

The Almighty Dragon General

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7061-James sneered, "I need a favor from you. If you get it done, I promise to fight you with all my strength and show no mercy after we leave the Gate of Mystery.

Youcef's eyes lit up with expectation, but his face darkened in the next second.

"With my current strength, am I even worthy of being your opponent?" James squinted and asked, "Yes or no?"

Under his sharp gaze, Youcef felt pressured.

Yianni sighed and said, "James rose from nothing to someone who can dominate the Greater Realms and suppress countless powerhouses. You were born in the Forty-Ninth Heaven and have access to abundant resources. Do you have no confidence?

"If so, I truly pity James for having an opponent like you."

Hearing Yianni's words, Youcef slowly clenched his fists and regained his fighting spirit. He stared at James and asked, "What do you want from me?"

James answered, "I'll send you out of the Gate of Mystery, but I need you to deliver a letter to your father."

After speaking, a shining scroll appeared before Youcef.

Youcef's brows furrowed. At his cultivation rank, he could not discern what was written on the scroll. He said bitterly, "So I'm only fit to be a messenger?"

Ignoring Youcef's rants, James asked, "Can you tell me what the Wuia Integration Gathering is?" "It's nothing more than a gathering to recruit and conspire under the guise of welcoming back the Waitara Path. It should be called a recruitment gathering instead." Contempt flickered across Youcef's face.

James asked smilingly, "Oh? Is it to fight for the Forty-Ninth Heaven?"

"Yeah," Youcef answered without hesitation.

Lesia asked, "The opponent is Lord Goyo?"

Youcef looked at Lesia but did not answer. It was clear he was only willing to respond to James. Even though he was defeated, he only acknowledged James. To everyone else, he remained arrogant.

James said calmly, "Alright. I'll send you out."

Youcef waved his hand and shouted, "Wait! I know I'm not in a position to negotiate terms with you, but..." His voice trailed off, and he dropped to his knees. "I'd like to ask for someone to accompany me."

Lesia, Morgott, and Yianni exchanged bewildered glances after seeing Youcef kneeling before James.

James looked at him helplessly and said, "You want to save him to honor the master-discipleship relationship between you two."

Youcef said earnestly, "The grace of teaching is a great gift. Though he suppressed me, it's because he must obey orders, still, his guidance to me was genuine and our bond even more so."

James nodded gently and said, "You're very righteous and know to be grateful. I respect that about you. However, you won't be helping him. Instead, it'll be harming him."

Youcef's eyes widened in shock.

James said calmly, "You should know your father better than US. He had already decided Hankin's fate when he asked him to lead the operation. If Hankin refuses, what awaits him is an even more tragic end."

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7062-Youcef came to a sudden realization. Considering his father's cruelty, it was likely Hankin, who had failed to complete his task, would face a grim fate.

However, Hankin stood a chance of survival if he stayed in the Gate of Mystery with James. He abruptly kowtowed and climbed back to his feet.

James unleashed a Sword Light toward Youcef without hesitation, instantly sending Youcef out of the Gate of Mystery.

Lesia, Morgott, and Yianni then turned toward James, their eyes reflecting admiration and respect.

While they never questioned James' strength and wisdom, his generosity and tolerance for others truly impressed and humbled them.

At that moment, James waved his hand. The two black dragons entangling Hankin drew him into the Nothingness Formation.

With a loud thud, Hankin crashed onto the massive lotus. As the black dragons soared into the void with roars, he gasped for air and scoffed bitterly.

“Congratulations, James. You’ve grown strong enough to dominate the Greater Realms and challenge the Forty-Ninth Heaven. To die in your hands, I have no regrets.” With that said Hankin closed his eyes and resigned to his fate.

James smiled silently.

Morgott, Lesia, and Yianni remained wordless yet amused.

Hankin suddenly snapped, “Why aren’t you taking action? Are you planning to mock me further?” James did not respond. The trio, on the other hand, smiled.

Hankin roared, “If you’re not going to kill me, then throw me into the Nothingness Formation and let me suffer with them.” James and his companions remained calm.

Hankin rose to his feet and growled, “What’s your deal?!! Do you intend to manipulate me with fake kindness? You may be the Chosen One, James, but your collusion with Morgott has plunged the Greater Realms into chaos! Though you’re strong, I won’t yield to you.”

“Ha! You’re provoking me now?” Morgott lunged forward with his spear but was restrained by Yianni.

Morgott pointed at Hankin and said, “Do you need me to remind you, fool?

When I ascended to the Forty-Ninth Heaven, you were still a mere servant. How dare you address me with such disrespect?”

Hankin laughed mockingly, then shook his head. “You were once a ruthless demon. Now, you’re just James’ lackey. Aren’t you also just a disgraceful trash?”

“You...” Before Morgott could charge forward, Yianni intervened and dragged him away.

Amid Morgott’s outburst, Hankin lifted his head and laughed defiantly as if showing his resolve to face death with dignity.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7063-Hankin, Lesia, and James exchanged glances before cautiously stepping forward.

Lesia questioned, “Will you die as a slave of the Qadeer Sect or as Emperor Benevolence of the Greater Realms?” Hankin’s face darkened as he asked, “If I’m not mistaken, you’re the Soremsia of the Nine Caeloros Gods of Nothingness’ leader, Frona, correct?

Intrigued, Lesia put her hands behind her back and replied, "You can call me Lesia. Am I also considered a demon to you?"

Hankin was at a loss for words, and his face twitched with embarrassment. At that moment, he caught a glimpse of James calmly sitting down while enjoying some Chaos Absinthe and instantly felt a shiver down his spine.

James was clearly in charge of the current situation. However, he remained silent and allowed a subordinate to humiliate Hankin and change his mind about dying.

Hankin recognized that James was an extraordinary entity, excelling in cultivation, strength, wisdom, and strategies. If he were devoted to cultivation, he would become the greatest of his generation and could even surpass the Five Path Emperors. His potential and status would rival the Waitara Path.

However, if he were to turn to a corrupted path, he could bring far greater chaos than Morgott. It would become the worst catastrophe the Greater Realms would have to face.

Hankin slowly closed his eyes as if he had made an important decision. He ignored Lesia's question and approached the table where James sat. He picked up a jar of Chaos Absinthe, opened it, and began to drink.

Lesia watched him with curiosity.

James, on the other hand, simply smiled indifferently and continued to drink.

Suddenly, Hankin smashed the empty wine jar on the table, causing a shining light to emerge. He looked at James and said, "Since you won't kill me, will you allow me to say a few words?"

"Sure," James replied, then continued to gulp his wine.

"You..." Hankin was irritated by James' disrespectful mannerisms but took a deep breath and suppressed it. He sneered, "As the Chosen One, you had the chance to become the Supreme Path. Why degrade yourself and ruin your future by teaming up with Morgott?"

James paused slightly, a smile forming as he continued to drink.

Hankin snapped, "You're hopeless. So many had high expectations for you, yet look at how you turned out-"

Lesia suddenly interjected, "Who is to determine what evil and righteousness are? Then, tell me, where do you stand?"

Stunned, Hankin turned to Lesia. You...:"

Lesia put her hands behind her and retorted, "Is monopolizing the Greater Realms' cultivation resources and suppressing all living beings considered righteous? Is rewarding those who obey you and punishing those who refuse to yield really the way? Not only that, you form factions, exclude those with different opinions, and want to rule over all living beings.

"You went against the Dernaturae and blocked living beings' cultivation path. So is what you've done considered evil or righteous?"

Hankin's brows furrowed in frustration, but he was unable to respond.

Lesia continued. "Did Goyo and Qadeer fight for the prosperity of all living beings, or was it for their own interest and to remain in charge of the Greater Realms?" Her condemning words left Hankin's face flushed with shame. He could not find the words to refute her.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7064-Hankin had personally witnessed what Goyo and Qadeer had done in the past.

It was very clear to him what they were both fighting for.

However, he had no choice but to submit to them. Lesia's words had hurt his pride, and his deep-seated ambitions gradually burst out.

Lesia looked at him and said, "You're Emperor Benevolence, one of the Nine Caeloros Gods of Nothingness. In terms of status, you're only second to the Waitara Path.

'Vet now, you're a mere follower of the Waitara Path, and even for this adherent, you're prepared to sacrifice your life out of loyalty. How dare you pass judgment on whether James' character?"

As if his true nature had been laid bare, Hankin quivered all over, his complexion draining of color. At that moment, his former arrogance had completely vanished.

"I understand," Lesia remarked, pacing around Hankin with a smile. "You're struggling amidst the intrigues and power struggles of the Haleth Realm. You gradually lost your way and seek oblivion as an escape from your suffering."

"But have you considered the repercussions? What justice or morality will remain in this realm once you're gone?" At those words, Hankin jerked his head up, eyes widened in horror and disbelief.

Lesia raised her voice and said firmly, “You may be liberated, but what about the Greater Realms’ living beings?”

At that moment, Hankin seemed to have realized the grave consequences. He dropped to his knees with a thud, his expression lifeless.

Lesia reprimanded solemnly, “We have Nine Caeloros Gods of Nothingness.

From the Leere Daoism, a total of Forty-Nine Daoisms were derived. However, only nine Supreme Emperors formed, namely life and death, yin and yang, good and evil, morality, beauty and ugliness, space, cause and effect, time, and reincarnation.

“Out of them, morality holds the fourth place, standing independent from good and evil, beauty and ugliness, yin and yang, and cause and effect. Why is that?”

Hankin shut his eyes in anguish, unable to speak.

Lesia continued, “Because we cannot halt the strife, deceit, and bloodshed in the Haleth Realm. Thus, morality stands as one of the last bastions.

Morality is the self-discipline of the spirit, the yardstick for introspection and correction of deeds, distinguishing between right and wrong, beauty and ugliness, and discerning the consequences of actions.

“And the other is cause and effect. Every action carries its consequences.

“Morality embodies compassion, the final frontier for self-reflection, while cause and effect signifies power, the law that terminates the cycle of reincarnation and marks one’s attainments.”

Lesia pointed at Hankin and said sorrowfully, ‘Vet, you, the embodiment of the Morality Daoism, what have you done for the beings of the Haleth Realm? They understand cause and effect but forsake morality. They are consumed by fear rather than guided by virtue.”

Her words pierced Hankin’s soul like sharp needles, causing him to tremble violently and tears to stream down his cheeks.

After taking a deep breath, she elaborated, “The Waitara Path consumed eight of the daoisms, yet you were untouched. In fact, he doesn’t seek after you and doesn’t want anything to do with you.

“You had the perfect chance for you to break free from the Waitara Path and become an independent entity in the Forty-Ninth Heaven like Taichu.

“But instead, you chose to compromise. Even after we reclaimed the Waitara Path’s body, you aligned yourself with a disciple of his.

“You could argue it was necessary to protect our Daoism. But now, as beings rise to challenge Waitara Path’s oppressive laws, why do you stubbornly oppose of them?

Lesia bent down, meeting Hankin’s gaze. “Are you really that scared to the point you forgot you’re an immortal daoism?”

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7065-Hankin bellowed, “No, I never forgot! I just didn’t want to witness any more suffering, bloodbaths, and catastrophes!”

Lesia snorted, “You’re finally being honest.”

After the remark, she turned to James and said, “It’s your turn, Master!”

James looked at Hankin, who had a pained expression, then carefully placed his wine jar down. “You already scolded him to tears, so forget it. However, if he knew the Greater Realms’ living beings were protected by Spiritual Providence, he might not be so stubborn.”

Before Lesia could respond, Hankin abruptly turned to James and asked, “What did you say? Spiritual Providence? The Greater Realms’ living beings have produced Spiritual Providence?”

Lesia rolled her eyes and said, “Yeah. Do you think my master would be really that heartless? He wouldn’t just subject the Greater Realms’ living beings to suffering while he challenges Zymurgy’s supreme beings.”

Hankin leaped to his feet and stared at James with excitement. “So, even if you’re fighting with Zymurgy, they won’t be harmed?”

James smiled at him and answered, “Yeah. We’re independent now. Forget the Five Path Emperors and Lord Goyo. Whoever takes control of the Forty- Ninth Heaven and the major gates won’t affect US. They’ll only be half in control.”

Hankin asked eagerly, “What about Vital Energy and cultivation resources?

That’s crucial for the Greater Realms’ living beings-“

Lesia interjected, “My master isn’t only the lord of the Greater Realms. He also controls the Great Historial Land.”

Hankin was dumbfounded by the revelations. He never expected James to have such great achievements. He had established a stable foundation to survive that even Lord Goyo, Xanthakos, and even the Waitara Path would not be able to shake.

After a long silence, Hankin burst into laughter. He was overjoyed, seemingly having found hope in despair.

Next, he recounted everything about the Xanthakos Sect, as well as the clash between Lord Goyo and Xanthakosto them.

Meanwhile, in the Qadeer Palace, Xanthakos was sitting cross-legged, looking at Youcef with a frown. He was surprised that his son emerged out of the Gate of Mystery unscathed without his intervention and was standing right before him.

“You...”

Before Xanthakos could speak further, Youcef interrupted him. Youcef handed over the shining scroll and said emotionlessly, “He sent this to you.”

Xanthakos’s cheek twitched. He accepted the scroll and was about to examine it when he heard a tumultuous commotion from outside.

‘Young lady, you can’t simply barge into our emperor’s sanctum!’

“She’s right, young lady! You must mind your manners. This isn’t your home, but the Qadeer Palace!”

“Even though you’re an honored guest, you still can’t act disrespectfully!”

“Move! Do you think you can stop me? Do you really think I can’t survive without the Qadeer Palace?”

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7065-Upon hearing the conversation, Xanthakos quickly stashed away the shining scroll, and his face contorted with rage. “What are you bickering about?”

Silence fell outside.

Meanwhile, Youcef ignored the commotion and continued to stare at his father.

Suddenly, Thea’s arrogant voice came from outside, “Xanthakos! Is this how your sect treats guests? Then shall I just pack up and leave?”

Hearing this, Xanthakos became anxious. With the wave of his hand, he opened a door in the protective formation.

Thea walked in gracefully.

Xanthakos was an experienced senior who had gone through a lot in the past.

However, upon seeing Thea, his face flashed with helplessness. He stood up and quickly greeted her as if welcoming a distinguished guest. "I apologize for not welcoming you sooner. I hope-"

Thea interrupted, "I won't forgive you. You're clearly being disrespectful, and don't take the Wyrmscale Source seriously."

Xanthakos was infuriated by her words. Ever since Thea had entered the Qadeer Palace, she had caused nothing but trouble. There had not been a moment of peace with her. She was constantly roaming around and taking whatever caught her eye. If anyone were to disagree, she would simply snatch it. In the case where she could have what she wanted, she would rather destroy the items.

On top of that, she would bully and torment the sect's disciples. In just a few years, she had already injured no fewer than 10,000 disciples. Apart from Xanthakos, nobody was a match against her.

Despite providing her with the best food and a comfortable place to cultivate, she refused to stop causing trouble. She was stomping all over them.

However, Xanthakos had no choice but to tolerate her behavior for the sake of the bigger picture. It was not time to turn against her yet. Not only was she the Yin governor, but she was also the young lady of the Wyrmscale Source. Most importantly, James cared deeply for her.

To gain the support of James and the Wyrmscale Source, he could not afford to offend her. In his grand scheme, the Yin governor was his biggest bargaining chip to negotiate with James.

Thus, although Xanthakos was furious, he could only smile. "Could we stop with these huge fusses, Yin governor? The Qadeer Palace is a core place of the Forty-Ninth Heaven. If we're always-"

Thea interrupted, "I'm not being unreasonable! I told them I wanted to visit the Wuia Palace, but they wouldn't let me!"

"The Wuia Palace?" Xanthakos could not believe his ears. "Why do you want to go there?"

Thea said in frustration, "Don't we want to prevent the Waitara Path from returning? I want to head there and see if there are any treasures I could seize, then I'll burn the place down to vent my anger!"

Xanthakos was dumbfounded by her explanation.

After watching their exchange, Youcef suddenly waved his hand and said, "If you're really bold enough to do so, I'll come with you."

Xanthakos turned his head sharply, glaring at Youcef with a murderous look in his eyes. "Do you want to die?"