As the two were pondering who had such influence that Steve would personally introduce them, Charlie Wade and Lin Wan'er (Alani) entered the private room hand in hand.

Robert was stunned to see Charlie Wade, while Rachel, usually adept at concealing her emotions, completely forgot to hide her astonishment.

It wasn't that they recognized Charlie Wade and Lin Wan'er (Alani), but rather that they never expected that the young people Steve would personally introduce were two purely Asian people.

In terms of race, the influence of Asians in America is naturally far lower than that of the white people who dominate Western society, and Steve was practically at the very top of the Western white upper class, even surpassing the actual power of many politicians. Robert and Rachel couldn't understand—even Asia's richest man was no match for Steve—just who were these two Asian men?

Just then, Steve said respectfully to Charlie Wade, "Andy, this is my grand-nephew Robert Rothschild, and his girlfriend."

He then looked at Rachel Getty and asked with a smile, "Miss, may I ask your name?"

Rachel replied somewhat nervously, "Mr. Rothschild, my name is Rachel Getty, from Miami."

Steve raised an eyebrow in surprise and smiled, "Getty? So you're from the Getty family?"

"Yes," Rachel nodded slightly, her voice tinged with nervousness, "My father is David Getty, who currently oversees the Getty family's oil-related businesses." Steve smiled and nodded, asking her, "What is your relationship with Chris Getty?"

Rachel quickly replied, "He's my grandfather."

Steve chuckled, "I see. Over the years, he's tried to invite me to dinner many times, but I've always been too busy. I never expected to have dinner with his granddaughter today."

Steve's words were tactful, but Rachel understood his meaning: even her grandfather held no weight in his eyes, not even worthy of dining with him. She was truly lucky today.

So Rachel quickly smiled and said, "Mr. Rothschild, you must be very busy. It's an honor to have dinner with you."

Steve smiled, "I rarely come to the West Coast. The reason I'm here today is because of Andy."

He then said to Robert, "Robert, Andy is a close friend of mine. He wants his sister, this young and beautiful Anna, to study at Stanford. That's why I came to Stanford to meet your president. Considering Anna might study at Stanford in the future, I invited you and Miss Getty to dinner to introduce you so you can look out for each other in the future."
