183 183- I Was His!

Beta Hunter: 1

I got there late. As soon as I received the mind link, I asked the security in charge to bring out the chains dipped in Wolfsbane.

I was sure that was the only thing that could keep Luna Tamia's Lycan in control.

However, when we reached there, terror took over my nerves. As a Lycan Beta, I had been to many wars, but never in my life had I come across a sight where we had to watch the beating heart of a live creature.

I did see Jai racing towards Aurora, but I only expected him to save her by pushing her or holding her hand so that they could run to a safe space.

But the guy offered himself.

Yet, still, I would never trust him.

As a Lycan Beta, I always got negative vibes from him, and I did respect him for the way he saved Aurora.

After all, she was not only a head warrior but the queen of Velmora Kingdom. We were indebted to him.

He was lying lifeless on the ground while Aurora... She was doing nothing except screaming at the top of her lungs and crying her heart out.

"Take him to the hospital. Now!" I barked the orders. Luna Tamia was now struggling behind the chains, "Confiscate the heart!" I asked one of the Lycan guards, "Take it and don't let her harm it."

No matter how suspicious Jai Chris was. He was Aurora's friend, and none of us could afford to watch her in pain anymore. 1

She had already endured enough.

I tried to send a mindlink to Sebastian, but didn't get any response. He must be on his way to reach his queen.

He might hate Jai. But he loved Aurora more. He would do whatever was possible in his power to keep the man alive.

After all, Dr. Jai Chris saved the life of the queen of the Velmora Kingdom. 1

Aurora:

"Doctor... please save him... he is... he is my friend!" I was screaming at the top of my lungs in the hospital corridor.

Not caring in the world what they would think about me. Not giving a damn that now they all could see my face.

Beta Hunter was standing at some distance. He had already informed me that Sebastian was on his way.

All I wanted right now was to see my friend happy and healthy.

"Phoenix!" Gavin gave me a little shake, "You need to control yourself... Doctors are working on him. They are putting his heart back in his chest. Just a little more patience."

Strange that he didn't seem to notice my horrible face or the stench it was emitting.

"Patience?" I whispered the question, "That's not what I have when it comes to him."

Gavin kept looking at me and then snaked his arms around my waist.

I was sitting on the cold hospital floor. Gavin and David wanted me to sit on a bench, but how could I when my friend was fighting for his life?

I was suddenly on my feet when the doors to the operating theatre swung open for a brief second and a nurse rushed out.

My heart sank when I saw that her gloves were red. Yeah. That was my friend's blood.

She didn't even look at me, just shook her head slightly at another nurse standing nearby.

My stomach clenched. What did that mean? Was Jai alright?

I staggered a step forward, but Gavin's arm around my waist pulled me back and held me against him.

Two doctors passed by us, their brows were furrowed.

"Excuse me!" I shouted behind them, running like a mad woman, "Hey! Where the hell are you going?" I charged towards them. If Gavin wasn't there, I would have slapped and dragged them.

"Shouldn't you inform me about his condition? Can't you see we are standing here... waiting..." I was panting like I had run for miles.

"Phoenix," Gavin held my shoulders, "Relax. They are treating him..." he told me gently, and I started crying against his chest.

One of the doctors came up to me with a grave face, "Ma'am, head warrior. There is too much blood loss. We're trying to place his heart back, but... There are very slim chances of his survival."

"N... No... he'll make it," My lips trembled, "He has to!"

"Aurora! Aurora..." Beta Hunter's patience must be wearing thin, "They will save him," Nobody seemed to notice that he was calling me Aurora.

"Sebastian is about to reach here... He will be here any minute."

And what would Sebastian do? He was not a doctor.

But... but I needed him. I realized that I needed him.

Where was he?

It seemed like he knew my heart wanted him because there was suddenly a commotion.

"The king is here!" Beta Hunter made the announcement, and Gavin tried to make me kneel along with him. But instead of going down, I freed my hand and ran to Sebastian. He must have reached here in his Lycan form because he was nak*ed and seemed oblivious to it.

"Sebastian!" I raced to him and tried to hug him.

He pushed me away, only to hold me, his gaze running on my body hungrily from head to toe, "Are you alright?"

There was disbelief in his voice as he saw me in sheer terror.

"My King!" Hunter brought a pair of shorts to him. Sebastian held it and pulled it up before drawing me into his arms.

"Goddess... Aurora... I thought I'd lost you forever, honey," before I could utter a word, his lips were on mine, claiming me in front of everyone.

I heard shocked gasps from behind, and my body went still when I realized what he had just done.

He told everyone without using words that I was his. That a scarred faced woman held value in his life.

Till now, I had been thinking that he would discard me just like Mateo did when he thought I was impure.

Here, Sebastian was telling everyone that we were romantically involved. Among Lycans and werewolves, one couldn't show this kind of attachment to a mistress. It was forbidden.

This action of Sebastian was a warning to his pack that I was not just his bed partner... I meant much more to him.
