Chapter 504 A Flash Sale With 50% Discount

After the lively banquet the previous night, everyone returned to their homes with smiles, their hearts warmed by the shared celebration.

The next morning, as the first rays of sunlight peeked through the windows, Kisha woke with a start.

Excitement stirred in her chest as she remembered the rewards waiting for her from completing the two missions.

She hadn't had a chance to inspect them amidst all the festivities and responsibilities.

Careful not to disturb Duke, who was still peacefully asleep beside her, she sat up quietly.

With a deep breath, she opened her system panel, eager to explore the new title she had earned.

Her fingers hovered over the glowing interface, anticipation building with every passing second.

After reading her new title, Kisha let out a small chuckle.

Although she hadn't received another achievement this time, she didn't feel disheartened.

After all, the numerous rewards she had already accumulated were more than enough to lift her spirits.

"Host, do you think earning an achievement is as easy as picking cabbage at the market?" 008 interjected quickly in Kisha's thoughts.

"Just one achievement is already a big deal, yet you've been racking them up left and right lately, to the point where you're starting to take them for granted."

Kisha paused for a moment, considering 008's words. It was true—back in her past lives, she hadn't even been able to access the achievement tab.

But now, with achievements coming one after another, it almost felt effortless. She couldn't help but laugh, shaking her head at how quickly she had gotten used to it.

"You're right," Kisha said, chuckling as she glanced at her status window.

"Thanks to all the titles and achievements I've racked up from these tough missions, my stats are so high now, I might just be able to take on a zombie tide all on my own. Well, maybe." She grinned, the playful tone clear in her voice as she spoke to 008.

With her 'Mental Capacity' now reaching 1000, Kisha could sense a remarkable change within herself.

She felt like she could control larger objects effortlessly and manage multiple items simultaneously without any strain on her mind.

Her thoughts were clearer, and a sense of ease settled over her mind.

As she focused on her spiritual energy, she noticed a subtle but significant shift—there was a faint barrier now protecting her energy core.

It seemed like she had broken through a threshold that had strengthened her core on its own.

She hadn't done anything to trigger it, but it felt as if an additional layer of protection had been cast over her.

Perhaps, being a mental type, reaching this threshold had triggered a small evolution in her ability.

Kisha took a moment to adjust to the new sensation before moving on to inspect her other rewards.

However, she didn't immediately look at the blueprints.

Instead, she set them aside on the bed, planning to give them to Duke later so he could pass them on to the engineers for review and determine how they might be useful for the base.

Instead, she focused on the 50% Mall Points Discount Coupon, curious about what kind of benefits it might offer.

Kisha quickly asked, "008, if I use this coupon, will there be a limit on how long I can use it or a cap on how many items I can apply it to?"

She was puzzled since the coupon didn't include any details, and with only 240,000 system points left, she wasn't sure if that would be enough to make the most of the 50% discount.

She wondered if the coupon had a time limit for usage or if it applied to multiple items at once.

If it was time-sensitive, she feared she might miss out on something really useful, especially if there were too many tempting items to consider.

"Host, upon activation, the coupon will turn the entire system mall shop into a flash sale with a 50% discount for the entire day," 008 quickly explained.

There was no need for further clarification, as it was clear that the discount would apply to everything in the shop.

While the sale would reduce 008's earnings, it wasn't as bad as it seemed—after all, the transaction would still be recorded.

Once 008 realized it would continue to make sales, any small resentment it had toward the coupon quickly faded.

"Oh, alright then. I'll just put it away for now and use it when I have more system points," Kisha said, her voice thoughtful.

She then shifted her focus to the last reward she had received: the Spiritual Crystal Gatherer.

It resembled one of those spherical glass crystals fortune tellers often used as decoration on their tables, clear and unremarkable at first glance.

Curiosity piqued, Kisha activated her Eye of Truth to discern if there was more to this item than met the eye.

[Spiritual Crystal Gatherer]

[Description: As the name suggests, this item is inscribed with a powerful spiritual gathering spell. It draws in and concentrates the spiritual energy in the surrounding area, creating a rich aura of energy that cultivators can use to significantly enhance their cultivation. With the concentrated spiritual energy, they can more easily connect to their meridians and accelerate their progress.

Over time, as the energy accumulates in one place, it also nurtures the surrounding environment, fostering the growth of plants and animals. The plants grow stronger, and animals that breathe in the spiritual energy gradually evolve into spiritual beings, such as spiritual trees or energy-infused animals. These enhanced life forms can serve as valuable resources for the cultivator, aiding in their journey by providing nourishment or even spiritual energy for further cultivation.]

Kisha stared at the item, her eyes gradually widening as the implications of its usage sank in.

'Does this mean I can now continuously cultivate both my spiritual energy and mana without any limits?!' she thought, excitement building within her.

'If that's the case, doesn't that mean my spiritual and mana pools will grow exponentially, allowing me to use my awakened ability and attacks without worrying about energy depletion? With my passive and active skills aiding in the recovery, I'll never run out of energy!'
