

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 702

The others echoed in agreement with Linda, but Wynn said nothing.

She knew better than anyone that Celeste's ability to spend so freely didn't come from Matthias or Trevor.

It was because of her own capabilities.

Celeste relied on nobody but herself, and she had now possessed a level of wealth that so many of them could only dream of.

Wynn's heart sank at that thought. The light in her eyes dimmed, and the hand resting on the armrest tightened abruptly. Her good mood from earlier vanished in an instant.

Meanwhile, Celeste paid no attention to what others thought. After several rounds of bidding, she secured the painting for just over 70 million.

When the auction ended, the owner of the auction house personally came over to greet her, treating her with great courtesy.

It was said that this owner was no ordinary figure and wouldn't show up much at the auction house. Yet he had made a special appearance just to meet Celeste, giving her exceptional respect.

The Lockets and Shaws felt a twinge of envy seeing the way the owner treated Celeste as an honored guest. However, their envy was not intense because they believed that they would live far better than she ever could in the future.

So, it didn't matter much to let her show off for now.

Lilian rose calmly. "Let's go."

"Alright," Linda replied with a smile. But she shot Celeste a glare before leaving with the rest of her family.

Celeste received a call from Jordyn on her way home after leaving the auction house. She said Trevor would be free the next day and had agreed to go out for a meal with them.

Celeste simply responded after listening.

The next day, Celeste headed out on time after receiving Jordyn's message.

Trevor and Jordyn were already there by the time she arrived at the restaurant.

Seeing her, Jordyn ran toward her enthusiastically. Trevor also looked at her. "You're here."

He poured her a cup of tea as he spoke and placed it in front of her.

Celeste took it and said lightly, "Thank you."

Trevor glanced at her again after hearing her tone.

Celeste acted as if she didn't notice. His probing gaze lingered on her face for a moment before withdrawing.

The two of them mostly played their roles as parents just like before, responding to Jordyn and along with her preferences

However, there was almost no interaction between them.

The meal went fairly smoothly.

Jordyn didn't notice the quiet tension between her parents. She happily suggested going somewhere fun after the meal.

Both Celeste and Trevor agreed.

As they left the restaurant, Jordyn cheerfully held Celeste's hand and walked ahead, while Trevor followed a step behind.

They looked like a happy family of three to anyone watching.

Jordyn got into the car first but lost her footing and almost fell. Celeste, who was right behind her reacted quickly and steadied her. It caused Celeste to lose her balance.

Seeing this, Trevor reached out and wrapped an arm around her waist and shoulder. "Careful."

He only let go after she regained her footing.

"Thank you," Celeste said quietly before moving to get into the car.

But just as she was about to step in, something seemed to catch her attention.

She paused and glanced to the side, However, she saw nothing content belongs.

Trevor noticed and asked, "What is it?"

"Nothing," she replied after coming back to herself. Then, she got into the car without another word.

It was only after their car had driven out of the restaurant's parking lot that Xavier and Jorge stepped out of the shadows.
