

Accidentally Pregnant By My Alpha Best friends

Chapter 906[747 words]

Madeline:

In a strange way, watching them suffer felt incredibly satisfying.

Every time they discovered that someone they had wronged was doing better than them, or that someone they had believed was lost was actually alive, the shock on their faces was priceless.

In fact, their attempts to reconnect kept backfiring.

When Elgin tried to approach Elara, she simply walked away from him.

Did Elgin really think he could call out to them and they would come running back, forgetting everything he had done to them in the past?

Then it was finally time for the dethroning ceremony.

The two of them immediately began crying at the top of their lungs.

Honestly, I should have expected it.

They resisted the entire process, refusing to cooperate or even get down on their knees.

Eventually, Baxter had enough.

He stepped forward and punched both of them in the nose, knocking them to the ground before the warriors pinned them down.

I stood off to the side with Baxter's arm wrapped around me, watching everything unfold.

"Help us, Baxter-you are our friend-" one of them kept screaming.

His cries continued until the Moon Goddess's lightning struck them.

And finally, it was over.

Both of them passed out.

"The next time they wake up, they'll be back in prison, only this time they'll be even more alone. This isn't over for them yet," Baxter murmured to me as we started walking back toward the car.

"Let's go back home, please. Let's just-start a new chapter now," I murmured.

Baxter gently rubbed my back as we headed toward the car.

The whole way back to the mansion, I just rested my head on Baxter's chest.

"I have good news for you," I told him.

The moment we arrived at Rosetta's mansion and stepped inside, Baxter stopped in the doorway and turned toward me.

Everyone else hurried past him into the house.

I knew exactly why.

We had planned this.

Baxter clearly noticed something was off, especially when Ron and Byron practically had to push past him to get inside.

From the confused look on his face, I could tell he was wondering why everyone was acting so strangely.

He was about to find out.

"Good news? What kind?" Baxter asked, curiosity shining in his eyes.

I bit my bottom lip and walked ahead of him.

His eyebrow rose as he watched me sway my hips down the hallway toward the main living room.

I turned the corner and stopped among everyone else.

Baxter appeared a moment later.

His eyes widened.

The entire room had been decorated.

My parents were there. Livia, Nala, Ron, Yuvonne, and everyone else had gathered around, waiting for him.

"What?" Baxter breathed, placing both hands against his chest.

"I'm pregnant."

For a second, he simply stared at me.

Then Ron and Byron cheered the loudest.

"You are?" Baxter's voice came out filled with so much love that my chest tightened.

He rushed toward me, wrapped his

Det

arms around my body, and lifted off the

off the floor, spinning the arotng as t laughed. t FindNovel.net

"My daughter!"

My father's voice immediately rose above everyone else's.

Baxter carefully set me down, and I turned toward him.

My father pointed at me and then at himself.

"My daughter- pregnant?" he repeated, beaming at my mother.

She looked at him proudly.

He was learning to speak remarkably quickly and had already begun returning to many of his normal activities.

"Well, I'm not the only one with good news," I announced.

I turned toward Yuvonne.

She bit her bottom lip and giggled before glancing around the room.

Ron's eyes widened the moment he saw her expression.

"Wait-" He hurried toward her and gently placed a hand over her stomach. "Is it true?"

"Yes. I'm pregnant."

The moment the words left her lips,

bet

flower petals began falling from the ceiling, showering them as Ron pulled her into his arms.

The room erupted around them while they held each other beneath the falling petals.

"Yay! Mommy is going to bring us more siblings!" Elara, Gina, and Bodhi yelled, making all of us laugh.

They rushed into the room with Hailey and Hannah right behind them.

It was funny because they were supposed to make their entrance four minutes earlier.

They were late.

The moment they noticed the flower petals scattered everywhere and everyone already celebrating, all of them stopped in their tracks. swnovels

"You guys were early," Bodhi complained.

I looked at Baxter, then back at Bodhi.

"He's arrogant, just like you," I commented.

Baxter gave my ass a playful squeeze.

five

"Don't be naughty," I whispered, smiling as I wrapped my arms around him.

I stayed close to Baxter while watching my children interact with everyone around them.

A few years ago, I had been a broken eighteen-year-old, pregnant and completely unsure of what to do with my life.

Now, I was going to enjoy every moment of this new beginning with the people I loved.

If you find any errors (non-standard content, ads redirect, broken links, etc..), Please let us know so we can fix it as soon as possible.