

Apocalypse 374

Chapter 374 The Spoils Of War

Kisha descended from the wall and sought a quiet corner. Spotting a sturdy crate of stacked ammunition, she decided to sit atop it, appreciating the solidity beneath her as a momentary refuge from the chaos.

Once she settled in, Kisha took a few deep breaths, allowing herself to release the tension and frustration that had built up. When she felt a sense of calm wash over her, she began to examine the rewards she had received.

She opened her system interface, meticulously inspecting each element and detail laid out before her.

She allocated all her free stat points to agility, recognizing that strength wasn't her strong suit—speed was.

With her awakened ability, close confrontations with enemies were unnecessary, and her existing strength was sufficient.

Reflecting on her recent one-on-one melee battle with the unique evolved zombie, she realized that if she ever faced an agility-based evolved zombie, it could spell disaster for her and her team.

Fighting an agility-type evolved zombie proved to be far more challenging than facing a strength-type. The speed of these creatures could catch anyone off guard, striking before their opponents even had the chance to react.

In an instant, they could find themselves overwhelmed, often unaware of what had just transpired before it was too late.

Thus, she prioritized speed over strength, knowing that Duke already possessed incredible raw strength. She could rely on him to handle that aspect, allowing her to focus on enhancing her own agility.

After allocating her free stat points, she eagerly turned her attention to her new title. This was the aspect she found most exciting, as each title she had acquired so far had proven to be not only beneficial but also impactful in various situations. She anticipated the possibilities this new title could bring.

Kisha gasped in astonishment as she read about this passive skill. If the description was accurate, she would evolve into a formidable one-man army, gaining strength in proportion to the number of enemies around her. The more dangerous the situation, the more powerful she would become—a thrilling prospect that filled her with renewed excitement.

Now, her anger had subsided, replaced by a deep sense of satisfaction with the rewards she had received.

'Come on, bring me more dangerous missions!' she thought, her excitement bubbling up. A surge of exhilaration washed over her, and she felt an almost giddy urge to dance. With this new passive skill, she felt invincible.

But then, she noticed another skill under the 'Skill Tab'—[Active Skill: One Body (Growth Type)]. She had completely forgotten about it.

The description mentioned that it increased group synergy within a 5-meter radius, which would have been just as helpful as her Healing Dome passive skill if used in tandem.

Alas! She had completely forgotten about it in the heat of battle. Since it wasn't a passive skill, it required her to actively use it, and with all the chaos, it had slipped her mind.

Kisha rubbed the tip of her nose, feeling a bit sheepish for being so forgetful. She hadn't even tested this one out yet.

'Ha ha ha...' Kisha laughed awkwardly to herself, staring at the skill she had completely overlooked. She had missed the perfect opportunity to test it out.

'But well, it's never too late to try another time... ha ha ha...' Trying to brush off her forgetfulness with humor only made the moment more awkward.

She push aside her other thought because she still have other things to check. Like her new achievement.

Seeing the overall increase in her stats and the ever-growing list of skills and boosts, Kisha couldn't contain her excitement.

Her eyes widened in amazement, and she let out an animated gasp, her hands flying to her mouth as if trying to stifle the disbelief and awe bubbling up inside her.

Now, she was truly experiencing the full potential of her system—finally proving its worth and showing just how powerful she had become.
