

Accidentally Pregnant By My Alpha Best friends

Chapter 561

[827 words]

Madeline:

For the first few minutes, I watched his face in utter shock.

Then I drew in a sharp breath, hid my face in my hands, and rubbed my neck.

"So she wanted you to kill me?" I asked Mathew.

He nodded casually.

Well, at first I thought he fucking attacked me, but then I realized he was trying to grab me and pull me aside. I don't know why he did that, but he did.

"But why?" I asked him.

Once again, he shrugged, making a foolish face as the corners of his lips turned down.

"All I know is that she wants you gone," he commented dramatically.

Then he gestured for the driver to leave.

He had already instructed the driver what to do.

The driver would tell everyone that he had been attacked by a man wearing a ski mask and that he panicked, sped off, and left me behind.

"Okay, I'll be honest with you," Mathew said as he turned to me.

We were sitting on a big log at the side of the road.

I noticed that he kept pulling out chocolates from his jacket.

He even handed me one, as if it would balance our sugar levels after giving me such terrifying news.

"Well, I'm listening," I said dramatically.

I held the chocolate bar in my hand.

I had not even finished one when he had already swallowed five of them.

He must have been running very low on sugar.

"What is so special about your tears?" he asked, dangling his legs like a child while focusing on his chocolate.

My spine stiffened and I drew in a sharp breath.

He noticed it and raised one eyebrow.

"Hmm, so there is something about your tears," he commented.

I shifted slightly on the log to turn toward him.

But I lost my balance and almost fell.

He quickly wrapped one arm around my waist and pulled me back, securing me in place.

That was when I noticed the way he was staring at me.

"Wow, you're beautiful."

The moment he said that, I placed my hands on his chest and pushed him back.

"I'm married," I said.

He shrugged, looking completely unconcerned.

"I'm not," he replied.

"Anyway, I was just complimenting your beauty. Don't act like you don't know it.

Everybody thinks the same about you, that you are beautiful."

It was the casual way he spoke.

I was not excited by him, but it was still a compliment.

Women often grow shy when they receive compliments like that.

So I could feel my cheeks warming slightly, but I forced myself to focus on the main subject.

"Why are you asking about my tears?" I questioned.

Just as I noticed him pulling out another chocolate, I snatched it from his hand.

"Mathew, I want you to focus on me."

The moment I said that, he smirked.

He placed one hand on the log and leaned forward, his eyes full of mischief.

"I will gladly do that."

I drew in a sharp breath and waved my hand dismissively.

"If you're not going to be serious, then I will leave," I hissed at him.

I reminded him that I had little time and needed to return home.

"Okay, okay, fine," he said.

"It seems that Silver wants your tears because the bottle she tested turned out to be tear fluid."

His words made no sense to me.

Meanwhile, he was already asking for his chocolate back.

"You know what? You can keep it. It's a gift," he said, dismissing it as he pulled another candy from his pocket.

"Wait. What do you mean by the bottle she tested?" I asked.

He shrugged again.

"The bottle she stole from your bag."

He spoke casually, but I knew it was not that simple.

I must have guessed something because he smiled again.

"So you are special."

Once again, he made the comment, this time with a cheeky grin.

"And why are you helping me? Aren't you their loyal royal beta?" I questioned anxiously.

I slowly pulled myself away on the

For all I knew, she could have planted Mathew to get my secrets out. "Well, in that case, you will have to trust me," he commented casually. He jumped off the log and held his hands up for me.

His fingers moved, beckoning me with another crazy smirk on his face.

"Come on, I'll catch you," he said softly in a deep, husky tone.

"No need. I can jump and land just fine," I replied.

I jumped, and with my terrible luck, I landed straight on my ass.

He started laughing like a bully while I narrowed my eyes at him.

"I don't trust you," I stated and he let out a deep sigh, his smile fading immediately.

"Then test me. I'll pass any test with flying colors," he commented.

I stared at his face in silence.

Then I nodded.

I realized that I was taking a huge step that could get me into trouble more than anything else.

Chapter 562

[840 words]

Elgin:

I was frantically going through my phone.

My fingers and palms had started to turn sweaty.

I looked up casually and noticed several eyes narrowed at me.

The alphas who had looked supportive when I arrived now stood with their hands on their hips, some with folded over their chests, shaking their heads in disapproval.

"I think I think somebody deleted it," I blurted out.

Graham shifted away from me, one hand on his hip while the other rubbed his forehead.

"Really? That is your excuse?" Madeline snapped.

I turned to look at her, and then my eyes moved to Yuvonne.

She was going to use this incident to present herself as the most innocent victim dragged into everyone else's mess.

I hated the thought of it.

"It was on my phone. I even sent it to my email," I told the leaders.

I tried to step closer to the table, but Lord William gestured with his palm for me to stop right there.

"I cannot begin to imagine how I am feeling right now."

Lord William's comment turned the entire hall silent.

"Then can you imagine how I'm feeling?" Yuvonne spoke up, her voice cracking.

Graham rolled his eyes, but I could tell why she was upset.

By the end of the day, my asshole of a friend had forced himself on her.

But somehow his problems seemed bigger, and hers did not.

The only reason I was angry with Yuvonne was because she had messed with me and because I wanted revenge and her pack.

Otherwise, I would have let it all slide for Madeline.

"Your Highness, how many times are we going to suffer because we are women?" Madeline said with intensity.

"My husband is in a coma. Her husband is in prison. So all the alphas around have started thinking that anyone can come and harass us." Her voice carried weight.

"And then put accusations on us, drag us before the council, and shame us."

Madeline spoke with rising anger.

Screw the pack.

I was probably ruining my chances with Madeline by going against Yuvonne.

"Graham, you came here with such huge accusations, and now you're saying you don't even have proof," Lord William said loudly.

"I'm not saying every victim must have perfect proof for everything," he continued.

"But the problem is," Lord William paused, "you have done this too many times." I bit my tongue awkwardly.

"You two have constantly been in disputes with these women. Every time you come here with another wild story." he slammed his hand on the table.

"And now you're telling me not only was an alpha easily drugged, but both of your phones suddenly had the videos deleted?" Graham shifted in his spot.

"You just said you saw it on your phone."

Lord William began shouting at us, and our heads slowly lowered.

"My son lost a child. I think it has affected his mind."

Lord Eldon suddenly spoke up.

The moment he said that, we both snapped our heads up and looked at him.

"I think that is the truth. And I think your alphas have lost their minds," Yuvonne added.

"They have too many packs to manage and too much drama in their lives."

Her words made Lady Abigail and Lord William exchange a glance.

The two nodded.

This was the first time Lady Abigail looked like she believed the others instead already a of us and it was bad sign.

FindNovel.net

"That is not the case. I'm completely sane," Graham hissed at Yuvonne, pointing at her.

"Really? Then where is the video?" she shot back.

"You're telling me your wife losing her child did not affect you?" she almost yelled at him.

I slowly stepped away from them.

The two faced each other, angrily grunting.

"Shut your mouth, or I will ruin you," Graham snapped.

Suddenly he realized what he had just said and sucked in a sharp breath.

Yuvonne smiled as if she had won.

Then she turned toward the council.

"Is there anything else, or are we all just going to go home like nothing happened?" she asked.

She was clearly trying to draw attention to the punishment we might face for lying before the council.

"Besides, if I am such a terrible person who deserves punishment, why did Graham withdraw the case?"

Yuvonne had just pulled the ground from beneath our feet.

Now she had turned the attack on us.

That was when it seemed like Graham got an idea, and he suddenly slapped his hands together.

"Because I have been blackmailed." For him, it was an aha moment.

"Yes, exactly. Now you know why I took the case back?" he spoke loudly, looking around for a moment. as if expecting appreciation. .net>

Everyone began to wonder if his explanation was true.

Then I heard Madeline scoff.

And in my gut, I knew she had come prepared with a response to his statement.

We were going to end up looking very bad.

Now all the eyes were on Madeline.

She took one step forward.

"That is not the case. He took the case back on his own free will. Madeline had a coet

a comforting look on her face.

"And I have proof as well." her words made heads snapped at her.

"And this time, unlike them, I am not going to say somebody deleted that proof."

Madeline spoke with such authority that both Graham and I gulped at the same time.

Accidentally Pregnant By My Alpha Best friends - Chapter 563[903 words]

Graham:

I felt my throat shut down.

I looked around and noticed the alphas' scrunched eyebrows.

They were all wondering what she was talking about and what kind of proof she had to paint me wrong.

Honestly, I was shaking too.

There was no way she could prove anything.

There would be no proof.

At this point, I was annoyed that there were so many people.

When I first arrived, I was happy there was an audience, but now, not really.

"What proof do you have?" Lady Abigail asked, not taunting her or showing anger in her tone.

Her entire demeanor had suddenly changed.

Everybody was watching us with suspicion.

"Well, if I present you the proof, would it make any difference? Would you be able to call Graham a liar? Because he very openly claimed that he was blackmailed into taking the cases back," Madeline questioned, her arms folded over her chest.

I just did not understand what had gotten over me that I had picked Kaylee over her.

If only I had married her that day instead of Baxter, my life would have been so different now.

All the embarrassment and the back and forth would not exist.

In fact, I would have been known as the husband of a woman who was not only intelligent but very creative too.

And the way she was standing before everyone now, after everything she had been through, without letting her posture deteriorate, proved that she was the best of the best.

"Of course, it will be the same way that Graham was trying to say about Yuvonne earlier. If there is proof, the other person who claims something else will be called a liar and definitely suitable for punishment, of course," Lord William spoke up.

He had always admired Madeline. And who would not?

She looked like a daughter anyone would love. But my situation was different.

I was panicking now more than ever.

"What did you do? Is there really proof?" Elgin asked, turning to me.

At this point, I could tell he was regretting coming here.

Now both of us were in the same boat.

"I don't know. There should be no video," I replied, trying to recall the day I took the case back.

I did not remember making any mistake.

Madeline walked over to the big screen, and my eyes widened.

She was not going to use the phone screen.

She was making sure it played on the big TV.

Elgin kept looking at me and then gave a head shake, reminding me that if she had something against me, we were both in great trouble.

But I decided to watch it first before jumping to any conclusions.

And then she played the video.

In the video, there was a corridor and a nurse entering behind Madeline into the hospital room where Yuvonne had been placed.

The problem was that the video started after the nurse walked in and began setting a camera in the corner.

I realized that at the time I had not paid attention to it.

I thought I was not even threatening her in front of Madeline, so everything was fine.

Everybody watched as I convinced Yuvonne that I would take the cases back.

In reality, I was the one holding the power while she was panicking.

Once the entire video was played, all eyes turned to me.

"Before you ask me why the camera was placed there, when I went to meet Yuvonne," Madeline began explaining the events.

"A doctor told me they were setting up the camera for a twenty-four-hour watch on her because they were afraid she might try to end her life again Madeline explained

"And so that is when the nurse walked in with the camera. However, I am not even sure what he was talking to her about prior to that but you can already tell that she is the one who is scared and he is the one in power," Madeline explained.

Almost everyone began to nod their heads while my father lowered his head and buried it in his hands.

Kaylee silently watched everything, and I was glad she did not speak up, or I would take my anger out on her.

"It does appear that you are the one convincing her that you will take the cases back and that she should relax. It does not seem like she has the power or that she is blackmailing you. She looks scared of you Lady. Abigail spoke up, pointing at the screen.

FindNovel.net

My eyes were still glued to the screen, and I was unable to explain it or come up with a lie.

It was pretty evident.

She was scared, and I was the one controlling her at that moment.

"Are you two going to say something, or are you just going to stand there like robots?" Lord William snapped.

I looked away from the screen. Elgin grunted and started to step back. "Dude, what the heck have you been up to?" Elgin hissed at me quietly, but the agitation in his body was obvious.

He was regretting coming here. And I knew he did not come here for me.

He wanted to look like a hero in front of Madeline and show that he was the one who held the truth.

"So many lies," Lady Abigail hissed.

"And then because I defend you two, I am the one who gets on my knees and apologizes," she added, throwing the pen on the table. It bounced off and fell onto the floor.

"Well, this time I think we need to take a strict step so that these two stop and leave these women alone," Lord William yelled, causing my spine to stiffen.

This backfired on me badly.

Accidentally Pregnant By My Alpha Best friends - Chapter 564[742 words]

Yuvonne:

I watched the entire game turn against them.

The video was gone, and so was Graham's credibility and dignity.

Tears streamed down my face as I sniffled when the truth was revealed.

Even though I would have loved to say that he was the abuser, I could not.

This victory was still enough.

At least he was standing before me with his head lowered, looking like a guilty asshole.

Lord William was the one who spoke after they discussed it with the others.

"You two will apologize to Yuvonne in public and on a recording that will be displayed everywhere on the cameras so that the next time an alpha tries to come forward and use his power or strength to attack someone innocent, he will remember this day," Lord William stated.

The words had barely left his mouth when both Graham and Eldon started shaking their heads.

"And we will also consider what to do with the packs assigned to you. The extra ones."

That hit harder.

I looked at Madeline with teary eyes, and she gave me a small nod.

"This is—I think this is too much. Just an apology for everything they had done to her before, for the previous case, would be enough," Eldon argued.

Lord Eldon immediately began defending his son. However, I could tell that Lord William was not having it.

"Really? Do you seriously think so? Because if they are going to apologize for the last time, then it means they must also remember that they were the ones who went to the mountaintop where they assaulted Madeline." everybody gasped.

"I guess it was proven that Yuvonne does not have the power that was used that day to control these two alphas," Lord William continued.

The mention of that old case turned heads toward Madeline.

Both Madeline and I stood there, our bodies shaking.

I sniffled because tears were trying to form in my eyes.

This had been something I had been waiting for.

"This is crazy, we do not do such a thing."

Graham stepped forward to explain, but Lord William raised his palm.

"For now, your apology will be enough," Lord William said to Graham, who lowered his head.

Then we were asked to leave for the main ground where many alphas and pack members were gathered, especially my pack members.

"Are you happy now?" Madeline whispered to me as she held my hand.

Honestly speaking, we did not expect things to go this well.

We only thought we would prove the truth, make Graham lose his credibility, and that would be it.

But for them to revisit the old case and talk about possibly opening it again felt like a huge victory for us.

As everybody started to gather around, I began to feel anxious.

Tears started to roll down my eyes, and Madeline was the one comforting me the entire time.

As for Graham and Eldon, I watched them standing at a distance with Lord Eldon and Kaylee.

Silver had arrived, and of course, she did not look happy.

She kept sending me deadly glares.

Right next to her stood their royal beta, Mathew.

He looked at Madeline, and I noticed the two made eye contact.

For a brief moment, he smirked at Madeline, and she rolled her eyes at him.

Madeline had told me about her encounter with him, and it seemed as if he had done the job.

"What are you thinking?" Madeline asked me, elbowing me.

"He really did it," I told Madeline, referring to Mathew.

"Yeah, I'm surprised myself that he helped us," Madeline mumbled in confusion.

Whenever she looked at him, he either winked or smiled at her.

He was definitely flirting with her.

At this point, I had to admit without any jealousy that Madeline was gorgeous.

Whoever caught a glimpse of her would act and feel a certain way.

Then it was time for the moment of truth.

However, this time, Lord William stepped forward.

Lady Abigail stayed behind.

Lady Abigail did not seem upset that Graham was getting punished either.

"So, we will start by saying this.

There had been a misunderstanding obshould it was a huge sli

"An innocent victim was accused of planning her own gang rape." The crowd went silent to listen to what, he had to say.

Lord William continued as he played the text messages.

I looked at them and then lowered my head.

Tears began to stream down my eyes.

Finally, everybody was looking at me with nothing but apology and empathy.

But when their gazes shifted to Graham and Eldon, there was subtle anger in their eyes.

Accidentally Pregnant By My Alpha Best friends - Chapter 565[934 words]

Graham:

All eyes turned to us, and I felt as if I was going to die.

The looks people were giving me were only the beginning.

I knew there would be more to come.

"With that being said, I would like to say that today, once again, the Alphas have disappointed us because they accused the Luna of one of the packs of something that did not happen. It was proven that they were wrong. Hence, it has been decided that the Alphas will publish an apology in front of everyone to Luna Yuvonne," Lord William announced.

He paused, took a deep breath, and then continued.

"There was also a case that happened previously which we will revisit. However, for now, I apologize for our wrong judgment. Luna Yuvonne, I hope you will forgive us, and the council as well," he added.

As Lord William spoke, Lady Abigail stepped forward and gave a very sad bow. My body was on fire.

Watching the teary smile on Yuvonne's face, as if justice had been served for her, was making me lose my mind.

I wanted to do anything, even lose myself, just to snatch that smile off her face. But sadly, I could not.

I could already tell Elgin was upset that he had been dragged into this because of me. But I had never asked him to come here.

"Now, Alphas, go ahead," Lord William stated very sternly.

I knew this apology would be the least of my problems.

The real humiliation would begin afterward.

But it was so unfair that they were asking us to bow before a corrupt Luna like Yuvonne.

Both Elgin and I started to walk toward her.

However, I stopped because I just could not do it.

This was too humiliating. I was an Alpha of two large packs.

But to my surprise, Elgin rushed forward and stood in front of Yuvonne, his head down and hands tied in front of his body.

"I'm sorry," he whispered, not raising his eyes.

Then he bowed to her.

My fists clenched.

That was when my father walked toward me and stood beside me.

"Don't fight it. You're going to make it worse," my father hissed at me.

I sucked in a deep breath.

All eyes were on us. People murmured and whispered.

Then I stepped forward.

This plan had failed, but how?

How the heck did the video get deleted from my phone?

I reached Yuvonne, and the moment I looked into her eyes, I felt stripped naked.

That was how insulting it felt.

"Luna Yuvonne, I'm sorry."

As soon as I said that, she stepped back.

I had only bowed my head when I realized she had decided not to accept my apology.

The entire crowd erupted into gasps.

"Your punishment was to just apologize, which I think is not enough," she spoke loudly.

Everyone frowned and began talking among themselves.

"But for now, that will be enough. However, the Moon Goddess will punish you, Alpha Graham, because you think you're invincible."

Then she began speaking in front of everyone in a way that made all eyes turn to me.

People began to wonder how horrible I must be for someone to call the Moon Goddess upon me.

I did not say anything.

I knew the more I spoke, the worse it would get.

Somehow, everything was going against me and my family.

I began to wonder if the Moon Goddess was really sitting on the last cloud, just cursing me and Elgin at this point.

Nothing we did was landing right.

"Everyone, dismissed now," Lord William said with a hand gesture.

Yuvonne and Madeline hugged while I started to walk away.

As briskly as I could, I walked toward my car.

The moment I reached it, not even caring whether my father and Kaylee were following behind me a few of the Alphas who had been present in the courtroom before stepped forward.

"You should be ashamed of yourself, Graham," one of the Alphas said loudly.

I stopped mid-step, my hand in the air as I reached for the door handle.

"Sorry, what was that?" I asked, turning toward him.

"I said you should be ashamed of yourself. Is this how you treat lonely women?" the Alpha continued, while the others stood beside him with their hands on their hips.

"Yeah, that is enough of you harassing lonely women. I'm so glad they made you bow before her." the other alpha commented.

"You should understand that she-wolves are an important part of our community. They are more sacred than an Alpha or any other rank could ever be. They are the ones who hold the pack together."

Another Alpha began lecturing me on the rights of a she-wolf as if I did not already know that.

"I would be very careful if I were you," I warned.

The Alpha began to chuckle, causing my body to stiffen.

"Well, I'm glad I'm not you because it seems like you're not so careful." The first alpha grunted,

"Besides, let's not forget that the Moon Goddess herself is a she-wolf. So Alpha Graham, stay away from the women of any pack Because. this time, the Alphas will take matters into our own hands and punish you."

FindNovel.net

A third Alpha spoke up, warning me. I closed my eyes for a moment and then opened them, my jaw clenching.

"Now let's go. There's no point in standing here and speaking with a shameless man like him," the first Alpha commented.

"Yeah, he's so stupid. I bet he has fantasies about every Alpha's Luna." The second alpha made a comment, making me groan inwardly.

"That's why he just made up the whole scenario in his head," another Alpha added as they began to walk away.

I turned to my side and noticed a group of she-wolves walking past.

They looked at me, then lifted their noses in disgust.

"This is the Alpha who attacks she-wolves. Be careful of him," they said as they continued walking.

Chapter 566

[768 words]

Madeline:

"There will soon be a case that will declare my innocence as well. That night I did not lie. That night Graham and Elgin were at fault."

I stood outside the room, my hand placed against the door as I spoke to Baxter.

There were only ten days left, and then I would get to meet my Baxter. I was so happy.

The doctor was optimistic as well.

Ever since Graham and Elgin apologized to Yuvonne, she had started to heal too.

We were working really hard to find the maid who had poisoned Ron's grandmother so that he could be free as well.

The world had started to heal.

The council leaders had begun to see the truth as well.

Lord William had promised that he would bring us justice.

He had also placed his hand on Yuvonne's head after everybody apologized to her.

She was really ecstatic.

She kept replaying the video over and over again. It was going viral.

So far, I had not received any news from Elgin or Graham, especially Graham.

It was in the news that they were going to reconsider the mountain top harassment case.

After I had spoken with Baxter, standing outside his door, I returned home.

But right at the door, I knew there was a guest inside.

"It is bold of you to come out in daylight," I said to Mathew.

He chuckled, lowering his hat as if that would hide his identity.

"So what did you tell her?" I asked as I entered the garden, and he followed after me.

"Well, I spun her a little story that I abducted you for a few hours, filled a few bottles with your tears, and then let you go. If I killed you, all the blame would fall on Elgin and Graham."

He paused as we reached the big tree and stood beneath it.

"And definitely Elgin would take the fall because you were coming from his pack. The driver who ran away had also been a witness that you were coming from Elgin's pack the last time."

He explained, folding his arms across his chest and leaning against the tree.

"You didn't thank me," he mumbled.

"Are you always this much of a douchebag, or do you just behave like that with me?" I asked in confusion.

I had seen him around Elgin and Silver, and I had never seen him this much of a flirt.

But somehow, every time he was around me, he would start smirking and speaking with his eyes.

"To be honest, just you," he replied.

"Anyway, I just wanted to come and let you know that I'm on your side. I hope I have proven myself, just like that."

He said it so simply that I watched his face in silence.

To be

I had no clue why he was on our side to begin with. I mean, what could he expect to gain from me?

"Well, thank you," I said, meaning it sincerely.

If it were not for him that day, the entire incident would have gone terribly wrong for us.

"No issues. I'm done with Silver and her shenanigans anyway."

As he responded, he fixed his jacket and looked away, once again lowering his head.

It was the discomfort in his body that caught my attention.

There seemed to be tension beyond him just being their royal beta but I could not quite put my finger on it "Anyway, I will inform you if something else comes up," he said. Suddenly his mood had soured as he started to walk away.

I watched him leave, then I returned home, holding pizza boxes.

"Yay, we are going to have a pizza party!"

Yuvonne yelled, hugging both my children.

My kids had grown so close to her. It was crazy how quickly things had changed.

"And in ten days, Daddy will be here with us," I said, clapping my hands.

Yuvonne looked at me and winked, making me playfully roll my eyes at her.

I was truly happy.

I wanted his comfort.

Over the course of time, I had seen people remained fixated on Baxter. I

I could not wait to tell him everything that had happened and how we had won in the end.

Or had we?

That night, I had the craziest dream.

It was almost like watching two graves in front of me. One for Gina.

And the second one was Baxter's.

I woke up in a sweat and rushed to the window, looking outside at the sky.

I did not know why, but that cabin felt as if it was not done with us yet.

That monster was not done with me.

Then I heard my children screaming from their room.

The hair on the back of my neck stood up as I rushed into their bedroom.

What I saw froze me.

They were both sitting in the bed, their eyes all white, throwing up blood.

Chapter 567

[772 words]

Livia:

"Don't try to be oversmart. Just do what I'm telling you," Nina hissed as she snatched her husband's file out of my hand.

Over the last few weeks, I had realized that the circumstances under which President Sawyer had fallen into a coma were very odd.

There had been no mention of him telling anyone that he was marrying Nina.

How the heck did she suddenly appear, claiming she was his wife?

Today, she must have heard me discussing it with someone because she snapped at me.

"I will take my leave," I uttered, bowing to her before I turned around and walked away.

My neck hurt, and my body ached.

I was so fucking tired trying to do my best to fill the shoes of the previous researcher, but it was not easy.

She had left such a mark that I could not fill her shoes, but I was still trying my best.

That was when I felt the itch again.

This had happened before, so I knew what it meant.

I had been feeling this strange anxiety in my body for a while now.

Then Daniel started blowing up my phone.

"Hello, Daniel. What is it?" I asked, putting the phone on speaker as I drove away from the hospital.

"You need to come to the mountain top. There is an emergency."

The urgency in Daniel's voice made me clutch the steering wheel tightly.

"I'll be there," I said, taking a wide turn and heading toward the mountain.

I knew where Daniel was.

He had been my best friend for a very long time.

We had studied together. We had worked in the same research facility, and he was now my assistant.

Well, kind of.

As soon as I reached the mountain top, I noticed an ambulance parked there.

They were taking someone inside.

"What is it?" I asked, approaching him in a low voice.

Daniel looked around to make sure nobody was listening.

"It dropped someone else this time," he whispered.

The hair on the back of my neck stood up.

"Who is it?" I asked, my hands in my lab coat pockets.

Inside the pockets, they were clenched tightly, hinting at my anxiety.

"I don't know. Some man. But let me tell you, he's very big and strong. However, it seems like the monster did a number on him. He's quite bloody."

Daniel explained, his glasses slipping down the bridge of his nose before he pushed them back.

I looked into the distance to see the man, but he was already being loaded into the ambulance.

"Take him to my research hospital," I yelled at the driver.

The driver nodded.

"What are we going to do? Are we going to hide this case as well?" Daniel asked.

I gave him a confident nod.

"Right now, the woman in charge is not someone I trust," I whispered, referring to Nina.

We stood close by, shoulder to shoulder.

"Well then, let's go see who this gentleman is and how he ended up here," Daniel said.

I gave him another nod.

The two of us walked toward our cars and drove behind the ambulance.

All this time I kept wondering why.

Why did this keep happening?

Where were these people coming from?

And why was it bringing them here?

When we arrived at the research hospital, the mysterious man was taken into the emergency instantly.

Other doctors arrived while I prepared to treat him as well.

Daniel and I entered the room.

The moment I saw him lying on the bed, I immediately knew he was not from the human lands.

Of course, I did not know every human. Nina would have the list.

But this man did not look like he came from the human lands.

He was too big, too strong, and too muscular.

I could not explain how, but he gave off the sense that he was not from here.

And then there was only one other option.

He had to be a werewolf.

But how the heck did that thing defeat such a big werewolf?

And why did it bring him here instead of killing him?

For the next few hours, his condition was critical.

We were doing everything we could.

The wounds were fresh, so I quickly.

It took us hours to patch him up.

Once we were done, we walked out of the room in confusion.

"His neurological response is extremely low," I mumbled after checking all his test results.

"He appears to be in a coma now," I added.

"But why would the monster attack him and leave him alive?" Daniel asked.

Daniel mentioning the monster made me remember the first time I had seen it.

My body prickled with goosebumps.

"I don't know, but all I know is that this man is a werewolf," I whispered.

Daniel's eyes widened.

I just did not know who he was.

Chapter 568

[918 words]

Graham:

I made it back home after some time because midway through, I had to transition to take my anger out.

Nothing was helping, honestly speaking.

I was losing my mind with every passing minute.

When I returned home, as expected, my father was waiting for me, and so were Kaylee and her father.

"I just want to ask you one thing. Did you cheat on me?" Kaylee screamed as she came at me.

The moment she tried to punch me like she always used to do, I grabbed her hand and shoved her away so hard that she almost tripped, but her father supported her and prevented the fall.

Her father tried to step closer to warn me, but I raised my fingers at him.

That was my warning for him to stay back, and thankfully, he understood.

He did not want my anger to fall on him because he could tell I was already losing my mind.

"I'm not in the mood to answer anyone," I stated loud and clear.

"But just to satisfy all your egos, there was a video, and it is gone."

I continued while everybody looked at me as if I were some kind of liar, spinning another excuse for my actions.

Then I rushed back into my room, which was the guest room now.

I was beginning to realize that I wanted to change that.

I no longer wanted to stay in the guest room.

My room was the bedroom.

As soon as I entered the room, my father came up to me.

I turned to him and sighed tiredly.

"If you are going to punish me or yell at me..."

I only started speaking when a hand gesture from my father silenced me.

"You keep saying somebody deleted the video. I have a theory," my father spoke in a soft and gentle tone, not a judgmental one.

"Really? Tell me," I insisted because I was curious.

I was actually annoyed that nobody had believed me so far.

So when my father said he had a theory, I expected him to believe me.

"Yes, I think it is Kaylee."

As my father said those words, the hair on the back of my neck stood up.

"What do you mean?" I questioned, even though I already knew what he meant.

"There is only one person who could have been snooping around your phone, and I suspect it to be Kaylee," my father grunted, his hands on his hips, not looking guilty for accusing Luna.

However, the thing was that I believed my father too.

"Besides, I have noticed that your wife looks very happy after Penny's death."

My father's words ran through my head, and I knew exactly why.

I stared at him, wondering if I should tell him.

But there was a right time for everything, and I was going to wait for it.

"Yeah, I have noticed it too," I replied in the same suspicious tone, gently touching my temple because I could not look past the insult I had been put through.

"Don't worry about it. People will forget about it as long as you don't make another excuse," my father said, gently patting my shoulder.

He looked so tired.

Both of us had been through a lot.

We were not such bad people.

We had made mistakes, sure, but we did not deserve such a harsh punishment.

"She turned out to be such a disappointment," my father commented, his hand gently placed on his chest.

It was as if every second he was missing Penny, and it bothered me.

I had not seen him be so traumatized and upset even for my mother.

But that was for another day.

I was focusing on Kaylee.

Could it really be that she was the one who deleted the video?

I could not be sure.

"Anyway, did you look at Madeline today?" my father asked, and my body stiffened.

"Why? What about her?" I questioned.

She was such a forbidden thought that I began to curse at myself.

"She is such a perfect woman," my father's words broke me inside.

If only we had not been greedy in our lives, at least I would have had her in my life.

"Well, Father, after today there will never be a chance that she will even look at me."

As soon as I said that, tears started to blur my vision.

"You know why? Because I'm an idiot," commented, sniffing and rubbing against the back of my hand and my cheek.

I had her.

Right there with me.

But I ruined it.

And now she was someone I could not even get close to.

That proved the mistake I had made that led me to losing her forever.

"But if you try, you can be with her," my father retorted.

"I'm not asking you to force her, but try to win her heart. Redeem yourself." he continued.

"You know, all this lost reputation will come back once Madeline is on your side. She is kind of eye candy for everyone right now. The woman who is saving children. .net

He was not wrong though, Madeline was everybody's desire now.

"The woman who can do no wrong."

My father continued explaining, and I began to ponder it myself.

However, for now, I had someone else in my mind.

"Father, I'm not thinking about Madeline for now. I have to fix my mistakes and heat first, But don' worry. In the end, Madeline will be with me."

As I said that, I placed a hand on my father's shoulder and gave it a gentle squeeze.

My other hand rested on my hip.

However, my father looked a little confused.

"Is there somebody else in your life?" my father questioned, his brows furrowing.

"There is, and don't worry. She's way better than Kaylee."

I finished, taking a deep breath.

But when I looked back at the doorway, I saw Kaylee standing there.

She had heard it.

Chapter 569

Silver:

"Maybe you should stop helping your friend anymore. He's not worth it," I said to him.

Alpha Ron and I sat together in the car as we drove straight to that widow's place. Lady Greta and my father were also with us.

"You will be the last person I would take advice from," he commented in annoyance.

I knew things were still pretty rough between us, and he was barely talking to me.

But I was doing my best to make him trust me again.

I knew it was going to be a hard task, but I was willing to do everything in my power to make him believe that I had changed.

That it had been a one-time mistake.

A drunken mistake.

However, he knew I was not drunk when he arrived.

"Well, son, I will be honest with you. She is not wrong. That humiliation was a lot. I have had to shut my phone down ever since that incident happened."

His mother grunted, folding her arms across her chest stubbornly.

Elgin had chosen to drive himself while the other warriors followed with us.

Ever since the incident happened, there had been a few threats made toward Elgin and many toward Graham.

Many alphas were betting on who would drag him into the middle and slap him around.

People were going nuts over it for Yuvonne and Madeline's sake.

I was honestly so shocked by all that had happened.

I never expected these two to make such a mistake, at least not Elgin.

Then I began to wonder if I should have just asked Mathew to kill Madeline that day.

But I got the tears, so I was secured for now.

I was going to use them at the right moment.

Right now, we have decided to meet up with my widow friend, Rosetta.

Rosetta had very bad luck.

For some reason, whenever she got married, she would either divorce or her husband would die.

She was more like a black widow.

However, I had not said that to Elgin.

His alarm bells would start ringing.

I did not believe that theory though.

I just thought she was unlucky and kept finding love in the wrong places.

Besides, I heard her pack was really rich in many ways.

There were secrets that the land she owned was heavily magical as well.

However, her warriors were so well trained that no one had dared step into her land without her permission.

I knew her from our school days.

We used to be good friends, but then I focused on Elgin and things kind of shifted.

I was no longer in contact with anyone because I was afraid my secrets would come out.

"What exactly are we going there to do?" Elgin asked, driving with one hand on the steering wheel while the

Ex his side:

I turned slightly to look at my father and his mother.

The two were just staring out of the windows on their sides.

"Remember I told you? We should get close to her."

Then I paused and made a gesture, sliding my hand sideways across my neck.

"And you think it will be that easy?" Elgin grunted, clearly not satisfied with the idea.

I knew why.

The recent events had made him very skeptical of whatever steps we took from now on.

It seemed as if we had always believed everything was easy for Alphas.

However, it had turned out not to be so.

"It's not going to be easy, I admit. But trust me, trying will be worth it."

I comforted him, reaching over to touch his arm.

He grunted and looked away.

My kids were coming in a separate car with the nannies.

The reason was that ever since Elgin had to apologize to Yuvonne, he had really lost his mind.

At times, he would drive so crazily that I was scared for my daughter's safety.

When we finally arrived, Rosetta had already sent her warriors to the border to guide us to the mansion. Gontent

We drove behind the warriors until we reached the large black mansion.

It was entirely black, and it looked strange.

We got out of our cars and silently walked into the mansion.

There she was, Rosetta, with bright red hair and green eyes, staring at us while dressed in black.

"Welcome. I welcome you to my home," she spoke softly, as she always did.

Now she seemed even quieter, or perhaps more elegant.

After marrying so many Alphas and inheriting their packs after they died, she had become something more.

Something almost royal.

But there was another problem.

As I hugged her, my attention shifted to Elgin.

I noticed the way he was staring at her.

I just hoped I was not making a mistake by bringing him here to meet her.

Accidentally Pregnant By My Alpha Best friends - Chapter 570 [855 words]

Graham:

Every day was a reminder of that fucking humiliation.

I was losing my mind. I wanted revenge.

My father had convinced me time and time again to just let it go, to not dwell deeper into the matter, but I just could not hold it in.

And then there was Kaylee. Even the sight of her angered me.

On the other hand, Sherry was really good at taking care of me.

To be honest, I was really enjoying my time with her. Everything was just perfect.

I had finally made up my mind that I would take extreme measures now.

"You want to do what?" Sherry asked me, speaking with me on the phone call.

Sherry was honestly very close to me now, so much so that she had actually asked me if I would tell the truth, and I told her the truth that yes, I had blackmailed Yuvonne.

To be honest, she was on board. She said I did the right thing.

"I just want Ron dead. I have planned a few warriors who will poison him in prison, or maybe we will pay some criminals in the prison who will kill him. I mean, it will not seem like a big deal. Things happen in prison," I explained to her, walking from one corner of the room to the other anxiously.

That would be my ultimate revenge on Yuvonne, and she was not powerful enough to take care of the pack.

So after Ron dies, she will be the widow of a man who had killed his grandmother.

Hence, his name will never be mentioned as an Alpha, and she will never be mentioned as a Luna.

The pack will be open for anyone to grab.

I knew I would be the last one to grab it because they were already saying that I was losing my mind because I had too many packs to take care of.

But I did not even care about the packs at this point.

I just wanted Yuvonne to suffer.

"But make sure the warriors you are asking to pay the criminals are someone you can trust," Sherry suggested, making me nod my head and rub my face in my hands.

This was what I liked about her.

She never judged me.

She was evil in just the right way, but she was loyal to me.

"After that, I don't think Yuvonne will even be in her sane mind. She will be sent to the hospital, and you can just get rid of her there," she added, and I smiled at the suggestion.

"No, I'll never get rid of her. She will stay alive, looking insane," I commented as I clenched my jaw, remembering how I had to bow in front of her.

"Anyway, whenever we meet in public again," she asked me, and I could already guess.

She just could never get enough of me.

"How about we meet tonight?" I suggested, stopping in my steps and checking myself in the mirror.

I looked like a fool, the fool who had been played by someone like Yuvonne.

"Tonight will be perfect," she suggested, a little snicker leaving her lips happily.

"Yeah, because tomorrow I will be waiting for the warriors to pay the criminals, and, you know get rid of Ron at once," I said with a scoff as I fixed my collar in the mirror.

"Tomorrow Yuvonne will no longer be able to taste the victory from days ago," I hissed.

"That is perfect. Let's meet tonight then. I cannot wait for you to arrive," she suggested.

Then I nodded my head.

However, the minute I ended the call, I decided to get ready.

I watched Kaylee rush into the room.

"You were talking to her. Your sidekick, weren't you?" she started to scream at me almost immediately.

"Put your finger away, Kaylee, and remember, you're not in a position to question me, I immediately shut her down, watching her eyes start to get teary. .

"Why are you so cold to me? Why? And are you seriously going to continue with this woman?" asked me, holding on to my jacket and not letting me walk past her.

"Kaylee, let me go. I don't want to speak with you right now," I demanded, grabbing her hands and then freeing myself.

But the minute I began to rush toward the closet, she held on to my jacket again, making me swing and slap her hands away.

Gone were the days when she would abuse me and I would just not say anything to her.

"I will go and call the council and tell them you're cheating on me!" she finally yelled.

Of course, that was something I knew would come someday.

But she had no idea I had prepared for this very day.

I turned around and faced her, a smile on my lips.

She had no clue.

If I could get rid of Ron, I could get rid of her very easily.

I mean, I did bow down to Yuvonne because of a silly mistake, but the truth was that

I killed her child and I never got punished for it.

I got away with the biggest crime.

And the apology was kind of a slap on the wrist.

"And then I will tell them that you killed Penny and her children."

Then, in the calmest way, I shook the ground from underneath her feet.
