Anything For Her Chapter 50

- "Show me that one."
- "I want that too."
- Louisa was determined to mess with Sophie that day. She never liked Sophie.
- "This one—"
- "I'll take that too."
- The commotion had even gotten the sales manager's attention.
- "Ms. Yarborough, are you sure you want everything? All these already add up to ten million."
- I know the Yarborough family is wealthy, but I don't think she has that much allowance.
- "What do you mean? Are you implying I can't afford them?" Louisa's temper spiked at the sales manager's words.
- "Miss—"
- The sales manager shot Sophie an apologetic glance. Ms. Yarborough is a tough nut to crack.
- A cold grin stretched across Sophie's lips.
- "Louisa, are you sure you want all of it? Is your credit card limit enough?"
- "That's none of your business!"
- Louisa instantly took out her card and set it on the desk.
- "Wrap everything up for me."
- The sales manager reached for the card and went to the register to settle the bill. However, she returned shortly after.
- "Sorry, Ms. Yarborough, but your card limit isn't sufficient."
- "What? How is that possible?" Louisa's expression darkened.
- "Louisa, why don't you just choose one from those?"
- "I heard Ms. Yarborough would get her hands on everything that caught her eye. It's a mere ten million. I'm sure she has enough with her other cards."
- Louisa was caught between a rock and a hard place. Without a choice, she took out her credit card.
- Her heart ached when the sales manager swiped the card. This costs me ten million! How long - will it take for me to settle the debt? My monthly allowance is only around half a million. • "Does Ms. Yarborough still wants to make more purchases?" Sophie smirked.
- Louisa was infuriated at Sophie's taunt, yet she couldn't show it.
- Why am I seething here while victory is seemingly on my side?
- "What are you smug about, Sophie?"
- "I'm not smug about anything. Oh, right. I forgot to tell you this store belongs to the Tanner family."
- Sophie had decided to visit a few jewelry stores under the Tanner Group to check on their sales. She didn't expect to run into the idiotic Louisa.
- "Thank you so much for contributing ten million to Tanner Group's sales today."
- Louisa's expression darkened even further.
- "Have a nice day."
- Sophie was in an excellent mood. Louisa's dark expression efficiently lifted Sophie's mood.
- "Also, about the ten million. Your father will probably want to have a chat with you about where that money went. If he knew about your actions, I figured you wouldn't be living your best life in the near future."
- Sophie had a thorough understanding of Louisa's father.
- "Louisa, I didn't know." Willow was oblivious to the fact that the store was under the Tanner Group.
- Without another word, Sophie whirled around and stomped away. I got tricked by that bch, Sophie.
- Willow immediately chased after her.
- "Louisa, don't be mad. We can ask for a refund."
- "Ask for a refund? Sophie is still inside right now. Won't I just be humiliating myself if I ask for a refund now?"
- "What should we do then?" That's ten million. It's not a small amount.
- "It's fine. At most, I'd live a slightly difficult life for the next few months. Despite that, I can't humiliate myself."
- "Louisa, you wouldn't be in this state if it wasn't for me."
- Louisa wrapped her arm around Willow's.
- "Don't worry. Sophie was planning to drive a wedge between us. I won't let it happen. Willow, tomorrow is the birthday of the young miss from the Lombard family. My dad had given me an invitation. I'll bring you with me tomorrow."
- Many people wanted to be acquainted with the Lombard family.
- The Lombard family was planning a grand celebration for Ysabelle's birthday. However, they only gave out a hundred invitations. Her father had spent a lot of effort to get his hands on - one.
- "You can do that?" • The Lombard family is the real big boss. I'll get to truly enter the upper society if I can get
- acquainted with them. • "Sure. The bracelet I bought today was a present for Ms. Ysabelle."
- "Okay, I should prepare a present for her too."
- Maybe I can meet Tristan this time. If I can marry that legendary man, that'll be the peak of my life.
- After the girls had left the store, Sophie turned her gaze to the sales assistant. • "What's your name?"
- "I'm Nora Baum," Nora answered. I have nothing to fear. She's just Sophie Tanner, the unwanted third daughter of the Tanner family. This store does belong to the Tanner Group, but
- Sophie can't do anything to me with her current status. "You fail as a sales assistant." • "Haha, Ms. Sophie. You're just a kid. It's not up to you whether I fail or pass." Nora had
- someone backing her up, so she wasn't afraid of Sophie. • "Shut up, Nora!"
- The sales manager glared at Nora. Ms. Sophie can get Ms. Yarborough to spend ten million here. How dare a sales assistant like Nora challenges her?
- Nora felt wronged. • "I didn't do anything wrong. I sold ten million worth of goods today and brought a huge
- profit to the company. The company should give me a bonus. How can they fire me?" • "Fire her. The Tanner Group doesn't need an employee like this."
- "What did you say? What right do you have to give that order? Do you truly think you're a daughter of the Tanner family?"
- Sophie didn't want to waste another breath with her and summoned the store manager. • "Your employees here aren't eligible to work here. I'll give you one month, and if they still
- behave this way, I won't keep anyone currently working here, including you." • "Miss, you—"
- The sales manager quickly whispered something to the store manager.

me, right?"

- "I understand, Ms. Sophie." • The day after the next was the shareholders' meeting. No one was sure who would be the
- next CEO of the Tanner Group. The store manager didn't dare to offend Sophie.
- "Have her fired immediately." • Sophie turned around to leave.
- Nora's face paled.

• "Manager, she's just the unwanted third daughter of the Tanner family. You won't actually fire

- "Go back first. I'll see how it goes once the shareholders' meeting ends."
- No one knows what changes will befall the organizational structure of the Tanner Group after the shareholders' meeting. The same goes for Ms. Sophie, so I won't make any decision before the meeting.

• Sophie continued her shopping at the Monarch Mall and finally spotted a unique rock in an

- antique store. • That tiny rock was exquisite. It was clear and shiny on the surface, but inside was a picture of
- the beauty of nature. • Sophie figured it suited Ysabelle a lot.
- "You have good taste, Miss! This rock might look tiny, but it's priceless." "Can I have a look?"
- The sales assistant took out the rock and gave it to Sophie.
- "How much is it?" • "Fifteen million."
- "Ten million, and I'll take it. If you agree, then pack it up for me."