

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 666

It wasn't a phone call.

Instead, it was Miles who sent a message in their group chat.

Miles tagged everyone and asked, "Come on, hurry up and tell me, what plans do you have later tonight? Want to go out and have some fun together?"

Beck replied quickly. "No plans. How do you want to arrange it?"

"That's exactly what I was waiting for!"

He then tagged Trevor and Wynn. "What about you two?"

Wynn saw the message but didn't reply. She was waiting for Trevor to respond first.

At that moment, after reading the messages, Trevor picked up his phone and replied. "I'm eating at the Rodriguez family's place right now. Not sure about plans for tonight yet—it depends on Jo."

The moment his message was sent, both Beck and Wynn, who were looking at their screens, froze for a second.

Neither of them had expected Trevor to be spending New Year's at the Rodriguez family's home this year.

Miles, meanwhile, reacted instantly, firing off a string of question marks and exclamation points to show his shock.

"????!!!! Wait—you're at the Rodriguez family's place right now?"

"Yes."

Before Miles could say anything else, Trevor sent another message. "Still eating, not convenient to chat. Have fun tonight."

After replying, he exited the chat, put his phone away, and continued eating.

It took Miles a long moment to come back to his senses.

"Trevor really is—"

For a moment, he didn't even know how to finish the sentence.

Should he say that Trevor doted on Jordyn to an extreme, that he was even willing to spend New Year's at the Rodriguez family's home just for her sake?

But Jordyn was his daughter. As her father, wasn't it only natural for him to make certain compromises for his child?

Still, in Miles's mind, Wynn must already know that Trevor had gone to the Rodriguez family's place for the New Year.

Regaining his composure, he tagged Wynn. "Trevor might not be free tonight. What about you? Do you have time?"

Wynn was still reeling from the news that Trevor had gone to the Rodriguez family's home.

Seeing how quickly Miles had moved on from that revelation, she realized that he must have misunderstood and assumed that she had already known about it.

And since he also assumed that Trevor had gone there purely because of Jordyn, Wynn didn't bother to explain anything.

After a long pause, she replied, "I don't have time either. I promised to stay home tonight with both of my grandmothers. You guys go have fun."

"Alright then."

He then began discussing the time and place for going out later with Beck.

Like Miles Beck also assumed that Wynn had already known about Trevor spending New Year's at the Rodriguez family's home and that it really was just for Jordyn's sake.

He actually wanted to do what Caleb and Kieran had done-call Celeste and take the initiative to ask her out.

But given his current relationship with her as neither a friend nor someone who had confessed his feelings, he didn't even have the standing to make that call.

Seeing Miles's messages in the group chat, he suppressed those thoughts, lowered his head, and typed out a reply.

Elsewhere, Wynn sent a private message to Trevor. "You and Jo went to the Rodriguez family's place for New Years? Jo must be really happy. Also, Happy New Year."

Trevor saw the message and replied, "Happy New Year."

That was all-no extra words.

Yet Wynn smiled.

Even though she also wanted to ask Trevor out, after seeing what he'd said in the group chat earlier, she, knew that even she invited m there was little chance he would agree.

Since that was the case, it was better to just send him a message.

If he saw it and replied, it would only help maintain the momentum between them.

Chapter 667

The facts proved that Wynn wasn't wrong. After that, she didn't send Trevor any more messages.

...

Hector and his sister had plans with their classmates, so after finishing the New Year's meal, they headed out.

Jordyn also wanted to go out. At first, she hadn't decided where she wanted to go.

But after dinner, when she saw on TV that many parents were taking their children out to stroll through the streets and seeing how lively it was outside, with all kinds of fun things going on, her eyes immediately lit up.

"Outside seems even livelier than usual. I don't think I've ever gone out shopping with both Mom and Dad during the New Year before. I want to go out and walk around."

In the first few years after their marriage, Trevor hadn't paid much attention to either mother or daughter. During the New Year, he was often overseas.

By the time he started caring about Jordyn, even when he brought her back for the New Year, he would only take Jordyn out-never Celeste.

So, when Jordyn said she'd never gone out during the New Year with both Trevor and Celeste together, she wasn't wrong.

Just as Celeste was lost in thought, she heard Trevor respond, "Alright."

Celeste looked up and met his gaze.

Jordyn tugged at Celeste's hand. "Mom?"

Celeste withdrew her gaze. "Okay."

The three of them soon headed out together.

The pedestrian street outside was filled with a festive atmosphere—lively and bustling.

Jordyn wanted to eat street snacks when she saw them, wanted to buy oddly shaped balloons, and would even run over to watch groups of people eating, singing, and drinking together. The smile on her face never faded.

To keep her from running off, Trevor stayed close. When he saw Jordyn darting ahead without waiting, he pinched her cheek lightly, then turned to Celeste, who had only just caught up.

"Don't run so fast. Can't you see your mom can't keep up?"

"Alright, alright. That was my fault," Jordyn said obediently.

She stopped at a stall selling sugar figurines and wanted to buy one—specifically a monkey-shaped one.

The vendor, a middle-aged woman, looked up at Trevor and then at Celeste as she caught up, pausing in surprise before smiling at Jordyn.

"Are these your mom and dad? They really make a good-looking pair."

Jordyn was still holding snacks in her hands. She nodded earnestly. "Yep, they're my mom and dad."

The woman smiled. "They look like celebrities—what a lovely family."

Celeste and Trevor both smiled lightly, saying nothing.

There were still plenty of people out that night, and fireworks could be seen as well. To keep them from being in the crowd Trevor looked after Jordyn while also keeping an eye on Celeste. At times, he would even lift an arm to loosely shield her.

Celeste didn't think much of it and would politely thank him each time.

After walking for quite a while,

Jordyn stopped in front of a stall selling lanterns and happily told Trevor that she wanted another rabbit lantern.

After that, she turned to Celeste and said, "Mom, Dad bought me this rabbit lantern last year too. I even showed it to you-do you remember?"

At those words, Celeste lowered her gaze. Her voice was very soft.

"Yes, I remember."

Of course she did.

She also remembered that last New Year, she had bought the exact same rabbit lantern for Shanice.

But she hadn't bought one for Jordyn.

Jordyn didn't know what she was thinking.

After Trevor bought her a new rabbit lantern, she happily took it and said, "Shanice had one last year too. wonder if someone got her one this year. I'll call her later and ask!"

After saying that, Jordyn noticed that the other lanterns were also cute and beautiful. Carrying her rabbit lantern, she began picking through the other lanterns again.

Celeste didn't say anything.

She accompanied Jordyn while she browsed the lanterns for a while. When she noticed a restroom not far away, she said to Trevor, "Keep an eye on Jo. I'm going to the restroom."

"Okay," Trevor replied.

After Celeste walked away, Trevor looked at Jordyn, who was dazzled by all the lantern choices. He patted her head and said, "Since you like them all so much, why don't you ask Shanice what she thinks?"

Jordyn's eyes lit up. Only then did she remember that she had almost forgotten to video call Shanice.

With Trevor's reminder, she immediately took out her phone and made a video call. Over the past year, Shanice had mostly been living with her grandparents.

She and Jordyn contacted each other occasionally, but they still had a very good relationship.

Shanice's grandparents were very happy that she had a close friend of her own, so every time Jordyn contacted her, they were delighted.

This time was no exception.

When Shanice's grandmother saw that it was Jordyn calling, she quickly handed the phone to Shanice.

Shanice was very happy to see Jordyn contacting her. "Jo, Happy New Year!"

"Happy New Year!" Jordyn held up the little lantern in her hand for her to see.
"Look -what's this?"

"Wow, a rabbit lantern! And there are so many other lanterns too! They're so pretty!"

Seeing all the lanterns behind Jordyn and noticing the lively crowd around her, Shanice's beautiful eyes were filled with envy.

"Jo, did you go out to play?"

"Yep. I'm out with my mom and dad."

As she said that, she moved the phone slightly toward Trevor. Trevor bent down and greeted Shanice.

"Happy New Year, Shanice."

"Happy New Year, Mr. Fleming!"

Jordyn had originally wanted to let Celeste say hello as well, but since Celeste wasn't there, she said, "My mom went to the restroom. When she comes back let you say hello to her."

"Okay!"

After chatting for a while longer, one of Shanice's elders came to find her, so they quickly ended the call.

After hanging up, Jordyn continued wandering around nearby. By the time Celeste returned a short while later she suddenly remembered that she hadn't introduced Celeste to Shanice.

But very soon, something else caught her attention, and she tugged at Celeste's hand.

"Mom, let's go over there."

"Okay," Celeste said.

Jordyn pulled Celeste along in front while Trevor followed behind.

The three of them strolled outside for almost three hours.

Although Jordyn had plenty of energy, she was still a child after all. By a little past ten at night, she was already getting tired and sleepy.

Seeing that she was worn out, Trevor picked her up.

"If you're tired, let's go back. We can come again next time if you still want."

Nestled in his arms, Jordyn yawned and nodded. "Okay."

Tonight, Celeste and Trevor had mainly come out to accompany Jordyn. They didn't necessarily need to stay out until midnight like everyone else to celebrate the New Year.

Since Jordyn was tired, Celeste also hoped she could go back and rest early.

But before she could say anything, Jordyn tugged at her sleeve from Trevor's arms and looked at her.

"Mom, you're free tonight to come home with us, right?"

After saying that, she yawned again and rubbed her tired eyes.

"Even if you have to cook for Grandma tomorrow, you can go back to Granny's house after you wake up in the morning, right?"
