

197 197- My Queen's Wishes

Sebastian: 1

It had been two days.

Aurora wasn't ready to talk or eat, or sleep. She stayed in bed all the time, staring at the wall.

Every time I urged her to do something, her answers used to be quite similar.

"Aurora. Eat your food."

"I don't want to, Sebastian," She would tell me quietly.

"Aurora. Honey. Take a short nap."

"I don't want to, Sebastian."

"Aurora. Let me take you out. You'll feel fresh."

"I don't want to, Sebastian."

I could see that she was in pain, and I didn't know how to console her.

"Amora!" I roared through the mind link, "Why don't you tell me? What is it? She isn't eating, isn't sleeping... if you don't fix it ... I swear I..." I trailed off and clenched my hair into my fists.

I, Sebastian King, never fell in love. And when I found the perfect woman for myself, Moon Goddess was trying to snatch her from me.

"This has something to do with Jai!" My Lycan warned me about the guy. Jai's name pissed me off.

"I wish I could go and throttle his neck," He hissed, "I just want to go and squeeze the life out of him."

"Shut up, man!" I slammed my fist into the nearest wall, "He saved her. We can't forget that he showed us kindness by saving Aurora. Now we are indebted."

That made him quiet. He was restless due to Aurora's fragile condition. He was pacing around like a caged animal.

I forced myself to breathe. Anger wouldn't fix my wife.

"Listen..." I said finally, "We need to give her space. We don't know what she's going through, but we need to keep an eye on her. Amora knows, but she isn't telling."

My Lycan snarled and showed me its long claws, "So, let's kill Amora!"

"Now don't be absurd!" I rolled my eyes and watched my wife, lying quietly in my bed. Her eyes were open and she was staring at the same wall for the past two days.

"May I come in?" I raised my head when I saw Amora standing in the doorway. Her eyes were fixed on Aurora's frail figure.

I signaled her to go and sit near Aurora.

"Stay with her," I walked to my wife and pressed a kiss on her cheek, "I'll come back in a while."

"Where are we going?" My Lycan didn't like leaving her behind, "She needs us."

"Hmm. I know. Right now, I need to go to Jai," I kept walking to the hospital along the royal trail.

"My king," Beta Hunter bowed when he saw me, "Alpha Blake is here, and he wants to talk to you."

He shrugged when I gave him a questioning look, "I think it's about Jai."

I pushed open the door and went inside Jai's room, where machines were still attached to his body.

There was a new machine now that was attached to his head, which sent vibrations to his brain.

Alpha Blake was seated next to the bed and got up quickly when he saw me.

"My king!" he kneeled and then got up after I allowed him, "I need your permission."

"For what?" I snapped for no reason.

"I want to meet Phoenix... please, your highness. I beg you," his knees hit the floor again in desperation.

I wanted to tell him to fu*ck off, but then my Lycan started scratching its paws, "Let him meet, Aurora. We might get a reaction out of her. She might cry or might yell. Who knows!"

Good idea!

"Okay," I nodded at him, and his eyes lit up,
"But..." I raised my index finger, "You'll talk to her in my presence."

He didn't seem to like the idea, but I couldn't leave Aurora alone with him while she was so vulnerable.

My Lycan turned out to be right. Seeing Alpha Blake in the room, her beautiful eyes widened in shock.

"Alpha Blake?" she whispered.

At last, a different word came out of her mouth
after two days.

Alpha Blake seemed taken aback by the sheer beauty of her face. When he came here, he might not be expecting her face to be this beautiful without any holes or burnt skin.

He forced a smile and gave me a look as if begging me silently to leave them alone. But nope. That was not happening.

"Phoenix... I'm here to..." he hesitated.

"I know why you are here," she said in a weak voice and straightened her back against the headboard.

"So... what..." Alpha Blake stood there like a fool, not knowing what to say, "He... he was your friend," he reminded her, and placed his hands in his pants pockets.

"Friend?" A hint of surprise crossed her eyes, "Really? You think so?" She gave him a pointed look, and I wanted to laugh when he shifted on his feet in comfortable silence.

My queen was making him confused.

"Wipe off that smirk, Sebastian," My beast growled in my head, "She isn't being queen. She is acting like an as*hole."

"Say that again and I'll kill you," I threatened him coldly, making him move back in my head.

*You are the asshole, fu*cker.* I told him mentally.

"I can't, Alpha Blake," she suddenly left the bed and got up to face him, "I can't help you anymore. You and your pack have already taken a lot from me."

"Phoenix... he was your friend... he is dying and... have you forgotten how he stood up for you?"

Aurora's piercing gaze bore into him until his composure seemed to crack.

After that, she started taking slow steps to reach him, until they were too close. Close enough to make me uncomfortable.

"Friend?" she whispered, "He stood up for me?
You think so?" She let a humorless laugh, "As an Alpha, you're the most delusional one in your pack. Ha-ha."

She then placed her hand on his arm, "Go back,
Alpha Blake. Because I'm not healing him."

Alpha Blake couldn't move for a few seconds. He was looking at her as if she had turned into a stranger.

A ghost.

"Phoenix..."

"You heard her, Blake," This time, I walked to them and pulled her into me, "If she is saying she won't come, that means she won't come. Now
you can leave."

His eyes darted between us, and then he nodded.

For a millisecond, I felt bad for him. But I

197 197- My Queen's Wishes

couldn't go against my queen's wishes. As a king, I was supposed to stand beside her and protect her, no matter what it cost me.

Comment 0

Leave the first comment for this chapter

Vote

Share

Swipe left to continue >