. "Oh, you're forming a Soul Scape. Just calm down and breathe. It should be done quickly... Sylphy never had this problem, she didn't even experienced the usual soul aching."

"Hahhh... T-The pain is gone but- Ah! Where's the egg?!" Zephy looked around, the egg was gone.

"It must have gone inside your Soul Scape, little brother." I said with a smile. "Close your eyes and focus on your own soul, or a part of it."

"O-Okay..." Zephy tried doing just that. "Hmm, i-it's weird... T-There's like... a cave, a black cave inside. And every other way out is sealed. There's weird... engravings in them."

"That must be the Soul Scape. It is an ethereal, non-corporeal world where any Familiar can come and go. You can also enter it when you meditate or sleep." My mother explained. "Once the Familiar hatches from the egg, it should alter the soul scape some more. I guess this is a Phoenix of Golden Flames, so it would probably either bring a volcanic area or a desert similar to this one."

"Wow... That's awesome!" Zephy said. "And I somehow feel more relieved... Like stronger? But also freer and lightweighted."

"I guess that was your soul weighting you down, you had a very strong one since birth." My father said. "The more Familiars you get, the stronger your soul becomes too. I guess this could also means your soul feels less "heavy" as they take some of the weight themselves? Maybe."

"That's good to know, Zephy! Congrats!" I said, hugging my brother.

"Hahaha, t-thanks!" He said timidly, giggling a bit.

"Awesome!" Aquarina clapped. "Is the egg going to be okay inside? Won't it cool down?"

"Don't worry, a soul is rather comfortable for most eggs. That one should be alright." My mother nodded. "If anything, the bond between Zephy and the egg should feed it with enough Mana and heat it needed."

"O-Okay." My brother was still confused about many things.

We spent the whole morning having breakfast explaining him everything we knew about familiars and how to take care of them. How they worked, and more. He was slightly afraid of the responsibilities, but also looking forward to raising a little Phoenix chick.

After breakfast, we decided to test how he had assimilated his powers, making him release his Mana and then concentrate it into his Aura. He stood still in front of mom, dad, and me, as he focused on his physique.

"Slowly, pour your Mana into your body." My father said.

"Let it flow and then release it." My mother indicated.

"You can do it Zephy!" I cheered for him.

Slowly, his Aura continued growing out of his body, larger, and larger, and larger. And just as I had noticed with my special eyes, he indeed had a dual aura. One half was like cloud of black and dark red color, swirling together constantly, it released a rather vile presence. However, the other half, the new power he acquired, flowed like a golden flame that purified it all.

It was a contrast, a big one. But both of my parents thought it was perfect. One of the reasons why Zephyrus had been a rather sickly child might have been due to his incredibly strong affinity with darkness and blood elements, often giving him nightmares too, perhaps.

However, with this golden flame aura of purification, inherited from the phoenix, he'll be able to relieve some of the pressure of his natural affinity, and if he can master both the dark and light aspect, he'll become much stronger.

"Wooah!" However, that wasn't the only changes.

His Aura encompassed his body, suddenly covering him on some sort of robe or armor, made of golden flames aura, shaped like countless feathers. A helmet in the form of the phoenix's head appeared over his head, and big wings made of golden feathers grew from his back.

It was all made from his Aura, but it was still immensely surprising!

"He finally developed a Beast Aura!" My father celebrated.

"These are big news! Congrats, dear!" My mother hugged Zephy tightly.

"D-Did I do that?!" Zephy was still clueless and confused, but well, he was trying at least.

Chapter 1109 Luck Ranks Up

After a talk with my brother, my parents decided to rest from our journey for now. So we were going to stay in the Oasis today as well. We couldn't get going right away either, as they wanted to explore the Pyramid a bit. Well, me and my friends also wanted to explore the pyramid, so we were all up for it. It was still rather early in the morning, and mom decided to prepare her gear to explore the temple first.

My father decided to spar with Zephy as he usually did every morning to teach him swordsmanship, this time, also teaching him fire magic now that his element was strong enough thanks to the Phoenix's beast aura. Aquarina's parents decided to explore the desert and see if they can hunt more dangerous monsters so our path ahead would be more peaceful.

Ninhursag decided to accompany them as well, and Arafunn decided to spend a few hours teaching Zack a few more things. He had finally begun teaching him his first cultivation technique, which he named the Harmonious Wind Melody Cultivation Technique, which absorbs the essence of the Winds of the world to strengthen both magic circle and physique at the same time, it was an incredible cultivation technique that both relied on what uncle called "inner rhythm" and also on breathing techniques.

As for the rest of us, they all came to my Dungeon, as I invited them. Zack also came after telling Arafunn he'll be coming back in just half an hour. The elf didn't mind at all, as he shrugged and started eating fruit while floating above the Oasis.

"Okay but come back quickly, you know that my willingness fades away very quickly." Arafunn yawned. "Look, I'm already getting sleepy."

"Sure! I'll come back quickly, master Arafunn!" Zack said, entering my dungeon.

"I'm never going to get used to being called master..." My uncle sighed.

As we made our way into my dungeon, an endless grassland greeted us. We were quite far away from the town, and I intended to make it this way for now. We would get too sidetracked if I introduced them the whole town right now. It was time to evolve their spirits and help Luck Rank Up.

"Alright, I'm ready I think." Luck nodded, standing upfront, slightly nervous for some reason.

"Why are you so nervous?" I laughed. "It's going to be alright. Alice, allow the Rank Up of Luck please."

"Very well." Alice flashed into bright white light, as system messages appeared in front of me.

At the same time, Luck's entire body overflowed with a golden and red aura, his body and magical power were being boosted at a rapid pace. I could notice his muscles growing larger, and even his hair grew longer. I think he got slightly taller too!

Ding!

His Stats were quite interesting, to say the least. He had an amazingly... unique build. For starters, his defenses were considerably low. He was a front-line fighter but didn't have the best defenses. He had a decent health pool to make up for it, but Luck is someone that specializes on hitting hard and moving even faster.

His offensive prowess is superb in that regard, and with the inheritance from Elise, he can gain MP and Magic that she left for him through this Skill, making up for his weakness on the magic department and making him excel on it to an extent.

So it could be said that Luck might be the ultimate Hero of Wild Beasts, inheriting the magical power of another previous Hero of Wild Beasts who specialized on magic and could never unleash the full extent of the hero's powers.

It is as if Elise's amazing magic dwelling within him is not just power, but also her legacy and her soul, she's there with him, protecting him and helping him move to lengths she could never reach alone.

Talking about his Skills he got some pretty obvious ones. The Wings due to his newest beast spirit, and the Talon Arts must be something similar to kicking techniques, but for beasts. It is an equivalent to the Claw Arts. His magic circle and physique are kind of "aligned" as they progress, but he's still always one tier below on his magic circle than his physique.

"Wow... So much power." Luck gasped. "T-This is insane! My Magic Circles are overflowing with runes... And my body, look!"

His tattoos changed, growing larger and spreading more across his back and arms. As he took out his shirt, not only Lara but even Mist, Celeste and Celica blushed a bit after seeing how ripped he was.

I noticed Aquarina had no reaction. This further confirms she has probably never had any interest in males at all. I guess I am slowly leaning more towards being lesbian now, with Aquarina being my everything.

"Ahem! Anyways, you should get that shirt back, boy. You're making the girls blush too much." I sighed. "Well done! Now onwards to Level 80! Yaay!"

"That's going to take a long while..." Luck sighed.

Chapter 1110 All Ranked Up Familiars

With Luck's Rank Up out of the way, we moved to evolving every other Familiar that could. The process was swift, and the change of appearances varied greatly between each Familiar. The one that changed the most were Mister Teddy, Celica's golem, and Snowflake, Mist's spirit.

Mister Teddy now had an armor of black metal covering his body, they had sharp spikes over his body, and seemed quite heavy, but the giant golem could carry it with no problem. It easily towered over four meters as always. Aside from that, he also gained a giant black hammer. Both the armor and the hammer were part of his body, and could be unsummoned, summoned, and regenerate when broke using Mana.

Mister Teddy is one of Celica's mightiest Familiars, although only temporarily when she uses her variety of skills and spells to enchant his power to completely new levels. Aside from him, there's also mister jester, resembling a giant reptile golem wearing jester clothes. His attacks are very strong, and he can also conjure explosive cards out of nowhere, and illusion magic.

Then there are the others she keeps around and doesn't care much if they die, such as Mister Rabbit and Mister Rats. The Rats are much smaller, and they are her newest golems. They're around two meters each and move incredibly quickly, being quite useful to gain the attention of foes. Mister Rabbit can somehow float like Mister Jester, give strong kicks, and unleash flames from their kicks.

They're all quite unique and giving each one a system would be... too much, especially because she can remake them, combine them, or revive them all the time. So it was better to just give one to her main golem for now. Maybe Mister Jester would get another one later, he does have the potential to be a "main golem" for her army too.

Anyways, as for Snowflake, the little rabbit fairy-like light spirit, her evolution brought her a larger form. Before she was as big as an actual butterfly. But now she was as big as an actual rabbit, funnily enough. Her fluffy fur became even fluffier and white, big golden eyes, cute moth-like antenna atop her head, and her big butterfly wings were now even more dazzling. This spirit was truly unique.

As for the rest of the Spirits, such as Cumulus and Onyx, they looked almost the same. Cumulus now has an even larger emerald-colored eye, a bigger cloudy body, and golden spikes popping out of the white cloud body, which emanated lightning. As for the bat spirit Onyx, it now held longer, crimson wings, and a third eye on its forehead.

And these are their Status after evolution:

<Status System>

[Skills]: [Light Manipulation: Lv5] [Light Spirit Barrier: Lv6] [Healing Aura: Lv4] [Revitalizing Boost: Lv1]
[Armor of Light: Lv1]

Snowflake's stats are leaning for magic and mana above all other things, with some nice agility, luck, and charm too. All the stats of a fairy, without a doubt. Low health, strength and defense is to be expected.

Her new Skills, Revitalizing Boost, and Armor of Light, allow this little spirit to help us by boosting our stamina and resistance to exhaustion, while increasing a bit of our defense and health temporarily, while the latter creates an armor of light that can take block a bit of damage for us.

These skills are really good support coupled with her barrier and healing skills, but they're the best for her master, Mist, who is rather frail.

<Status System>

[System Owner]: [Cumulus]

[Race]: [Thunderstorm Spirit: ★★]

[Class]: [Lightning Storm Cloud Spirit: ★★]

[Rank]: [D+]

Cumulus is slightly similar to Snowflake but is much speedier. The new Skill Thunderstorm Domain creates a domain of black clouds around Zack, which enhances his lightning element power, while releasing lightning attacks that can paralyze to nearby foes. Meanwhile, Wind Armor is similar to Snowflake's Armor of Light, but made of winds.

[Skills]: [Shadow Manipulation: Lv5] [Cursed Cry: Lv4] [Shadow Bat Swarm: Lv3] [Blood Drain: Lv1]
[Cursed Chains Of Soul Paralysis: Lv1]

Onyx is a mixed bag, trying to be good at everything without completely specializing, although it still feels rather frail, it is not as frail as Snowflake. The new Skill Blood Drain grants this spirit the ability to drain blood from a foe's open wounds, greatly weakening them while temporarily boosting the spirit's stats by a small percentage. Lastly, the chains are... well, self-lightsnovel explanatory.

<Status System>

[System Owner]: [Mister Teddy]

[Skills]: [Teddy Bear Golem: Lv6] [Unwavering Protector: Lv7] [Furious Bear Rampage: Lv5] [Steady Fighter: Lv4] [Black Knight's Armor: Lv1] [Black Knight's Hammer: Lv1]

And the one that brought all the attention to himself, and a true specializer, Mister Teddy has no place for mana or magic, nor luck or charm. This giant golem only cares about protecting his master and nothing else. His two new Skills align with his new armor and hammer, allowing him to summon both, unsummon them, and easily repair them back to normal if broken by using mana.

"It's amazing how they evolve..." Celeste said. "And I also feel stronger when Onyx evolved!"

"It's so awesome!" Zack said. "Cumulus finally looks a bit more intimidating now!"

"Snowflake, ugh, you're too big to sit on my head now..." Mist groaned.

"Mister Teddy, you're so cool and strong!" Celica was fascinated.
