

180 180- Sunrise, Dawn

Sebastian 1

I wish I could also wear a mask like Aurora because my focus was not on the meeting at all. Every time I felt like yawning, I would dip my head and let my nostrils flare.

Hunter was not here to lash out at me; otherwise, he would be sending me those lectures through the mind link about how to become a better ruler.

It was early morning when I decided to kiss every inch of her body before I received Grandma's mind link, asking me to attend the meeting.

For fighting the rogues, we needed more alliances, and here the king of Giraltor was also seated.

Rumors were circulating that he had just found his mate, and the way he was sending mindlinks, he was at it relentlessly.

I gave a bored look to the speaker, who was the security head of another pack and wanted our warriors to unite.

"If we want to handle these rogues, then we have to unite. And for that, our warriors must know how to fight beside each other."

He was also uttering some other bullshit stuff, but all I wanted to do was to fly back to my nympho.

Last night, my Lycan made love to her wolf.

"I got it a few days back," she admitted to me shyly when we got up in the morning and went to take a shower together, "I hope it shows up soon because I can't wait to feel its physical presence."

Granma made it sound like she had been hiding it.

I needed to question Granma and Tina about what they did to her two years ago. When Aurora's defenses crumbled, she had told me brokenly how my family destroyed her.

But before that, I needed to do one more thing. To move to the main palace. Where nobody would be allowed except me and Aurora.

To keep her safe, I needed to take this step. I was aware I would face severe backlash from Granma. She still considered herself the Luna.

But now with Aurora by my side, she needed to retire. She was not only a powerful she-Lycan but also a witch.

No matter what she did, Amora would always be more mighty and fearsome.

"Sir. The alliance contract," a man placed a dossier in front of me that needed to be signed.

*Now, can you leave my head for a moment, Aurora, so that I can fu*cking sign it?* I requested her secretly.

She had been on my mind lately, and I was already despising my position as a king.

I didn't want to go anywhere without her.

"Don't worry!" My Lycan spoke, "Once we announce that she is our queen, she can accompany us everywhere."

I hope so!

I was trying my best to focus on the words of the contract, but every damn page of the contract had her face. I let out a guttural growl, making every head in the room snap towards me.

A hush fell, and I caught a flicker of panic on their faces.

But I didn't care and lowered my gaze back to the pages, flipping one after the other with deliberate slowness. Let them stew in their own fear.

"Y... Your highness," One of the security heads stammered, and I caught the trembling in his voice.

I didn't even bother to look up, "Hmm."

"If... if you want ... you can take time to sign this," he suggested to me, fear dripping from his tone.

Instead of responding to him, I read every word of the contract and then signed my name before shoving the dossier aside.

I got to my feet and heard the chairs scraping back as they all scrambled to bow.

"Meeting adjourned," I said flatly, already striding for the door.

"I need to go out!" I told a guard, standing outside the door, "Lead the way!"

He quickly bowed and started walking.

"Sir. This is our private lawn," he gestured towards the green stretch, "I can take you somewhere else if you want."

I dismissed him with the wave of my hand and took out the phone.

"Hello?" She received the call on the first ring, and I couldn't help the silly smile spreading on my face.

"Hey, sweetheart," I wish I could go through the phone and kiss her hard.

"Sweetheart? Seriously?" She snarled, taking me by surprise, "Don't you sweetheart me, Sebastian! You didn't even bother to tell me what to tell my warriors. Thank Goddess, I didn't open my stupid mouth, or I would be in a very weird position. They all thought I was with you... to visit another pack."

"Umm," I chewed my lower lip, "But none of them are lies," I shrugged and could almost picture her blotchy face, "You were with me indeed... to visit another pack... the pack of nirvana," I closed my eyes, waiting for her reaction.

And after ages, I felt my Lycan shaking with laughter.

"I what!" she shouted at the other end, and I had to close my one eye.

"Hey, wife. Don't be angry, okay?" I knew she liked it when I called her my wife. Though she never accepted it.

When there was silence on the other end, I thought for a moment and leaned my back against the tree, "So. What is the meaning of Aurora?" I asked her.

For a few seconds, I thought she wouldn't answer me, then came her response.

Her voice carried confusion as if she wasn't expecting this question from me.

"Sunrise. Dawn."

Her answer made me smile, "See. I knew it.
That's why I called you sunshine."

She sighed and seemed to roll her eyes, "Why are you asking me such trivial questions, Sebastian? I'm in the middle of training."

"Oh," I rested my head against the tree trunk,
"Maybe because when we are together," my voice turned huskier, "You don't let me talk at all. Only thing on your mind is se*x, so I thought it's a good idea if I ask you on the phone about..."

She didn't let me finish.

"Sebastian. Fu*ck you!" I had to place a hand on my mouth to cover my laughing face.
