

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 578

Wynn wasn't at home, but she could pretty much guess what her family must be thinking.

She started the car, ready to drive off, when her gaze accidentally fell on the gift boxes from Trevor and the others. Then, she paused.

He hadn't proposed today, but she was still curious about what he'd given her.

Wynn picked up the gift box from Trevor and opened it.

Inside was a high-quality diamond necklace, probably worth several million dollars.

As a birthday gift, it was considered impressive even for someone like Trevor.

But-

Compared to the gifts he used to give her always extravagant and exceptional— this necklace felt... lacking.

Still, thinking of how he was pushing to divorce Celeste, this less-than-spectacular gift didn't bother her much.

With that in mind, she set the box aside. Her eyes landed on Beck's gift next. She hesitated, then opened it as well.

It was a bottle of red wine.

Not cheap, either.

A gift perfectly suitable for a general female friend.

But compared to before, the difference was obvious. It felt perfunctory.

Wynn wasn't surprised. She let out a mocking little laugh, closed the box, and drove home.

Everyone was waiting for news.

The moment she came in, Linda rushed over excitedly, "Wynn, how was it? Is the diamond pretty? Hurry, show us—"

Wynn said calmly, "There was no proposal."

"N-No proposal?"

Not just Linda-everyone else froze mid-smile.

Realizing what that meant, Patricia quickly asked, "Wynn, did... something happen?"

The others also assumed she and Trevor must've had a disagreement.

Wynn shook her head. "Nothing happened. He just didn't propose."

Then she asked, "All of you only heard he bought a diamond to propose but did anyone actually say he would propose today? .net>

"Well... No."

Hearing that, everyone finally understood.

Linda hadn't expected such a huge misunderstanding.

Thinking about how Wynn had probably been looking forward to it all day, only for this outcome

She looked at Wynn guiltily. "I'm sorry. Since today's your birthday, I just assumed

"It's fine." Wynn didn't say more and headed upstairs.

Lilian called after her, "There's still some soup in the kitchen. Have a bit befo—" "No. I'm going up to touch up my makeup. Trevor will come pick me up later." Hearing that, everyone relaxed. Clearly, she wasn't actually upset over the misunderstanding.

Linda immediately let out a sigh of relief, followed by the others.

Feeling better, Linda glanced at the gift boxes Wynn had carried in earlier. Curiosity got the better of her. Wynn, are these from Trev and the others? What did they give you? Can we take a look?"

The others were also curious, but they just wouldn't ask outright.

Wynn didn't care. "Go ahead."

With that, she went upstairs.

The moment she was gone, they eagerly opened the gifts.

But after seeing what Trevor had given, they all felt a bit disappointed.

After all, Trevor had always been extremely generous.

Ruby said, "These are already pretty valuable. Besides, Wynn is going out with Trevor later anyway."

Linda agreed. "Exactly."

Lilian and Patricia weren't disappointed at all. In their eyes, & given how deep Trevor and Wynn's relationship was, even if this year's gift wasn't as extravagant as before it definitely carried his sincerity.

As long as their relationship stayed strong, nothing else really mattered.

Chapter 579

Earlier, Wynn had said she would be going out later with Trevor.

But more than an hour passed before she finally came downstairs-wearing pajamas, her makeup completely removed.

Linda was surprised and couldn't help asking, "Wynn, you're not going out anymore?"

Wynn's expression was blank. "Trevor had something come up last minute. We're not going out."

"Oh..."

So on her birthday, Trevor only had dinner with her, together with Beck and Miles?

He did give her gifts, but compared to the past few years, he really seemed a lot more indifferent this time.

Still, no one overthought it. They assumed he genuinely had something urgent to handle.

For the next few days, Celeste was extremely busy with work.

That afternoon, she was at Yoda Vision reviewing data when her phone suddenly rang. The moment she answered, her face went pale. She immediately rushed toward the hospital.

Once she got into the car, the doctor's words echoed in her mind. She paused, then quickly called Jordyn.

Jordyn had just gotten out of school.

Seeing Celeste calling, she answered happily, "Mom!"

Trevor happened to be the one picking her up today. Hearing Jordyn call her mother, he glanced over.

Whatever Celeste said on the phone made Jordyn tense up. "Okay, I understand. I'll go right now."

"What's wrong?" Trevor asked, noticing her anxious expression.

"Mom said Granny is sick. She's in the hospital right now. She wants me to go see her."

Trevor paused at that.

Jordyn said, "Dad, let's go to the hospital first, okay?"

"Alright."

Half an hour later, they arrived at the hospital.

Once they were inside, Trevor called Celeste. "Jo and I are here. Where are you?"

Celeste didn't expect him to come, but she didn't have the energy to think about it. So, she told him the exact location.

A moment later, Trevor and Jordyn spotted Celeste and the other members of the Rodriguez family outside the emergency room.

The Rodriguez family was surprised to see him.

But with Betty still in the emergency room with her condition unknown, no one had the mind to care why he was here. They merely glanced at him, then looked away.

Trevor didn't say anything about their reaction. He simply walked over to her pale face. Seeing her worried

face, he asked, "What happened?"

Celeste was in no mood to deal with him.

But with Jordyn present, she still answered, "A flu led to pneumonia."

The situation was very serious, so-

When he saw she had called Jordyn to the hospital, Trevor had already guessed that Betty's condition must be critical.

Otherwise, Celeste wouldn't have rushed Jordyn over like that.

He said nothing.

Celeste also stayed silent, her eyes fixed firmly on the emergency room doors.

Jordyn didn't fully understand the illness, but from the adults' expressions, she could tell it was severe.

She fell quiet too.

Time crawled painfully slowly.

No one knew how long had passed before the emergency room doors finally opened.

Celeste and the Rodriguez family immediately crowded forward, asking the doctor about the situation.

"She was brought in fairly promptly

The patient's condition is or temporarily stabilized. But she's elderly, so she'll need to be hospitalized for treatment."

Hearing that Betty was out of immediate danger, everyone, including Celeste, finally let out a breath of relief.

Once they began busying themselves with the admission procedures, they suddenly realized—

Trevor was still there.

He hadn't left.

Chapter 580

As the elder, Ivan was the first to speak. "Thank you for bringing Jo over. You've been standing for so long-you both must be tired. Go home and rest."

Before Trevor could respond, Jordyn went straight to hug Celeste. "I don't want to go home. Mom, I want to stay here with you."

With how critical the situation had been earlier, everyone in the family had thought the old lady might not make it.

Sensing her mother's anxiety, Jordyn wanted to stay by her side.

Facing Jordyn's small, eager eyes, Celeste paused. Her expression softened with a mix of emotions.

She gently touched Jordyn's cheek. "I have to stay in the hospital to take care of your granny. I won't be able to look after you. Go home with Dad first."

"Okay... Then I'll come tomorrow to see you and Granny."

Celeste nodded. "Alright."

Then she turned to Trevor. "Take Jo home."

He didn't say anything extra-only asked, "Should we tell Grandma?"

Celeste shook her head lightly.

Martha was elderly too. With the situation still unstable, even if they told her, she could only worry helplessly.

Trevor understood. He said nothing more, exchanged a nod with Ivan, and left with Jordyn.

Betty's condition still wasn't stable. She was still in critical condition.

Celeste and the others spoke with the doctor for quite a while, carefully understanding every detail. After that, she called Nadine.

Nadine was busy and only saw the call and messages half an hour later. "Alright, I'll help you contact a few specialists. Don't panic, Cece. Your grandma will be fine."

After hanging up, it didn't take long before someone arrived at the hospital asking to review her grandmother's condition.

Celeste didn't expect them to arrive so quickly and thanked them repeatedly.

After that doctor spoke with the attending physician, two more specialists arrived-famous experts from respiratory medicine and geriatrics who had also rushed over specifically to assess Betty's situation.

Just after she finished greeting them, her phone rang.

It was Nadine.

Celeste stepped aside and answered, "Mrs. Newman, Dr. Yulia Landry, and her team have arrived. Thank you "

Nadine chuckled softly over the phone. "Iust called them, but Dre Landry and Dr Quinella Hayes said they were already on their way. It means someone else contacted them before I did."

Celeste froze.

Before she could respond, Nadine continued, "It was Trevor."

Celeste had already suspected it.

Other than the Rodriguez family, the only person who knew her grandmother was ill was Trevor.

And among all these people, the only one who had the connections and the ability to summon this many specialist doctors was also Trevor.

Nadine asked, "Have things improved between you two?"

Celeste snapped back and replied calmly, "No."

Nadine understood the relationship between Betty and Martha. Hearing that, she assumed Trevor stepped in for Martha's sake and didn't press further. After a bit more.

conversation, she hung up.

Even though Celeste knew he did it for Martha's sake, after ending the call, she still sent him a message.

"Dr. Landry and her team have arrived. Thank you."

Trevor replied quickly. "You're welcome."

Celeste then put down her phone. Trevor didn't send anything else either.
