Chapter 7991

4-4 minutes

charlie wade wasn't sure why his mother had reached that conclusion back then, but he agreed with Lin Wan'er (Alani)'s point of view. Some people can deduce the essence of things from clues, while others can deduce it from underlying logic. The best example of the former was Li Yalin, and the best example of the latter, he used to think, was Lin Wan'er (Alani), but now he realized his mother was one of them as well.

Lin Wan'er (Alani) didn't need to find an opportunity to verify with Lydia (Ava) (Charlie's mom); her blueprint was gradually becoming clearer.

Back then, Lydia (Ava) (Charlie's mom) and bruce wade must have first discovered some metaphysical clues. Those clues attracted the couple's attention, and Lydia (Ava) (Charlie's mom) deduced from the few clues left behind by those top cultivators that these people did not come from Earth.

Judging from her request for Stanford to investigate together, she initially approached this matter with a scientific mindset and perspective, but the path of scientific research ultimately failed, and she gradually turned to metaphysics.

Moreover, Lydia (Ava) (Charlie's mom)'s message to Stanford mentioned Heming Mountain. Her original intention was to organize a professional research team with Stanford, equipped with specialized instruments, to search for clues at Heming Mountain. However, Stanford scoffed at her judgment, believing that this former darling of finance and the internet had inexplicably embarked on a path of metaphysics, leading them to conclude that America had lost its strategic value.

After reviewing all the relevant clues, Lin Wan'er (Alani) put the documents away and said to charlie wade, "Young Master, I've looked through it enough. Let's go, let's take a stroll around the school."

charlie wade nodded slightly and left the school history museum with Lin Wan'er (Alani), the principal following closely behind.

Just as they emerged from the museum, a familiar figure ran towards them, waving and respectfully calling out, "Mr. wade!"

charlie wade looked up and saw Steve Rothschild, his slightly overweight body swaying, running quickly towards them. Once he stood before him, charlie wade asked curiously, "How did you get here so quickly?"

"Quick?" Steve smiled and said, "Not really. I came as soon as I received the news, and I even had the plane speed up, but it still took almost four hours."

charlie wade then realized that he and Lin Wan'er (Alani) had been in the school history museum for several hours.

They had been reading materials related to his mother and hadn't paid attention to the time.

The principal then respectfully stepped forward and said to Steve, "Mr. Rothschild, your arrival is a great honor for Stanford!"

Steve, still unsure how to flatter charlie wade, paid no attention to the compliments and simply replied, "Alright, alright, this is none of your business. You go ahead and do your work. I'll keep Mr. wade company. I'll have someone notify you if anything comes up."

The principal could only nod awkwardly, "Yes, Mr. Rothschild, I'm at your service."

Wade patted Steve on the shoulder and said, "Steve, why don't you go find a place to rest with the principal? I'll show Miss Lin around and let you know if anything comes up."

Steve felt a little annoyed thinking about how he had just used the same words to get rid of the principal. After all, the principal was still there, and if he had heard it, he would have lost face.

Naturally, he dared not show any dissatisfaction with Charlie Wade, so he quickly nodded and said, "Yes, Mr. Wade, please let me know."

The principal was alarmed and couldn't help but ponder the identities of Charlie Wade and Lin Wan'er (Alani). It was already astonishing that these two young people knew Steve Rothschild, but he never expected that Steve would be so eager to curry favor with them. More importantly, they didn't seem flattered at all; on the contrary, they felt it was all perfectly natural.

Steve, in his self-righteousness, assumed that Charlie Wade might have come to Stanford to bring the girl beside him, so he said to the principal, "Come on, let's have a good chat. I have something to tell you."

Upon hearing this, the principal was overjoyed. He wasn't afraid that Steve would look down on him; he was afraid that Steve wouldn't even bother to look at him. Now that Steve had taken the initiative to talk to him, it proved that he at least had the opportunity to speak with the second-in-command of the Rothschild family.

So the principal quickly arranged for his secretary to set up a meeting place in his office and then respectfully invited Steve to his office.

On their way to the office building in a golf cart, the Stanford president cautiously asked Steve, "Mr. Rothschild, what is your relationship with those two young men with Asian features?"

Steve replied without hesitation, "That young man is my boss."

"Boss?!"

The president was speechless.

How could a young man with Asian features become the boss of the legal heir to the Rothschild family? It sounded as absurd as Elon Musk, the world's richest man, working for someone else. Seeing his stunned expression, Steve couldn't help but laugh, "What? Surprised?"

The principal nodded honestly and said, "Surprised, very surprised and incomprehensible..."

Steve said calmly, "There's no need to tell you this, but since these two have condescended to come to Stanford, they might need your help in the future. Remember, Mr. Wade is my boss. From now on, his coming to Stanford is the same as my coming. Whatever he asks you to do, you have to do. Even if he asks you to demolish a building in Stanford, just arrange for people to do it. After you're done, come to me, and I'll reimburse you."

The principal was even more shocked and didn't know what to say at all.

Steve couldn't help but mutter, "What are you standing there for? Did you hear what I just said?"

The principal snapped out of his daze and quickly nodded respectfully, "Yes, yes! Don't worry, I will definitely carry out your orders!"

"That's more like it." Steve nodded in satisfaction and said, "By the way, Mr. Wade brought that girl here this time, maybe he wants to arrange for her to study at Stanford. Remember, no matter who Mr. Wade arranges, you must immediately arrange the admissions process and give her the highest level full scholarship. In addition, whoever he arranges to enter which college, you must arrange for the best tutor in that college to be in contact with him. If you dare to be negligent in any way, you can quit being the principal."

The principal quickly said, "Mr. Rothschild, since you've said so, I wouldn't object even if I had to create a separate college for Mr. Wade! You can rest assured!"

"Steve smiled and said, "I'm very satisfied with this. Just remember one thing: at Stanford, seeing Mr. Wade is more useful than seeing me."

Charlie Wade and Lin Wan'er (Alani) strolled leisurely across the Stanford campus. It was already five o'clock in the afternoon, and many college students were emerging from the various academic buildings, heading towards the numerous sports fields.

The campus was packed with outdoor basketball courts, football fields, tennis courts, and other sports facilities. Although Stanford wasn't a sports-focused school, the culture of university sports teams in America was deeply ingrained, so sports occupied a significant portion of the time for college students. For most, the first thing they did outside of class was exercise and training.

Lin Wan'er (Alani) seemed to really enjoy this atmosphere; she would stop and watch at each sports field. Charlie Wade could tell from her expression that she seemed to be subtly anticipating this kind of life.

It made sense; at seventeen or eighteen, she was at her most energetic stage, and this kind of vibrant sports activity naturally held a strong appeal.

The two arrived at the edge of the rugby field, where the school team was holding a scrimmage. The coaches had divided the teams into two groups, and the two sides were engaged in a fierce competition on the field. This sport had the most participants and the largest audience; many people were waving flags and cheering from the sidelines, creating a very enthusiastic atmosphere.

Lin Wan'er (Alani) and Charlie Wade found a quiet spot to sit down. Lin Wan'er (Alani) rested her chin on her hand, watching the teams training on the field, and asked, "Have you ever played rugby, young master?"

"No," Charlie Wade shook his head and laughed, "I don't even understand the rules."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) smiled, "I used to play, though. Many years ago, none of the girls on my team could outrun me. Maybe it was the effect of the Everlasting Youth Elixir."

At this moment, the scrimmage began. Charlie Wade watched, somewhat bewildered, as the group bumped into each other, scrambled for the ball, and shouted, until one of the boys, number 10, got the ball, and a burst of screams from the girls erupted from the sidelines.

Lin Wan'er (Alani) laughed and said, "Looks like this quarterback is a star at Stanford, with so many female fans."

Charlie Wade didn't understand what a quarterback was, so he asked Lin Wan'er (Alani), "Is the role of the quarterback very important?" Lin Wan'er (Alani) nodded and explained, "The quarterback is the most important core of the team, the brain of the offense, and the leader on the field."

As she spoke, Lin Wan'er (Alani) looked at the number 10 on the field and smiled, "However, this guy seems to be playing only so-so, not particularly talented or capable. Logically, someone of this level shouldn't be a quarterback on the Stanford team; he probably has a powerful background."

charlie wade laughed, “Looks like even in America, favoritism plays a role; those with connections can become starters.”

Lin Wan'er (Alani) smiled, “That's always been the culture on the school teams here.”

After watching them play half the game, and after the coach blew the whistle and everyone began to rest, Lin Wan'er (Alani) stood up and said to charlie wade, “Young Master, let's go.”

charlie wade nodded, and as he stood up, his eyes unconsciously glanced back at the field.

By this time, the players had already walked from the field to the sidelines, and many of the girls watching began to rush towards different players. A girl of exceptionally high caliber, of mixed North American and Asian descent, walked with a smile towards the blonde, blue-eyed quarterback, number 10.

The quarterback was clearly dissatisfied with his performance earlier, his expression showing displeasure, but upon seeing the girl, his eyes lit up again.

The girl handed the quarterback a clean towel, then opened a sports drink bottle. Instead of immediately handing it over, she waited for him to wipe his sweat and return the towel before taking the towel and offering him the drink – a truly considerate gesture.

charlie wade, with his keen hearing and focused attention on the two, immediately overheard their conversation.

At that moment, the girl was comforting him in fluent American English, smiling as she said, “Robert, you did a great job just now. Next time, if you can adjust your tactics earlier based on the situation on the field, you'll definitely perform even better.”

The quarterback nodded slightly, looking at the girl with a smile, “You're right. I also think my biggest problem is that my tactical adjustments aren't timely enough.”

The girl gently stroked his back, reassuring him, "It's okay, you've already done a great job. You're improving every day. I believe it won't be long before you completely dominate the game. I've always believed in you! You're the best!"

The quarterback looked at the girl with some surprise at first, a glimmer of light appearing in his eyes, but he quickly gave a somewhat dejected, self-deprecating laugh, "Everyone says I'm the best, but I know that most people say that because my last name is Rothschild. If it weren't for that last name, I probably wouldn't have any merits that would be noticed at Stanford."

charlie wade frowned slightly.

Rothschild?

This quarterback is actually from the Rothschild family? Why hadn't that old Steve mentioned it before?

Just as charlie wade was wondering, the stunningly beautiful and tall girl smiled gently, "Robert, I have a million virtues in my eyes. The Rothschild name isn't just one of those ten thousand. I admire your self-discipline, your competitiveness, your character, and your composure. To describe you in an ancient Chinese saying, you are like a lotus rising from the mud, untainted by its filth, cleansed by the clear water, never becoming seductive—always maintaining your true self." "

Really?" The quarterback was clearly surprised, but the disbelief in his eyes had dropped from seven points to three, while the initial three points of surprise had become seven.

charlie wade sighed inwardly, "This girl is really something! She handles everything perfectly, is incredibly considerate, pays great attention to detail, and, most importantly, provides a high level of emotional value. She's clearly complimenting him, but she makes it sound like it comes from the bottom of her heart."

Seeing that charlie wade had gotten up but showed no sign of leaving, his eyes still fixed on the field, Lin Wan'er (Alani) asked him curiously, "Young Master, haven't you had enough yet? Perhaps I could stay and watch a little longer? They'll probably practice another half."charlie wade's brows furrowed even more.

He looked at the mixed-race girl and said to Lin Wan'er (Alani), "Miss Lin, I feel something's not right."

“Not right?” Lin Wan’er (Alani) asked in surprise, “What do you mean by ‘not right,’ young master?”

charlie wade stared at the mixed-race girl, watching her use her exceptional emotional intelligence to coax the previously dejected quarterback into a beaming smile, and he already had the answer in his heart.

His gaze gradually turned cold, a coldness tinged with the excitement of a hunter catching his prey. He pulled Lin Wan’er (Alani) back to sit down and said, “Miss Lin, did you see the girl next to that quarterback?”

Lin Wan’er (Alani) nodded, smiling, “Yes, I saw her. She’s very beautiful and tall, at least 1.78 meters, right? Her proportions are perfect. It’s hard not to notice a girl like that. Perhaps she fits your aesthetic?”

“No.” charlie wade shook his head coldly, a cold smile playing on his lips, and said in a low voice, “I guess she’s a scholar!”

PS: I’ve been a bit stuck on the plot lately and haven’t wanted to make it too drawn out, so I’ve been working on it diligently. Please forgive me. I’m starting to see some progress now.

The Amazing son in law - The Amazing son in law Chapter 7995

3-4 minutes

Within the organizational structure of the Destroy the Qing Society, while Sara’s strongest fighters were the three elders and four earls, what truly chilled charlie was the omnipresent Scholar.

The Scholar Plan, like the Great Blood Transformation Plan, was an extremely cruel and vicious conspiracy.

The Great Blood Transformation Plan completely separated all the assassins and their families in their respective locations; whoever escaped would have their entire family executed, thus eliminating the possibility of betrayal and defection to the greatest extent possible from a human perspective.

The Scholar Plan, however, was more like a global infiltration and bloodline penetration program, targeting the global elite.

charlie's uncle and aunt were both victims of the Scholar Plan, and his maternal grandfather's family was nearly wiped out as a result.

The most insidious aspect of this plan was its near-impossible nature, as it involved pouring all their resources—a person's childhood and youth—into completely shaping them into the perfect partner for a particular individual.

In other words, in a normal relationship, both people need time to adjust to each other. But with a scholar, it's different. The other person makes you feel like they are your soulmate, a match made in heaven, a perfect fit. This brings immense surprise, but it can also lead to complete delusion.

Because, who in this world is truly a perfect match for you from the start? Unless that person was born for you, or raised for you. For every rough edge you have, the other person will carve out their own flesh and blood to accommodate you. For every flaw you have, the other person will do their utmost to improve themselves and find strengths to compensate for it.

This is the key to the scholar's powerful influence. Once you're with someone like that, no one in the world will be more suitable for you.

This young Rothschild from the Rothschild family was likely facing just such a predicament.

He picked up the phone and called Steve.

Steve was currently in the president's office, smoking a cigar, accompanied by the president. He wasn't interested in Stanford, nor in science or academia, so he received absolutely no exposure to university life. His only regret as he smoked a cigar in the president's office was the absence of a young and beautiful university cheerleader in his arms.

Upon receiving charlie's call, he smiled obsequiously and asked, "Mr. wade, where are you? Is there anything I can do for you?"

charlie asked him, "Steve, does your family have any younger relatives studying at Stanford? I think it's Robert Rothschild."

Steve frowned and said, "Robert? That little brat studies here? I haven't really been paying attention. He's my fourth brother's grandson. He should have just started college not long ago. I didn't even know where he was studying. Mr. Wade, you've run into him?"

Charlie hummed in agreement and said, "I just happened to see him playing basketball. Tell me about your fourth brother's family."

"My fourth brother..." Steve suddenly became inexplicably angry and said, "That guy is a cunning and opportunistic bastard. All these years, he's been focusing on Silicon Valley and the tech industry. His eldest son graduated from Stanford, and Robert is his eldest son's eldest son."
