

MY 100TH REBIRTH A DAY BEFORE THE APOCALYPSE

Chapter 17 Leaving

While she was eating, she decided to check everyone's status window. She only remembered to do so now because there was no time yesterday.

She started from the two who had successfully awakened.

Then she looked at Duke, remembering his stats. Her eyelashes quiver, she doesn't want to dampen her self-confidence with this monster's stats.

Kisha was not surprised to see his subordinate's stats because she knew that all his men were elites and had extraordinary physiques but what surprised her was that two of them had useful talent and gifts.

Even her family has some stats that are above average and Keith even reached 20 points in mental capacity when he was just level zero, when he awakens, controlling his ability would be easy for him.

After breakfast, Kisha toured around the villa and stored everything she could store in her inventory. Duke just followed her and even suggested going to the garage to get all the limited edition cars he had and also led her to his secret room.

They took four big generators, solar panels, garden tools, a heating system, and water tanks were not spared. The whole villa was left bare naked, If only she could store the whole villa in her inventory, she would.

She also took the expensive ornamental plants in the garden, koi fishes from the big pond on the back, and the ornamental fishes from the special aquarium in the exhibit hall that is seven feet tall and ten feet wide. She stored these things in her subspace territory. And she stored the big aquarium in her inventory, she didn't want to leave any good thing.

Kisha was pleased and couldn't contain her smile.

Once she was done, they went to the entrance of the villa and everyone was waiting for them there. I mean everyone, including the Evans family.

Kisha was taken aback. "They are not planning to hitch a ride with us, do they?" She thought as she sneakily glanced at them.

There were more than 30 people on their party, consisting of no more than three to four families. Based on their outfits, three of the four families are wealthy people and the last one must be their servant. The remaining are their bodyguards.

Just looking at them, Kisha already knew what was going to happen next. She's having a surge of headache.

She tried her best not to give a fuck. She and her family boarded their SUV, Duke sat on the passenger seat just like yesterday. The other four were still in the other vehicle and would follow them from behind.

Before they could drive off, Melody obstructed the road ahead, the other family went along with her. They all stood on the road blocking Kisha's car.

The other members of the Evans were dumbfounded, Melody only told them that they would ask Duke politely.

They were panic-stricken by what Melody had done. She was standing confidently on the road an innocent smile on her face. "Duke, please give us a chance to speak with you." She glanced behind her, seeing that everyone supported her, her confidence reached another height.

"We want to follow you out to a safe place. Please bring us along."

Kisha observes the Evans members who are the only ones remaining standing in front of their gate. They took a peek at Kisha with guilt.

Without any choice, Kisha stepped out of the car and walked slowly towards the people blocking them. "Is this how you ask someone for a favor?" She asked as she unleashed the intimidating aura that she's been reining over these days.

Everyone else felt a pang of fear standing before her and could only step back a few steps bowing their heads and refusing to look her straight in the eye.

But Melody has been so used to Duke's intimidation that, even though she is scared silly, can still speak. "What do you mean? I am not asking you any favor, we are asking Duke politely." Melody retorted.

"Is this your way of asking someone politely?"

"Why are you even speaking when Duke hasn't said anything?"

"Precisely because he is not speaking that I am!" Her voice turned colder by the second.

"Save your words, we have nothing to speak to you. We want to speak to the one in charge." Melody glared at Kisha, unable to hide her hostility anymore.

"Aren't I here, speaking with you?" She stared down everyone and continued. "But if you don't value your life, then, I can only drive over your body."

She was about to turn around when her arm was grabbed hold of by someone.

"Can you tell me how old are you now?" A woman's trembling voice resounded in her ear before she could turn and see who held her back.

Melody cried and ran to her mother. "Mom, this woman is too much!"

She looked aggrieved and pitiful. "She said she would run over us and refuse to give us a chance to speak to Duke. I just want a chance to speak, I was afraid that if we did not obstruct the road first, they would just drive off without looking at us. But to think that she did not even think highly of human life for her to be able to speak this way."

She briefly glanced at Kisha, indicated how barbaric she was.

"But we understand if you are like this since we have different upbringings, I'll do my best to be magnanimous and understand you were not taught properly growing up. You must not have finished school and became a gangster for you to be this violent." Melody shamelessly throws mud at Kisha, and Kisha's patience is running thin for this woman.

She was not the sort of person that kills wantonly but she hated this kind of person. They only know how to bring trouble and do not want to take responsibility. They are self-centered and too pampered. It's better to end their life now than to let them grow another head and be a problem in the future.

But the woman holding her arm had a strong grip and wouldn't let her go.
