

The Almighty Dragon General

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 6881-Herodias and Yegor looked at James in shock. Everyone else's expressions also changed drastically.

Thea shook her head and reprimanded, "You're drunk, James! How about we stop here for today?"

Morgott stood up and exclaimed, 'The Chaos Absinthe is fantastic! It can increase one's Chaos Essence! Drinking more of it is good...um...'

Before he could finish speaking, Thea kicked him.

Seeing Morgott sprawled on the ground, the tense atmosphere instantly eased as everyone burst into laughter.

Truett pointed at Morgott and laughed, "It's a blessing to be hit by Thea.¹ "Right? Not only is she my buddy's wife, but she's also the Hokuwn's ruler. She could trample on anyone she pleases." Morgott patted his rear and stood up. He glanced at Thea, snatched the Chaos Absinthe on the table, and scooted to a corner.

His petty behavior elicited laughter from everyone once more.

James clenched his fist and said, "Alright, that's enough. Let's focus on the matter at hand. Before deciding whether to strip away your powers and begin cultivating anew, there's another important issue we need to address."

He placed the Xyloria Tai Chi Pearl on the table as he spoke.

Everyone's eyes widened in shock as they saw the pearl.

James explained, "Yehria used this pearl to dominate the realms below the Thirty-Third Heaven. Now that it's in our possession, we should discuss how to utilize it best."

Everyone exchanged bewildered looks but remained silent. Even the usually fearless Truett was at a loss for words.

They understood the situation's gravity, and every word or suggestion they made could potentially determine the fate of the Greater Realm's living beings.

The responsibility was immense.

James furrowed his brow and said, "Everyone's entitled to their opinion, so why are you not speaking?"

Everyone present remained silent.

At that moment, Morgott, lounging in the corner, said nonchalantly, "With the Xyloria Tai Chi Peal in possession, we hold sway over the destiny of all living beings in the Greater Realms. We wield the power over life and death. Who would dare challenge or question US?"

James cast a disdainful sideglance at Morgott and said, "Should I refine you right now?"

Morgott recoiled and promptly fell silent, focusing on his drink.

Truett directed his gaze at James and said, "This matter will really affect all of the Greater Realm's living beings. It's beyond our authority to offer suggestions."

Xitlaly added, "The decision should rest with you, James. You're already the ruler of all the realms below the Thirty-Third Heaven right now."

Herodias said tentatively, "Regardless of how you wish to govern over them, I hope you be kind toward the Greater Realm's living beings. It hasn't been easy for them."

Yegor suggested solemnly, "If you ask for my opinion, I'd say we begin by rectifying the Tai Chi World. The root cause of the Greater Realm's chaos is Yehria's way of governing over the Tai Chi Realm. She blurred the lines between good and evil.

"As a result, creatures throughout the Greater Realms were without proper guidance and structure, leading to a lack of order and regulations.

Rebella added solemnly, "Actions have consequences. If those in positions of authority or leadership are bad examples, those under them will likely follow suit.

With the Tai Chi World in turmoil, the Greater Realms under its jurisdiction will never have proper order."

Just as Lesia was about to speak, Morgott interjected, "Your perspectives are so superficial. You've only seen the surface but not the matter's true essence. But I can't really blame you. After all, you're all too weak."