

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 637

Just then, Matthias happened to lean over to speak to her and accidentally saw the message Trevor had sent.

He was startled. "Not divorce? What does he mean by that?"

Did this mean Trevor no longer wanted to divorce her?

"No."

Celeste knew exactly what he was thinking and replied calmly, "It's for Jo."

"She knows about the divorce?"

"No..."

Celeste briefly explained the situation to him.

Matthias fell silent for a long moment. "And you? What do you think?"

The fact that Trevor was willing to delay the divorce for the sake of the child honestly surprised him.

From this, it was clear that Trevor truly cared about their daughter.

If Trevor could choose not to divorce her, at least for Jordyn's sake, then she could do the same.

It was just that...

She hesitated for a moment before replying to Trevor's message. "I'll think about it."

He replied quickly. "Okay."

By noon, Celeste and Matthias received a message from Zachary, saying that Theodore wanted to invite them over for dinner at his place that evening and asked if they were free.

The last time Celeste had gone to the military base, she had helped Theodore with some matters.

Back then, he had said he wanted to treat her to a meal when he had the chance.

Celeste and Matthias quickly replied to Zachary.

After work, they left the Fleming Group and were about to head to the Robinson residence when they saw Trevor and Wynn downstairs.

Seeing them, Trevor greeted them. "Not staying for dinner before leaving?"

Matthias curled his lips, glanced lightly at Wynn, and replied with faint sarcasm, "No. We have other plans."

Celeste said nothing. She didn't look at Trevor or Wynn either, and left with Matthias after getting into the car.

It was Celeste's first time visiting the Robinson residence.

After their car entered the courtyard, someone immediately came out to welcome them.

The person was none other than Jorge.

Jorge knew that Theodore had invited Harold and Zachary over for dinner that day.

Hearing the sound of a car, Theodore had asked him to come out and greet the guests. He thought it would only be Matthias.

But instead, it was Matthias... and Celeste.

She was here too.

The moment he saw Celeste, his gaze instantly turned cold.

Matthias noticed the change in his expression and crossed his arms with a half-smile. "What? Mr. Robinson, is this how you welcome guests?"

The coldness on Jorge's face faded slightly. He replied flatly, "Mr. Yoder, you're overthinking it."

After that, he glanced at Celeste and said, "Please come in."

Matthias curled his lips, ignored him, and walked inside with Celeste.

When Theodore saw Celeste, he stood up warmly. "Cel, Matt, you're here! Come, sit down."

Celeste and Matthias greeted him in unison, "Mr. Robinson."

Theodore smiled and nodded.

Seeing Jorge standing nearby with pursed lips, clearly displeased, he said, "What are you standing there for? Hurry up and pour some tea for the guests."

Jorge didn't say anything and silently came over to pour tea for Celeste and Matthias.

But after the tea was ready, Theodore beat him to it and personally served Celeste. "Cel have some tea. Thanks for the hard work last time."

Jorge froze. Before he could react, he saw Celeste accept the teacup and say Mr. Robinson you're too kind. It was what should have done."

Theodore smiled. "Still, you did help me a great deal."

Jorge frowned.

Chapter 638

Jorge wondered how Celeste had helped his father.

What kind of help could Celeste possibly have given his father?

Theodore had never mentioned this to him, and Jorge couldn't help asking, "What was it?"

Theodore curled his lips. "It has nothing to do with you."

Just then, the sound of cars came from outside.

Apart from Helena Saunders, Theodore's wife, who had just gotten home from work, Zachary and Harold had also arrived.

This was Celeste's first time meeting Helena.

Celeste and Matthias stood up to greet her.

Although it was Helena's first time seeing Celeste in person, she already knew quite a lot about her.

Smiling, she patted Celeste's hand and said gently, "I've heard Teddy mention you before and wanted to meet you for some time. Today I finally get to see you in person. I didn't expect you to be even more beautiful in real life than on television."

Celeste felt a little embarrassed. "You flatter me."

Jorge frowned again.

He hadn't known that his mother was also familiar with Celeste, and judging by her reaction, she seemed to genuinely like her.

After everyone took their seats, Helena looked at Jorge, who was frowning in thought.

Though she knew what he was puzzled about, like her husband, she had no intention of explaining anything to him. She merely said, "Don't just stand there. Pour some tea for the guests."

"Yes."

Theodore had invited Celeste and the others to dinner not only to thank Celeste and Zachary for their help, but also to take this opportunity for everyone to spend some time together.

With so many of them gathered, it wasn't appropriate to discuss too many classified matters related to the military base, but they could still talk about the current domestic and international political and business landscape.

Celeste frequently went to the base and naturally had a certain level of understanding of these topics.

When everyone discussed these issues, she was able to contribute to the conversation as well.

Jorge only knew that Celeste seemed quite capable in the AI field, but he had never truly had an in-depth conversation with her.

Given the Robinson family's background, he had always believed his own understanding of these matters was already quite thorough.

Yet listening to Celeste chatting with the others, he realized that he was actually inferior to her in this regard.

Not just him—even Matthias seemed to fall short of her.

A trace of surprise flashed through his eyes.

However, seeing that his parents and Zachary showed no surprise at all, he suddenly understood that perhaps they were all quite familiar with Celeste already.

But as far as he knew, Harold and his parents hardly had any interaction with Celeste. So, how could they know her so well?

While he couldn't figure it out, he watched Celeste converse calmly and composedly with the powerful elders, and that made him narrow his eyes.

Though he didn't know why Celeste was so close to his parents and Harold her manner alone made him increasingly realize that Celeste's level was far higher than he had ever imagined.

Seen this way, it wasn't without reason that Trevor could still be easily drawn to her, even while already having Wynn.

Helena liked Celeste very much.

After chatting for a while, she couldn't help sighing, "Among your generation of young people, the most outstanding ones are you two, and..."

Thinking of the relationship between Celeste and Trevor, Helena paused. Seeing that Celeste didn't mind, she continued, "Trevor."

Jorge could understand praising Matthias and Trevor as outstanding, but why did Celeste also deserve to be included?

When Helena said this, she also glanced at her own son and let out a soft sigh. Jorge was speechless.

All evening, his brows had hardly relaxed at all.

Was he really that bad?

This gathering was mostly carried by the elders, Celeste, and Matthias.

Jorge barely had a chance to speak. He stayed to the side, pouring tea and listening, like a background prop.

Toward the end of the conversation, Helena smiled and said, "I haven't seen Caleb in quite some time. If Caleb were here, it would be even livelier."

At the mention of Caleb, Celeste's hand paused slightly as she lifted her teacup.

Chapter 639

Jorge didn't notice the change in Celeste's expression.

Hearing his mother mention Caleb, he also felt that if Caleb had been there, he would at least have had someone to talk to that evening.

That night, Celeste and the others prepared to leave when it was close to ten o'clock.

When they walked them out, Theodore couldn't help but say, "Cel, if you have time, come over with Matt more often. Helena and I are always happy to have you."

Celeste replied, "Alright, I will."

Jorge stood to the side, watching coldly without saying a word.

But the more he watched, the more he felt that his parents seemed to like Celeste even more than he had imagined.

In fact, it even seemed to him that they liked Celeste more than they liked Matthias. After Celeste and the others left, he couldn't hold back anymore.

"Dad, Mom, Celeste may be capable, but she's not someone with upright intentions. You—"

Helena smiled. "Is that so? I think Cel's intentions are very upright. Your father and I like her more and more the longer we know her."

As she said this, there was even a hint of regret in the way she looked at Jorge.

If only her son hadn't been so blind, maybe he and Celeste could have had a chance.

Celeste might have been divorced, but she was outstanding, had a good personality, and solid character. She was almost flawless.

If she could have had such an excellent daughter-in-law—

Jorge had no idea what his mother was thinking. He rubbed his temples.

"Mom, I'm serious. She's nothing like what you think. She's extremely cunning. She's not at all as obedient and harmless as she appears in front of you."

Hearing this, Theodore immediately guessed the reason.

"You're saying this because something happened again between Cel and Ms. Locket, and you think Cel is in the wrong?"

Jorge replied, "They didn't have a conflict, but she—"

Both Theodore and Helena already guessed what he was going to say—most likely something related to Trevor.

Theodore smiled. "What you see isn't necessarily the truth. Your mother and I stand by our judgment, and we also hope you won't let emotions cloud your thinking. Make a rational judgment."

Jorge hadn't expected his parents' impression of Celeste to be this good.

Theodore patted him on the shoulder. "Go get some rest."

Jorge hadn't expected that his parents wouldn't listen to him at all.

But it was also at that moment that he understood more deeply that Celeste's methods were far more sophisticated than he had previously thought.

Then again, if her methods weren't impressive enough, how could she have kept Matthias firmly under control, used him to get acquainted with so many powerful figures and build relationships with each of them while at the same time. effortlessly capturing Trevor's heart-even when he already had Wynn?

Even people like his own parents and Harold had been fooled by Celeste.

Thinking of this, his expression darkened.

Celeste knew nothing of Jorge's thoughts.

The next day, she went to Fleming Group as usual to handle work matters.

That day, it just so happened that Miles came to the Fleming Group to discuss business with Trevor.

While looking for Trevor, he saw Celeste.

As he left together with Trevor, he glanced back at Celeste, who was focused on her work in the meeting room.

Suddenly remembering something, he lowered his voice and asked, "Oh, right, forgot to ask have you two gone to handle the divorce procedures yet?"

Trevor replied calmly, "No."

"You haven't?" Miles was a little surprised.

"You've been back for so many days already. Why haven't you gone to finalize the divorce with her? Is it because neither of you has time?"

Trevor said, "We've decided not to get divorced for now."

Chapter 640

Miles was astonished. "Huh? Not getting divorced for now? Why?"

Before Trevor could answer, something occurred to him. "Because of Jo?"

He asked because he knew that Jordyn had been quite attached to Celeste lately.

Trevor replied with a hum.

Miles suddenly thought of something. "And Celeste agreed too?"

"Yes."

Miles curled his lips. "Really? I thought she wouldn't agree. After all, when you first started preparing for the divorce, she gave up Jo's custody without the slightest hesitation.

"What's more, now that she's working for Matthias, she's doing extremely well. I heard that yesterday she went to the Robinson family's place for dinner with Matthias and Zachary.

"The Robinson family, and even Harold and the others, all like her very much." Hearing this, Trevor raised an eyebrow slightly. "Oh? Is that so?"

"Yes. I heard it from people at home."

Trevor smiled faintly and didn't ask any further questions.

That same day, when Miles contacted Beck, he also mentioned that Trevor and Celeste had decided to temporarily not divorce for Jordyn's sake.

Beck froze. "Temporarily... not divorcing?"

"Yes," Miles sighed.

"For the sake of the child, I can understand it, but I always feel that what they're doing is actually meaningless.

"Even if they don't divorce, in reality, each of them still has someone by their side. Trevor probably won't make Wynn wait too long. He'll still marry her sooner or later.

"Besides, doesn't Jo quite like Wynn? I think Trevor might as well communicate more with Jo. Maybe Jo would be able to understand them."

Beck asked, "What did Trevor say?"

"Trevor had something to attend to, so we didn't talk much. But for Trevor to decide to temporarily not divorce Celeste, he probably had no other choice.

"After all, Jo is quite attached to Celeste now and can't really do without her. He's probably afraid that if he says it outright, Jo won't be able to accept it."

Beck responded with a hum.

In the afternoon, after Celeste finished her work at Fleming Group, she went out to eat with Lazarus and the others.

When they arrived at the restaurant, they happened to run into Harvey and Lennox.

Because of Wynn, Lazarus and the others also knew Harvey, so they politely greeted both Harvey and Lennox.

Harvey and Lennox smiled and shook hands with Lazarus and the others.

After exchanging pleasantries, they noticed Celeste standing to the side. Lazarus paused, thinking about whether he should introduce Celeste to them, but Harvey and Lennox had already turned their attention toward her.

Harvey was still fine, but Lennox's expression darkened instinctively.

Lazarus and the others were all shrewd people.

They assumed that Harvey and his sister were aware that Trevor seemed to have feelings for Celeste, and that Celeste's presence had affected Trevor and Win's relationship, which was why the Lockets were displeased with her.

Because of this, they gave an awkward smile, dropped the idea of making introductions, exchanged a few more polite words, and then each went into their respective private rooms.

From beginning to end, Celeste didn't spare Harvey or Lennox a single glance. Her expression was extremely cold.

After watching Celeste and her group walk away, Lennox's gaze turned even colder. "She's really becoming more and more arrogant now."

Harvey didn't say anything.

Yesterday, Wynn had gone to see Trevor. Her intention was naturally to try to win him back.

However, although she did manage to see him, it was only briefly. In the end, they didn't even have a meal together.

Trevor now seemed to truly no longer care about Wynn.

As for the increasing problems their company was facing, Wynn couldn't find any opportunity at all to bring them up to Trevor.

The pressure they were under was only growing heavier.
