

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 674

"I've told him", Wynn said.

Linda asked, "So, Trev-"

Wynn then briefly recounted what had happened.

"...That's it? Nothing else?" Linda asked in disbelief.

"That's all."

Linda froze. After a moment, she said, "D-Does that mean he doesn't want to help us?"

Lilian and the others fell silent.

Because that was exactly what it meant-Trevor clearly had no intention of helping.

Linda couldn't help but say, "If he won't help, then we..."

They would have no choice but to raise money themselves.

And the only way to do that now was to sell off part of their properties for emergency funds. After all, their available cash had already been invested before the New Year.

Lilian's expression had looked grim just moments ago, but now she had already composed herself. Calmly, she said, "It's only a temporary measure. There's still a chance between Wynn and Trevor. Things could turn around."

Linda bit her lip. "B-But..."

But Trevor seemed increasingly indifferent toward Wynn lately. On the contrary, they heard that he and Celeste were getting closer.

Not only had he unusually spent more time at the Rodriguez residence during the New Year, but Celeste had even gone back with him to their marital home and stayed the night.

Now, when Wynn personally went to him for help, he simply ignored it.

Was there really still a chance in a situation like this?

A mother knew her daughter best. Lilian naturally understood what Wynn was thinking.

She smiled and said, "Celeste is only one person. Do you think she can have both Trevor and Matthias? As long as we find a way to tie Celeste and Matthias together so that they can't be separated, wouldn't that solve everything?"

Previously, when Lilian had suggested that Wynn have a child with Trevor to win him back, she hadn't said outright that if that couldn't work, then pushing Celeste and Matthias together would achieve the same effect.

Linda's face lit up. "That's right! How did I not think of that?"

Then she turned to Lilian with a smile. "Aunt Lizzy, you're so smart!"

Lilian lowered her gaze, lifting her teacup for a sip without saying anything.

Although Trevor had said he would recommend some capable talents, there was still no update from him even the next day.

Left with no choice, Wynn contacted him again. She sent a message to him at noon. But Trevor only replied at night. "What kind of specialist do you need?"

While Wynn couldn't personally solve the technical bottlenecks faced by InnovaTech and Locket Tech, she was clear about what kind of key specialists they needed. She replied quickly.

After that, there was another long delay before Trevor responded. "Alright."

Looking at his short reply, Wynn wanted to continue the conversation. But considering their current situation, she knew that the more frequently she contacted him, the more impatient he would become.

On the contrary, if she remained tactful and gave him space-before Celeste and Matthias's relationship was firmly settled-Trevor might instead feel a sense of guilt toward her, which would make him more patient with her.

With that thought, she stopped herself from texting him further. Instead, she just sent one final polite message to thank him.

After learning that Trevor had agreed to recommend some specialists Linda couldn't help but say, "Wynn, you should take this chance to invite Trev over and have him personally interview them. That way, you'll get to communicate more, right?"

Wynn said nothing.

She knew that Trevor and Celeste had already had multiple opportunities last year to discuss professionally on matters related to their field. She just didn't know how much Trevor knew about Celeste's capabilities.

But she did know that if it were Celeste, there was a real chance she could solve the issues faced by InnovaTech and Locket Tech on her own.

They were all trained in AI.

If Wynn couldn't handle the company's technical problems, that was one thing. But if even interviewing a few specialists required Trevor's involvement, what would he think of her then?

Chapter 675

As Wynn and Linda were talking, a news platform suddenly broadcast a report about an AI-related academic conference.

It turned out that one of Andostan's most prestigious and long-established conferences was about to take place.

A reporter was interviewing a senior member of the organizing committee. The official casually listed around eight names and, coincidentally, both Celeste and Matthias were among them.

From the tone of the interview, the invitations had already been sent out, and they were currently awaiting responses from the invitees.

The official also expressed great anticipation about meeting Celeste, Matthias, and the others, hoping to engage in in-depth exchanges and jointly promote the development of the AI industry.

The moment Linda saw the news, her face darkened. She turned to Wynn and asked, "Wynn, did you receive an invitation?"

Even though Linda didn't fully understand the significance of the conference, the names mentioned by the official were all world-class figures. So, she could tell immediately that this event was anything but ordinary.

After all, Wynn's PhD supervisor was one of them.

When Wynn saw the news, the flicker in her eyes was far more intense than that of the others in her family. But she concealed it well, so no one noticed.

Hearing Linda's question, she just replied calmly, "No."

The Lockets and the Shaws didn't think much of it, but Linda instantly grew indignant. "Fine, Matthias is one thing, but how does Celeste get an invitation when you didn't? Out of all these people, do they actually believe she has real ability?"

Even if she did, there was no way she could surpass Wynn!

She let out a snort and added, "If you ask me, these so-called conferences and grand events just invite whoever is famous. They're all about the hype. Honestly, most of the people attending probably don't even have that much real substance."

Wynn and the others didn't say anything.

Meanwhile, after news broke that Celeste and Matthias had received invitations to a world-class AI conference both of them were approached by the media during public events.

Since Celeste was currently unable to travel abroad, she first expressed that she was honored to be invited when asked about it, but quickly added that she had been swamped lately and was unlikely to attend.

When Linda saw this report, she was furious. "Too busy? I bet she's just afraid of being exposed!"

Lilian, Patricia, and the others didn't comment.

That said, Celeste had indeed been thriving lately.

She wasn't aware of how closely the Lockets and the Shaws were watching her as she was genuinely busy.

Her collaboration project with Quincy and Fleming Group had officially begun.

So, after finishing her interview, she immediately set off with Kieran to meet Trevor and Quincy to discuss work.

Every time the three parties met, they focused purely on the collaboration. There had been little to no conflict, and the partnership had been progressing quite smoothly.

Kieran had accompanied Celeste to meet Trevor and Quincy a few times. Each time, seeing how Celeste and Trevor stayed fully immersed business still surprised him-always polite and strictly professional with each other.

He didn't expect that two people who once had friction between them could be so clear-cut in separating work from personal matters.
