

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 690

Kieran couldn't understand it either-why Celeste seemed to have a good relationship with Lincoln, yet appeared to have no personal connection at all with Trevor.

But then again, he had heard that the Yoder family and the Fleming family also had some ties, yet Matthias and Trevor had no interaction beyond work.

Thinking of this, Kieran decided not to dwell on it further.

The next day, Beck came to YodaVision to discuss a new round of collaboration. Like before, Celeste was the one who received him.

He looked at her. "Long time no see."

It hadn't actually been that long. They had met not long ago before Shanice left Baumond to return to school.

But since he put it that way, Celeste didn't contradict him and simply nodded. "Long time no see."

When Kieran heard that Beck had come to meet Celeste, he had wanted to drop by and sit in, but he was too busy that day to get away.

When the discussion was mostly wrapped up, Beck suggested having a meal together, and Celeste agreed.

At the restaurant, after chatting about other matters for a while, Beck suddenly said, "I heard Mr. and Mrs. Fleming... have finally agreed to their relationship."

Caught off guard by the shift in topic, Celeste paused for a moment before realizing what he meant. Her expression remained calm as she nodded.

Queenie and Lincoln had always valued family background and reputation. For them to suddenly relent, it was likely because of how Wynn had risked her life to save Trevor not long ago.

But none of that had anything to do with her anymore.

Still, since Queenie and Lincoln had given their approval, it was likely that the divorce would finally go through smoothly.

After the meal, when they were leaving, they ran into Harvey, Lilian, and their group.

Harvey smiled. "Beck, what a coincidence."

Beck nodded and greeted them politely. "Mr. Locket, Mrs. Locket."

They nodded as an acknowledgement, but their gazes fell on Celeste.

Celeste acted as if she didn't see them at all. She turned to Beck and said, "Mr. Harper, I have something to attend to, so I'll head off first. If there are any issues with the collaboration, we can arrange another time to discuss in detail."

Beck just smiled. "Alright."

Celeste nodded and turned to leave, treating the others as if they didn't exist.

The instant coldness that flashed in Celeste's eyes upon seeing the Lockets and Shaws, and the way her expression turned joy without the attempt slightest attempt to hide it, was impossible for Beck to miss.

He had long known about the conflict between her and Wynn, but seeing her complete indifference toward the Lockets and Shaws still surprised him.

Everyone in YodaVision had been extremely busy lately, but things had finally eased up a little.

Matthias treated everyone to dinner that evening in order to reward the team.

After toasting the others, Matthias turned and specifically clinked glasses with Celeste. "Thanks for the hard work."

Celeste smiled. "You too."

The table was lively.

Just as Celeste set her glass down, her phone beside her vibrated a few times. She picked it up and glanced at it.

With just one look, she saw the incoming message clearly.

"Trev's parents have already agreed to their marriage. Today, they even had him bring her to meet them."

Matthias, who had leaned over to speak with her, also saw the message.

He smiled with a trace of coldness. "So, Mr. Fleming has agreed to let them be together?"

Yes. That was exactly what the message said.

Matthias took her phone and unlocked it.

It turned out that besides the text, the sender had also sent two photos.
