

Alpha's Blind Luna Online Free

Epilogue 1

I leaned down, trying to pick up one of the twin stuffed animals on the floor. Quickly, I realized with how late I was into my pregnancy, that was not going to happen. Instead, I squatted down, I added it to the pile of toys in my arm. There was a knock on the front door and I smiled

"Come on in, it's open!"

"You know, Luna..." Lila came in, closing the door behind her. "...you really shouldn't leave it open. Even if you know someone is coming over. Especially someone in your condition and with Alpha being gone."

I shook my head, walking over to the toy bin we had for the kids and emptied my arms. "Yes, well. If someone got past the entire border patrol, plus the extra patrol I know encircles this place, then I would have no chance anyways."

She came over to me and pulled me into a hug. "Goddess, he's getting so big." Lila put a hand on my belly.

"He's growing faster than Tyr did. I called Morgan. He is supposed to come and pick the kids up from school since they might induce me today."

"If anyone would manage to have a stronger fourth child, it would be you."

I laughed and walked into the kitchen. I cut her a slice of cake and poured her some hot tea. "I've got enough on my hands with Tyr being the clone of Logan. Even the twins take after him. It would be nice if somehow my genes won out for once." I poured a cup of tea for myself as well.

"How are Freya and Sif doing with all this? And Tyr?"

"Excited to be big sisters. They are happy that they can boss someone around like Tyr boss them around." I chuckled. "Tyr is just happy that he will have a brother. Even out the genders in the house."

Lila cut into her cake and took a bite. She sighed and took a sip of tea. "Are you worried? Since the twins' birth was such a tough one?"

I shook my head. "No, I have a feeling he will be easy. Plus, the twins were fighting over who came out first. They just continue to be more mischief than I was prepared for but I should have known."

Laughing, Lila took another bite. Over the years, Lila and I had become far closer as friends. She had to retire as Captain from the Alpha Kingfight after she lost her left arm. Her and I bonded over losing our ability that we thought defined us. Over the years though, we both found our places. We also built a friendship that only grew with time.

"How is AJ and Jax?"

(Fine. Boys. I swear, they grow up too fast. The next time I find another dirty magazine under the bed, I'm just going to take out the pages and glue them to the wall." Lila said bitterly as she sipped her tea.

I coughed, laughing between my sips. "Goddess, your mate would be so mad."

"Not as mad as yours." I grimaced. "Let's not go there."

"Alpha is going to flip his shit, Auri. You haven't been able to get in touch with him at all?"

Shaking my head, I let my eyes fall to the floor. "It's still radio silence. The High Council requested it that way but it's also been a month longer than what was originally forecasted." I bit my lip. "I'm just worried that he got into trouble"

"Our Alpha? Getting into trouble? Never!" She laughed and I did too.

"I am a little anxious about what he is going to say. He said after the twins that was it since it was so hard on me. We weren't trying »

"And here we are, five years later. Having a crazy powerful mini-Alpha growing in your belly and an Alpha knowing nothing about him. As much as I would love to be a fly on that wall, I don't even think a fly would be safe."

Shaking my head, I finished my tea and put the mug down into the sink. "I miss him. I hate going through all this without him." I admitted out loud for the first time.

Lila came around and pulled me into another hug. "I know, Auri. I know."

I rested my head on her shoulder, failing to keep the tears from falling. She rubbed my back and tried calming me. Logan had been called away for a High Council request. Not a blue scroll, thank goddess but still a request.

No one outside of a handful of people knew that the Alpha King gene had been removed. So in order to keep me safe and out of harm's way, Logan continued to step up. This request was supposed to last three months, a mission regarding trafficking of supernatural children.

The High Council didn't want any contact as the information had been secretive. Bryan and Hector had gone with him as well, leaving me very lonely in the packhouse. Denise had decided that it was better to go to her parents, since she was already nearing the end of her own pregnancy. This would be her second and she wanted to be near her family. I hadn't found out about my pregnancy until after Logan was gone. I didn't have the usual signs but when I realized I was gaining weight faster than what I was eating, I knew.

I had tried to get a hold of Logan for months. Trying to see if maybe he would be able to sneak some time but so far there was no reply. Lila stepped up as my friend and went with me to all my appointments and with the kids. Morgan did as well. He was ecstatic that he was going to be Grandpa to another rascal. Logan had always been my support system though and it hurt that he was away. That he might actually miss the birth of his child.

"Sorry." I took a deep breath, leaning back. "I'm okay. Moment of weakness." I wiped my eyes of the tears.

Lila ruffled my hair. "You, my dear, are anything but weak. You are so strong that if there is anyone who flawlessly took over the pack while Alpha was gone, all while having intense cravings for spicy food, it would only be you."

"Goddess, I'm not that short!" I swatted at her hand

"You are absolutely that short. You are the shortest adult here."

I grumbled. "What time is it?"

"It's 10:30am. We should probably head out, right? Your appointment is at 11?"

I nodded. "I'm going to grab my overnight bag just in case."

Walking up the stairs, I took a breather on the second floor before walking up to the third. The kids all stayed on the second floor, under Logan and I's bedroom wing. We always set up the nursery next to our bedroom though. I had to decorate and repurchase furniture since we had donated all of the items we had years ago. Walking in, I reached over to the rocking chair and grabbed the overnight bag I had packed the week before.

Before I went back down to Lila, I went into our bedroom and pulled out one of Logan's sweatshirts from his drawer. It still smelled like him and I thought if I wasn't going to have him here, the least I could have was something that smelled like him. Walking down the stairs, it was a little easier but when I reached the bottom I put my hand on my stomach.

"You okay?" Lila came over and put her hand on my back

"Yeah. He just kicked really hard." I squeezed my eyes shut, breathing through the pain. After a few breaths, I straighten up and smiled. "Let's head out."

She had driven her SUV and I climbed into the passenger seat, throwing my bag into the backseat. Getting in, Lila started the car and pulled out

"What are you calling him? I feel like you have run out of good names? Unless you're actually going to name him after the superheroes

I grimaced. "No. I have been calling him Vale." "Unlike your mate, I am not well versed in any mythology, let alone Norse "

Smiling, I shook my head. "Vale was the son of Odin who avenged the death of his brother. He also was said to grow to full adulthood in a day."

"Fitting considering that he's full grown a full month early."

I nodded. "It was the least likely to be made fun of as well"

Lila turned down the main road. "I don't think anyone could make fun of your kids, Auri. They walk in and command attention, even as toddlers."

Music started to play over the radio and I closed my eyes, singing quietly along to it. We fell into a comfortable silence when I felt the familiar twinge in the back of my mind.

'Luna.'

'Captain Rider, what's going on?'

The mind link coming through clear with one of the new captains. He was actually the son of a late captain who passed away at the battle with the Alpha King. Logan told me I was no longer allowed to wear my silver bracers after the tough pregnancy with the twins. It had weakened my already weak body. Over the years, I had built up my strength again but I never put them back on. It relinked me with the pack and I was reinstated as Luna. That had been an interesting week of explaining what exactly happened and how I was alive. ④

'We have an issue.'

I placed my hand on Lila's shoulder. "Lila, pull over for a second."

The car pulled over and I closed my eyes. 'What's the issue, Captain?'

There are a group of vampires that are headed towards the territory from the North.

[How many?"]

Captain Rider replied, 'Ten, Luna.'

I cursed. 'Do they have any insignia or anything?' No. They will hit the pack territory in about ten minutes. I've pulled Group 2 and 6 to come and help.

I nodded. 'Grab Group 14 and 12 as well from the East side. I don't like that there are ten. They aren't a rogue band. This might be an attack. Let's keep it as isolated as possible.'

Yes Luna.

'Captain, keep me posted.'

The mind link went blank and I looked over at Lila. "We are under attack from vampires."

"Who the hell would attack us now?" Lila sounded as confused as I felt.

"Most know that Morgan backs our pack. We also have had a good relationship with the High Council and with Logan being the Alpha King..." I mused, unable to think why someone would attack now.

Lila pulled back onto the road and we continued the drive into the city. It would still be another fifteen minutes before we reached the doctor's office. Justin had moved to his own practice away from the main hospital and so I just started to go there instead of the hospital. One thing I didn't want to tempt was Logan's fury at using a different doctor. That was a battle I would graciously give him, taking the extra time to drive to the office.

The car was filled with a nervousness now. I sat back, listening for Rider to check in again. I knew Everett, who took over the east side, would be able to help. My worry was what they were doing. It seemed too convenient with Logan gone. They weren't afraid of our reputation, that much was certain.

"Auri, relax. They will take care of it."

I must have been letting my face show my anxiety. "I know. I just can't understand why vampires would attack. It doesn't seem beneficial."

We lapsed back into quiet. My eyes closed but I was trying to keep my face relaxed

Luna!!

I sat up. 'Captain, what's going on?'

The vampires crossed the border. Just as they did, three of them took on our group but the other seven broke off. They headed West.

My mind raced. What was their objective? 'Did you get anything out of the three? Are they dead?'

They are dead, thanks to Captain Everett's backup. They knew Alpha was gone, Luna. They knew he wasn't on the territory. They are looking for something specific.

I put my hand on Lila's arm. "What would they want? They know Logan is gone. Only a few of us know he is actually gone. We've kept it under wraps and how the hell would vampires know? Why would they care?"

"Where are they headed Luna?"

"West, he said."

Lila asked. "Well, the only thing major to the West from their position would be Kirk, were we are going now."

I chewed on my lip. What was I missing?

Luna?

Yes Captain?'

We are chasing them down but they are too fast. The three distracted us long enough that we don't know if we can catch them. We don't have any coverage over there to get there fast enough. Captain Everett has alerted the city. They are going to start shutting down.'

I nodded. "With Logan gone..." I stopped, my eyes widening. "Lila, the only other people who would know Logan was gone would be the group he is after. The group who has been behind a trafficking ring."

"Traffickers? If they knew that Logan was elsewhere, why not attack the man who they most likely just lost a ton of money to. It would make sense."

"Lila, they only go after children. They go after werewolf, fey and half-blooded human children." My voice went an octave higher.

She swore. "They are after the school."

I nodded, both of us feeling the fear. Lila's two children and my three kids were currently having class there. The car started to go faster, Lila stepping on the gas.

"Lila, the group won't make it. They won't be here fast enough and the school needs to be evacuated."

"Auri, you and I are in no condition to be doing anything."

"We have to." I gripped the seat. "We have to protect our kids."