

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 587

"This..." Everyone at the scene stared at each other, stunned.

Lazarus had suspected that Trevor was interested in Celeste, but he didn't expect Trevor to be this openly... forward.

He cleared his throat and tried to remind him politely, "Then we'll trouble you, Mr. Fleming. Ms. Rodriguez is quite close to one of the female engineers from YodaVision. Maybe... She could go up with you to look after Ms. Rodriguez?"

The other YodaVision staff immediately nodded frantically. "Yes, Mr. Fleming, maybe

"No need. If you're worried, you can inform Mr. Yoder," Trevor looked at the YodaVision staff and said.

With that, he said nothing more. Holding the unconscious Celeste, he turned and left.

The YodaVision team froze for a moment. They honestly didn't understand what he meant.

But with something this serious, of course, they had to report it to Matthias.

Someone immediately contacted him, stumbling through the explanation.

Hearing it, Matthias clenched his teeth hard, but he still replied calmly, "I've already arranged someone to receive Cel. Nothing you're worried about will happen. Don't panic."

Only then did the caller sigh in relief.

The others, though still confused, finally relaxed.

Meanwhile, Trevor walked straight into the elevator with Celeste in his arms.

And that scene was clearly seen by Linda and her family.

Watching Trevor carry Celeste in front of everyone and send her upstairs, looking like he genuinely cared about her, Linda and the rest of the Shaws didn't think much of it.

After all, Celeste was his wife. Even if they were getting divorced, now that she was drunk, it wasn't a big deal for him to send her back to her room.

It was just. They'd heard that Trevor had always been extremely cold toward Celeste. He walked past her like she was a stranger and didn't even care whether she lived or died...

Now what he did looked a bit different from before, but they didn't take it to heart.

Trevor didn't see Linda's group, but Jacob did.

Seeing Trevor carry Celeste upstairs, he wasn't actually surprised. This had happened once not long ago.

He glanced at Trevor, who was looking down at Celeste with an unreadable expression.

When the elevator doors opened,

Jacob stepped out first to open the room door. Then, Trevor carried Celeste inside while Jacob waited outside.

He waited ten, twenty minutes. But there was still no sign of Trevor coming out.

He paused... then eventually left.

On his way down, he happened to run into the Shaw family in the elevator.

Patricia and the others greeted him politely. "Mr. Collins."

Jacob nodded. Before he could speak, Ruby suddenly remembered something and asked, "Where's Trevor?"

Jacob paused, then said, "Mr. Fleming... is still in the room."

The others immediately understood what he meant. They all stiffened.

Linda reacted the fastest. "You-you're saying Trev hasn't come out since he sent that bitch upstairs?"

Jacob nodded, but after thinking for a moment, he added, "This doesn't necessarily mean anything."

In his opinion, Trevor still loved Wynn deeply. Even if he'd been treating Celeste differently late shouldn't do anything that would hurt Wynn.

he

Chapter 588

Lilian and Patricia had no idea that Trevor's attitude toward Celeste had already changed.

Hearing that he had taken Celeste back to her room and still hadn't come out after so long, they were a bit surprised at first, but quickly dismissed it.

After all, they'd heard long ago that even though Trevor and Celeste had been married for years, they barely ever shared a room.

He had absolutely no interest in her.

So, even if he stayed in her room a little longer this time, none of them thought anything would happen between them.

Besides, with how deep Trevor's feelings were for Wynn, even if something did happen between him and Celeste tonight, Celeste still wouldn't shake his love for Wynn.

If that was the case, then what was there to worry about?

Seeing that Jacob seemed to be thinking the same thing, they didn't probe further into the matter between Trevor and Wynn.

...

The next morning, Celeste woke up and saw the messages Matthias had sent her.

It was only then that she learned what had happened the previous night.

She sat on the edge of the bed, trying to recall, but she had absolutely no impression of anything Matthias described.

What she did notice was that her whole body felt clean and fresh, her makeup had been removed, and she was already changed into comfortable sleepwear.

She replied to Matthias's message.

Matthias, already awake, called her as soon as he saw her reply. "How are you feeling? Head hurting?"

Celeste rubbed her temples. "Just a little. Still manageable."

"Good."

After checking on her, he couldn't help complaining, "What is Trevor doing? Even if he's not around, we at YodaVision have plenty of people who can look after you. Why is he inserting himself into your business?"

"Do you know that because he suddenly pulled that stunt last night, everyone almost thought I'd struck some shady deal with him using you as leverage?"

Celeste didn't overthink it. Her voice was calm. "I'm Jo's mother. He was probably just worried something might happen to me. For Jo's sake, he wanted to make sure I was safe."

Matthias thought about it and agreed that this explanation made sense.

He snorted and chatted with her for a while before hanging up.

...

The team-building event continued until Sunday afternoon.

She didn't see Trevor at all during these two days.

But as she left the hotel on Sunday afternoon, she ran into the Locketts and the Shaws.

They glanced at her and immediately looked away like she was invisible. Only Linda glared at her viciously before getting in the car.

Looking for someone in Hanoi today

Willing to lie about how we met

Celeste ignored them and left.

She had just returned home when her phone rang.

It was Zachary.

At their previous dinner, he had mentioned that she would likely need to visit the military base this month. She'd been waiting for the notice for half a month now.

She didn't expect the call to come right before her and Trevor's divorce's mandatory waiting period ended.

After learning that Zachary's people were already on their way to the Rodriguez residence, Celeste sent Trevor a message.

"I'll be leaving for a business trip soon, and I probably won't make it back until a few days after the mandatory waiting period ends. I contact you the moment return. Then we can go to the courthouse to finalize the divorce."

It took over half an hour before Trevor replied.

"Okay, got it."

Chapter 589

The Lockets and the Shaws watched in the direction Celeste had left, then got into their car and drove off as well.

Wynn had urgent matters to handle, so she didn't go with them to the Fleming family's hot spring resort.

When they got home, Wynn also happened to be back.

Just as Wynn was about to speak after seeing them return, Ruby said, "Wynn, guess who we ran into at the hotel these past two days?"

Wynn didn't even need to hear the answer to know they must've run into Celeste.

Sure enough, before she could respond, Ruby revealed it.

What happened that day-Trevor hugging Celeste in public, and then staying in her room for a long time after taking her back.

Ruby sat down and recounted the whole thing to Wynn, then pouted, "Even though I know Trevor doesn't actually have feelings for Celeste, seeing him treat her so well still makes me uncomfortable."

Linda chimed in, "Exactly."

The others didn't comment when Ruby brought this up to Wynn. After all, they truly didn't take Celeste seriously at all.

Because of that, none of them noticed how Wynn's fingers suddenly tightened around her cup when she heard the news.

Going to the military base this time, Celeste did not run into Caleb again.

The matter, despite being urgent, was resolved surprisingly quickly. On top of that, Celeste stayed an extra day to help Zachary take care of other work.

She originally thought she would have to wait several more days until after her divorce mandatory waiting period with Trevor ended before she could finish everything.

In reality, when she left the base, there was still one full day before the mandatory waiting period ended.

Once she returned home, the very first thing she did was send Trevor a message.

"I wrapped things up ahead of time. I'm free the morning after tomorrow."

It wasn't until almost an hour later that Trevor replied, "Something.

came up at the last minute. Th divorce with have to wait." .net>

Celeste paused.

She didn't expect this again.

Previously, when she'd told Trevor she might have to delay the divorce by a few days due to work, she had already been worried.

She was worried that this divorce would end up just like the last two attempts, derailed by schedules and obligations.

Now that she had come back early, she thought they could finally go through with it quickly. But unexpectedly...

Celeste lowered her eyes. After a long moment, she replied, "Alright. I understand."

News of Trevor's business trip quickly reached the Lockets and the Shaws.

Upon receiving the update, Ruby's voice shot up, "Trevor went on a business trip again? Their mandatory waiting period ends tomorrow, and the day after tomorrow, they can finally get the certificate!

Linda, equally shocked, blurted out, "Exactly! Last time, he already failed to divorce that bitch because of work and now it's happening again? Can't Trevor adjust his schedule even a little?"

Lennox wasn't happy either, but Trevor was already on the plane. So, what could she say?

She could only sigh helplessly. "It must be something urgent."

The others were thinking the same.

After all, in their eyes, Trevor was very eager to divorce Celeste.

Ruby sighed, "Let's just hope Trevor can settle his work quickly. It better not turn out like last time-"

She didn't finish, but everyone knew what she meant.

Wynn listened quietly and said nothing.

This time, Trevor came back after only around four days.

He returned on Friday night.

When the Lockets and the Shaws received the news, they all let out a sigh of relief.

"Good, he's back. This way, he and Celeste can finally get the divorce done next week."

However, what they didn't expect was that on Sunday morning, Trevor left on another business trip.

His return date was once again uncertain.

This time, even Ruby panicked. "Wait-Trevor went on a trip again?"

She couldn't help but say, "Wynn, maybe you should talk to him? At this rate, when will the two of you ever get married?"

Ruby and her daughter did get impulsive easily, and normally, Lennox wouldn't say anything, because she worried that if Wynn brought this up, it might affect her relationship with Trevor.

But Trevor and Celeste had already missed the decision window a few times. They really couldn't drag on like this.

So, even Lennox couldn't help saying, "She's right, Wynn. Maybe... You should find a chance to talk to him?"

Wynn heard this, her expression calm and unreadable, and didn't respond.

Both Ruby and Lennox could see she wasn't happy.

But they only assumed she was upset because they were meddling in her and Trevor's relationship.

Seeing her reaction, Ruby quickly said, "I'm just giving a suggestion. If you think it's not appropriate, then do things your own way."

Wynn still didn't say anything.

At this point, everyone was even more certain she was angry.

Lilian finally stepped in. "Alright, let Wynn handle the matter between her and Trevor herself. Don't worry too much."

Ruby immediately laughed awkwardly. "Okay, okay, I won't interfere. I won't interfere."

Lennox also stayed quiet.

Very soon, everyone shifted to another topic.

No one noticed that the usually talkative and impulsive Linda had gone completely quiet.

When she heard that Trevor had left on another trip just one day after coming back she had jumped up from her seat in panic. However after that, she hadn't said a word.

Looking for someone in Hanoi today

No one noticed how she kept stealing glances at Wynn, her expression uneasy as if she was thinking of something.

The Lockets and the Shaws continued waiting for updates from Trevor.

But this time, more than ten days passed, and he still hadn't returned.

And from what Wynn implied, Trevor still wasn't sure when he would finish his work.

Seeing that half of this divorce-decision window had already slipped away, the two families grew more anxious.

Ruby said, "Don't tell me they'll have to go through another mandatory waiting period? How many times has it been now?"

No one responded, including Linda.

Seeing the silence, Ruby was about to say something else when she suddenly noticed her daughter's expression.

She froze, looked over, and saw Linda hurriedly lowering her head, flustered.

Ruby frowned. "Linda, what's going on with you lately?"

As her mother, she could sense that her daughter had been speaking less recently as if something was weighing on her mind. .net

But whenever she asked, Linda said nothing.

The others didn't pay much attention to Linda. They had heard Ruby complain about her daughter acting, strange lately, but no one took it seriously.

Even now, hearing Ruby express concern, no one thought much of it.

Linda looked around at everyone, biting her lip, clearly torn about whether she should speak.

After a moment of hesitation, she finally said, "I... I found out something. But I don't know if I... should say it..."