

Apocalypse 475

Chapter 475 Sparrow And Vulture Reaching Level 2

"Wait, now that you mention it, we could have stacked the trailers earlier instead of just adding more supplies..."

"But with this extra space, we could actually fit more than seven! It's not far-fetched to think that we could fit ten cargo trailers in here. By the time we get back, we could have fifty trailers' worth of supplies, and the cargo trailers would be enough to build the wall! Don't you think?"

"Ugh! Honestly, I'm glad none of us are engineers or anything related to math—we really suck at calculations! We could have fit so much more before, but we were too focused on just adding more supplies instead of thinking about the cargo trailers. Now that the City Lord mentioned this is our last trip to Port City, it's only now that my brain is finally starting to work a little better." One of them grumbled, frustrated by the missed opportunity.

"It's no use crying over spilled milk," Kisha said, her voice calm as she approached them from behind.

"But with that many cargo trailers, we can definitely finish the wall construction and expansion. The real problem now is how we're going to complete it in the next two days, after you all return."

She paused, acknowledging the challenge ahead. "Fifty cargo trailers is a lot to manage with such a tight deadline."

But fifty cargo trailers were more than enough to cover the expansion, and even Kisha hadn't anticipated that the five STAU would each have 300 cubic meters of space.

For space-type ability users, that was already incredibly impressive.

If she didn't have her system, these five would have been considered treasures in their own right.

The thought made her smile even wider, feeling a sense of pride in how far they had come.

Kisha fell into deep thought, her brow furrowing as she sighed heavily.

"I suppose we have no choice but to repurpose the cargo trailers we're currently using as walls," she said, her tone resolute.

"We'll need to adjust them to align with the outer walls we're building and temporarily use a different material for the rest of the current wall. We'll also have to increase security around the area."

The others instinctively sucked in a sharp breath, a wave of apprehension sweeping over them at the thought of such a drastic change.

If they followed Kisha's suggestion, it would leave their base exposed, especially if another zombie raid occurred unexpectedly.

As if reading their thoughts, Kisha continued, "I understand your concerns, but we have no choice. We'll need to bolster the guards around the area. And although I can't prove it, I have a strong feeling that we must complete all preparations in the next few days. If we don't, we'll be in an even more vulnerable position."

Kisha hesitated but felt compelled to say more than she normally would, the weight of the situation pressing on her.

Kisha understood their fears well.

If they moved the current wall without completing the outer layer, they would be leaving their defenses exposed, making them vulnerable to zombie attacks.

She could see the concern in their eyes, but she also knew that if she didn't complete this one mission, everything else would start to fall apart.

It was all part of a chain mission, and if she faltered now, the entire mission could collapse.

And it only means death.

"Young Madam, allow me to lead my people and double our efforts to continue building the outer wall. We still need to move the current wall to align it with the new one we're constructing, so we might as well get it done sooner rather than later."

"My team is growing stronger with each passing day as they continue to train and hone their awakened abilities. In a few days, they'll be ready for another level up, and by then, we should be able to complete the wall's construction," Vulture said, stepping out from within the mountain forest with Sparrow by his side.

Both had reached level 2, and Kisha couldn't help but raise an eyebrow as she observed them. They now exuded a newfound confidence and strength, far more than before.

...

[Code name: Vulture]

Level 2 (EXP. 0/1000)

Strength: 110 (+85)

Stamina: 110 (+83)

Defense: 110(+77)

Agility: 110 (+90)

Mental Capacity: 110 (+87)

Charm: 110 (+100)

Leadership: 1110 (+97)

Title: None

Skills: Earth Spike level 1, Earth Manipulation level 2

Talent: Strong Defence

Gift: Affinity with Earth

Ability: Earth

...

[Code name: Sparrow]

Level 2 (EXP. 0/1000)

Strength: 115 (+92)

Stamina: 115 (+85)

Defense: 115 (+94)

Agility: 115 (+81)

Mental Capacity: 115 (+91)

Charm: 115 (+103)

Leadership: 115 (+103)

Title: None

Skills: Whirlwind Level 2, Windblade Level 2, Perception Level 1, Wind Boomerang Level 1

Talent: Scouting

Gift: Hawk eyesight

Ability: Wind

...

These two were the first to reach level 1, but they had been too occupied with their responsibilities to take the time to level up.

Now that they finally had, Kisha was surprised by how much they had grown, especially with the help of the Scarlet Honey.

What caught her attention the most was Sparrow—his base stats were now nearly on par with hers, which was both impressive and a little intimidating to witness.

Kisha nodded in agreement with Vulture's suggestion, as it aligned perfectly with her own plans.

Since he was stepping up, she would do her best to support him and his team.

She made a mental note to stay by their side and provide more vials of black liquid and stamina boosters as needed.

Her passive skill, "Healing Dome", would be a great help, but she also now had the active skill "One Body," which she'd been using on them for some time.

This ability enhanced their team's synergy and boosted their overall power by 50%, making them more effective.

It worked seamlessly with the increase of effectiveness in their awakened abilities, which was why the earth wall was becoming sturdier and they were completing their tasks faster than before.

"I think it is really doable," Kisha said, with her high spiritual energy she could keep on using her active skill to accommodate and help Vulture and his team with the construction.

"Alright! Since we're done here, let's head out and get to work!"

Kisha announced with a wave of her hand, causing a portal to appear in front of them—just like the one they had used to enter.

The five STAU couldn't help but marvel at the sight, still amazed by the novelty of it.

As they stepped out of Kisha's territory and into the open, the first light of dawn was beginning to break from the east, casting a faint glow on the horizon.

The large part of the sky was still dark, which puzzled the STAU.

They had spent more than ten hours inside Kisha's territory—almost an entire day—and yet the time outside seemed to have barely passed.

Realization dawned on them as they exchanged confused looks, and all of them turned to Kisha, silently questioning her.

Kisha noticed their puzzled expressions and smiled knowingly.

"I see what's bothering you," she said, understanding their confusion.

"The flow of time inside my space is ten times faster than outside," Kisha explained with a casual shrug.