

The Amazing son in law Chapter 8048

In the frigid Antarctic continent, where icy winds whipped up ice crystals, Charlie Wade and Lin Wan'er (Alani) appeared atop the thick ice sheet via a teleportation array.

Having just returned to Antarctica from the height of summer in America, where the temperature difference was nearly a hundred degrees Celsius, neither of them seemed to be suffering. The biting wind and snow whipped their faces, instantly coating their eyebrows and eyelashes with glistening ice crystals, but even Lin Wan'er (Alani), who had no cultivation, was unfazed by the extreme cold.

There were still two months until the end of the Antarctic winter, but Charlie Wade had prepared a series of grand gifts for Wu Yongzhen. Therefore, this trip back was merely a temporary rest and a visit to Yun Rugo and Song Ruyu. In a few days, Charlie Wade planned to use the teleportation array at Crane Cry Mountain to return to China and finalize his plan to forge a hundred-meter-long iron shield. Afterward, he would set off for America again.

Fortunately, for Charlie Wade now, traveling to any place in the world was a piece of cake; he could simply use the teleportation array to return to America.

The snowmobile he'd brought was still lying quietly in the ring's storage space. Interestingly, when Charlie Wade retrieved the snowmobile using his mind, its engine still retained a high level of residual heat, as if it had just been turned off.

This further convinced Charlie Wade that the storage space was a high-dimensional space where time did not pass; things there wouldn't spoil, and even their own temperature wouldn't change.

Charlie wade even suspected that there might not be any air inside, no medium capable of conducting heat—it was a near-empty space.

The snowmobile, still able to instantly blow out warm air, amazed Lin Wan'er (Alani). She jokingly said to Charlie wade, "I wonder what kind of physical existence this ring's space possesses. If top physicists were to study it, they might make new discoveries."

Charlie wade smiled, "Instead of having physicists study the ring, it would be better to have them study teleportation arrays. Perhaps that's the only way for interstellar migration."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) nodded in agreement, saying, "Fuel-based space travel will never allow us to reach the next star system in a lifetime. Only teleportation makes it possible."

Then, Lin Wan'er (Alani) asked Charlie wade, "Young Master, in your opinion, are there any teleportation arrays left on Earth for leaving Earth?"

Charlie wade replied without hesitation, "Definitely. They must have left using teleportation arrays. They didn't destroy such a large underground city, nor did they destroy so many teleportation arrays. It's unlikely they would destroy the teleportation array for leaving. It must be somewhere on Earth, or even somewhere in the underground city." "But that kind of formation has a teleportation distance hundreds of billions of times greater than the teleportation formations we've used. The energy required to operate it is probably far beyond our imagination. Even if we find it, we might not be able to get it running."

Lin Wan'er (Alani) smiled and said, "Even if we find it, I wouldn't dare let you operate it, young master. These people's supernatural powers are far beyond our imagination; it would definitely be extremely dangerous."

After saying that, Lin Wan'er (Alani) added with a smile, "Unless you take me with you, young master."

Charlie wade smiled and casually asked her, "If I take you with me, aren't you afraid of the danger?"

Lin Wan'er (Alani)'s eyes were firm. With a bright smile, Lin Wan'er (Alani) said, "Young master, if you don't mind my weakness, I'm willing to go through fire and water with you. I don't want anything else, just to have someone to look after me. I don't want you to risk your life for me, but I've lived for four hundred years, which, as they say, is more than enough. For the rest of my life, even if it means facing a million enemies, I will go."

Lin Wan'er (Alani)'s eyes were clear and sincere. For a moment, the clarity in her eyes made Charlie wade's heart skip a beat. When their eyes met, Lin Wan'er (Alani) instinctively thought of looking away, but quickly abandoned the idea.

At this moment, she chose to let her shy and gentle self retreat slightly, and let her brave and determined self face Charlie wade, expressing her stance and sincerity with her eyes.

There was no doubt that she admired Charlie wade. Even though she was much older and more mature than Charlie wade, the girl in her heart had long since fallen for this handsome and courageous man before her.

Previously, she would always restrain herself from revealing those emotions, but at this moment, she chose to face Charlie wade directly, and also face herself.

Seeing her gaze, Charlie wade felt a sudden surge of panic.

This feeling was different from Xiao Churan's, different from Nanako's, and different from any other woman who had ever been close to him.

Because only Lin Wan'er (Alani) knew everything about him, and only he knew everything about Lin Wan'er (Alani).

That feeling of "only I understand you best, and only you understand me best"—there would never be another like it in the world.

Facing such an intelligent, beautiful, and incredibly resilient girl, it was impossible not to be moved.

For a moment, Charlie Wade also felt that if one day, everything settled down, and he no longer had to worry about revenge or cultivation, if he could spend his remaining years with Lin Wan'er (Alani), riding horses in the mountains, he would experience a feeling even more sublime than happiness. Charlie Wade didn't know how to describe it, so he tentatively called it a sense of destiny—it seemed that this was the most perfect and fitting ending for his life.

That ultimate perfection is like a drop of water in the ocean hundreds of millions of years ago. It evaporated from the sea, crossed thousands of mountains and rivers, and turned into snow in the polar regions. For tens of millions of years afterward, it remained quietly there. But that wasn't its true perfect destination. It waited and waited for tens of millions of years until the global warming at the end of the Permian period finally melted the ice and snow that hadn't melted for tens of millions of years. And that drop of water, after tens of millions of years, finally returned to the sea.

This is true destiny.

The former Lin Wan'er (Alani) possessed the gentleness, grace, and restraint of a woman from the Ming Dynasty, while Charlie Wade had the constraints of a married man. They both treated each other with respect.

But after experiencing so much together, even exploring the most wondrous ancient formations in the world together before returning to Antarctica, both of them unconsciously gained a sense of freedom.

Like weary cattle and horses in a bustling city, suddenly lying on a plateau free from light pollution, staring at the Milky Way all night without blinking, with the vast universe before them and their own insignificance in their hearts. At that moment, one's vision and perspective expand considerably due to the profound and magnificent Milky Way, and the layers of shackles that previously bound one's heart become weakest.
