Chapter 7974

6-8 minutes

Lin Wan'er (Alani) looked up at the branches and leaves of the Mother of Pu-erh Tea, seeing the dappled starry sky through them. Smiling, she whispered, "I've looked up at the starry sky for four hundred years, and today, for the first time, I have a different feeling. Before, I only felt the sky was vast; now, looking at it again, within that vastness, there's a touch of unknown fear."

charlie wade also looked up at the starry sky, nodding and sighing, "I once thought that the universe was so vast, with the Milky Way alone containing two hundred billion stars, each like the sun, with its own star system, that there must be other life in the universe. But before, I had a sense of superiority over ourselves, always thinking that even if there was extraterrestrial life, most of it would probably just be microorganisms living in water or low-level organisms, unlikely to have the right time, place, and people to develop a civilization comparable to humanity." But now, looking up at the starry sky, and thinking that humanity hasn't even had the ability to land on planets within our system, while another group of people could jump between these stars tens of thousands of years ago, a chill inevitably creeps down my spine.

Having said that, charlie wade suddenly smiled, then said with some relief, "But thinking about this is pointless. With my current strength, I can't even defeat Sara. In front of those top-tier cultivators, I'm probably not just like an ant, but truly an ant."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) smiled and said, "In that case, young master, don't let this affect your mood. Those cultivators with great supernatural powers have long since left. In their eyes, Earth is just a wasteland abandoned after its resources have been exhausted. They will certainly never return, but they have truly left you with immense benefits."

"That underground city is practically the most impregnable fortress in the world, and it even has nine teleportation arrays that connect directly to various locations. This is like divine assistance for you, Young Master. In the future, when facing the Po Qing Society and Sara, you can launch a swift attack or retreat quickly. Even if Sara discovers your identity, as long as you enter the underground city, she will be completely helpless against you. With her strength, trying to shake the underground city built by those powerful cultivators is like an ant trying to shake a tree—a pipe dream.”

charlie wade nodded in agreement, then said self-deprecatingly, “I used to think that no matter how strong a cultivator was, they couldn’t be stronger than powerful modern technology. Like the Earl of the Po Qing Society, who cultivated diligently for many years, he was utterly vulnerable to close-in weapon systems. No matter how strong a cultivator is...” “Even against a weapon as powerful as a nuclear bomb, it’s utterly vulnerable...”

charlie wade sighed, “But looking back now, I was naive. The true top cultivators’ strength far surpasses our understanding. Even if current technology advances for another ten thousand years, it won’t be able to achieve interstellar migration via interstellar jumps, but they can accomplish this through teleportation arrays. This strength is beyond the reach of modern technology. So, just how strong is the protective array of that underground city they built? I think even if we exhausted all the power of modern technology, we wouldn’t be able to reach its limit. I even have a feeling that even if the asteroid that wiped out the dinosaurs were to hit Earth again, that underground city would remain intact.”At this moment, charlie wade truly understood why this underground city built by these cultivators, under a thousand-meter-high ice sheet and hundreds of meters of rock layers, could be hollowed out by excavating several square kilometers of rock layers to a height of tens of meters, yet it could remain intact for thousands or even tens of thousands of years without needing a single load-bearing pillar. This was true supernatural power; it could easily resist immense gravity using only spiritual energy and magic. It was evident that the defensive formation must also be extremely powerful.

Lin Wan’er (Alani) smiled at charlie wade and said, “If that’s true, this underground city is the most fortified fortress on Earth, and you, young master, are the only one who can use it. Let alone a mere Sara, even if the world ends, hiding there would completely protect you. Moreover, you now have a storage ring, allowing you to easily transport large quantities of resources to the underground city. If I had such a place all these years, I wouldn’t have been hunted by Sara for so long.”

charlie wade said with delight, “Miss Lin has reminded me again. The underground city is vast, but there are almost no resources inside. In the future, we can gradually modify it and use the storage ring to transport large quantities of resources in. The spiritual energy there is incredibly abundant. If some medicinal herbs could be grown there, their medicinal properties might be greatly enhanced. I’ll bring my cauldron in as well; perhaps I can refine even better pills.”

Lin Wan'er (Alani) asked Charlie Wade, "Young Master, the only one in China..." "The teleportation array is in Heming Mountain, which is somewhat remote, but it's only a few dozen kilometers from Chengdu. Young Master, why don't you first establish a new base near Chengdu Airport, acquire real estate and warehouses, and have people procure the necessary supplies in Chengdu? I'll have Old Sun handle the relationships and approval processes, and Old Qiu invest in a general aviation company to purchase a few more helicopters. This will make it much more convenient to travel between Chengdu and Heming Mountain." Charlie Wade agreed, saying, "Miss Lin is right. If we want to establish a foothold in the country and easily travel to and from the underground city or the other eight teleportation arrays in the world using the teleportation array, we must be close to Heming Mountain. Chengdu's old airport is the closest. If we establish a base in Chengdu, it will be much more convenient in the future. Since we've already established a general aviation company, why not invest several billion US dollars to buy land near Chengdu Airport as a base, with Chengdu Airport as the headquarters, and establish a shipping company rooted in the southwest? This will make the allocation of personnel and supplies much more convenient in the future!"

Lin Wan'er (Alani)'s suggestion greatly inspired Charlie Wade.

The nine teleportation arrays located around the world allowed him to achieve rapid global mobility.

The storage ring transformed this rapid mobility into an extremely powerful logistics and transportation capability.

The storage space within Charlie Wade's ring was at least 100,000 cubic meters, capable of carrying an astonishing amount of supplies each time. If used to transport light crude oil, it could carry at least 90,000 tons, essentially comparable to a giant ocean liner.

However, the key issue was that a giant ocean liner's intercontinental voyage took at least a month, while Charlie Wade could traverse intercontinents in less than ten seconds using the teleportation arrays.

This would make the future allocation of supplies between the nine teleportation arrays incredibly convenient.

However, Charlie Wade couldn't personally handle the allocation and gathering of various supplies. Therefore, the best solution was to establish a shipping company and an air logistics distribution center, using cargo planes to collect various supplies and then centrally manage their storage space.

For Charlie Wade, billions of US dollars were merely a drop in the ocean. However, this amount of money would be considered a huge sum in any field.

Charlie Wade doesn't need to make money through air transport, so he doesn't need to build a large cargo fleet, develop multiple hub airports as bases, or even invest in building a dedicated cargo airport like UPS in the West or SF Express in China.

He only needs to find a piece of land near Chengdu Airport according to his actual needs, build a complete base, and establish a fleet of more than ten cargo planes, which will basically meet all his needs.

Moreover, in the long run, such bases cannot be deployed only in Chengdu. Theoretically, it is also necessary to build bases near the other eight teleportation arrays. However, the Russian Far East, the Kilimanjaro Mountains in Tanzania, and the Semeru Mountains in Indonesia are all in relatively underdeveloped areas, so there is no rush to deploy in these places. But it is necessary to deploy near the teleportation arrays in the United States, Japan, and Europe as soon as possible. This will be much more convenient in the future. If something like taking the Four Directions Treasure Banner from the Rothschild family happens again, he can return to China in the blink of an eye through the teleportation array.

Once the strategy was clear, Charlie Wade immediately began to plan.

He instructed Isaac Cameron to establish a shipping company immediately, and also sent him to Chengdu to find a suitable location. Because the shipping company required numerous permits and licenses, Charlie Wade advised him to abandon building it from scratch and instead acquire a fully qualified company.

Given that SF Express dominated the domestic air freight market, acquiring a fully qualified company with a sufficiently large fleet was not easy. However, fortunately, Charlie Wade had plenty of money and could acquire companies while simultaneously expanding his fleet.

Moreover, buying airplanes isn't particularly difficult. Unlike passenger planes, cargo planes don't require ordering from manufacturers and waiting for delivery times that can easily exceed one or two years. Nowadays, in the international cargo aviation sector, the vast majority of cargo planes are converted from retired passenger planes. In the fleet of freighters, passenger planes converted into cargo planes account for at least 90%, and many of them are over twenty or even thirty years old. If these planes were still used for passenger transport, passengers might be terrified, but they are still quite capable for cargo transport.

However, Charlie Wade made a clear request to Isaac Cameron: not short- or medium-haul narrow-body cargo planes. For ordinary courier companies, those planes are a money-making tool for domestic trunk line transportation, but for him, they are completely useless. He needs ultra-long-haul cargo planes with a range of over 10,000 kilometers, only in this way can he easily complete dispatching between continents.

After instructing Isaac Cameron, Charlie Wade contacted Wei Liang, who was in charge of Jiu Xuan Pharmaceutical, and asked Wei Liang to arrange for experts in Chinese medicinal herbs to cultivate the herbs he needed in movable modular planting containers. The containers had to meet uniform standards and specifications, so that he could bring the herbs and containers to the underground city without having to replant them.

Having arranged everything, Charlie Wade said to Lin Wan'er (Alani), "Miss Lin, these preparations will take time. Perhaps we should bring the Mother of Pu-erh Tea back to the underground city first. Once the Antarctic winter is over, the shipping company, the storage base, and Wei Liang's preparations should be almost complete."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) nodded gently and said, "Then I'll trouble you, young master, to transplant the Mother of Pu-erh Tea completely from the soil and store it temporarily in my storage space. I'll have Lao Qiu and Lao Sun arrange for it to be sent back to Heming Mountain." Charlie Wade nodded

, and with his powerful and abundant spiritual energy, he precisely and completely separated the roots of the Mother of Pu-erh Tea from the soil. Then, he gently touched the branches of the Mother of Pu-erh Tea and stored it in his storage space.

The rosewood in the storage space, though its age was unknown, still looked remarkably fresh, as if it had just been felled. Therefore, Charlie Wade speculated that this four-dimensional space likely had another advantage: the concept of time seemed to disappear within it. Plants and food placed inside would probably not have expiration dates; no matter how long they were stored, everything would remain as it was when first placed there.

Lin Wan'er (Alani), seeing the Mother of Pu-erh tea vanish from Charlie Wade's hand, was astonished, but then suddenly remembered something and asked Charlie Wade, "Young Master, there shouldn't be any soil in the underground city, right?" "No," Charlie Wade shook his head and said, "Those cultivators don't seem to need to grow any crops, not even flowers and grass."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) then said, "Then we'll have to get some soil over there to be on the safe side."

Charlie Wade smiled and said, "Then let's go to the mountains near Champs-Élysées now, the place where I fought my final battle with Lord Changsheng. The vegetation there is lush and growing very well, so the soil shouldn't be bad either."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) smiled and said, "Then I'll take you there in a helicopter! We'll be back soon."

Zijin Manor had a light helicopter, and Lin Wan'er (Alani) was skilled at piloting helicopters. The two hit it off immediately and set off from Zijin Manor under the cover of night, heading to the mountains near Champs-Élysées.

While piloting the helicopter, Lin Wan'er (Alani) spoke to Charlie Wade through noise-canceling headphones and the intercom system: "Young Master, I can ask Old Sun to use his connections to build a helicopter landing pad near the teleportation array at Heming Mountain under the guise of scientific research. That will make traveling back and forth much more convenient. We can just fly directly from the teleportation array at Heming Mountain to Chengdu Airport, and the whole trip will only take twenty minutes."

Charlie Wade said happily, "That's wonderful! With the helicopter, we've cleared the last hurdle, making it much easier to return to Jinling in the future."
