

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 706

"Not at all. I still have a long way to go compared to you, Ms. Larkspur," Celeste said calmly.

The Lackspur family had invested heavily in this project, yet Narcissa didn't hesitate to offend one of their potential partners. If anyone was being reckless, it definitely wasn't Celeste.

Narcissa seemed to read her thoughts. She smiled and said, "Ms. Rodriguez, you're quite confident. You're right that YodaVision is indeed a good choice within the country. However, we're not limited to just your company."

With that, she stood up. "Since YodaVision isn't capable of taking on our project, I won't take up more of your time. Ms. Rodriguez, until next time."

Celeste had no interest in continuing this pointless exchange. "Take care."

That afternoon, Matthias asked about the potential collaboration with the Lackspur Corporation after he returned. So, Celeste briefly recounted what had happened. "Narcissa has a problem with you? So, she just came to stir up trouble?"

"That's how it felt."

The Yoder family and the Lackspur family hadn't had much interaction in the past. So, Matthias didn't know them well. But he understood the general standing of both families.

He also knew Celeste's social circle well, so he knew there had been no prior connection between her and Narcissa.

He recalled hearing that Narcissa had spent most of these years studying in Andostan. So, given her attitude today, he thought of something and paused before saying, "Could she be close to Wynn? And came here specifically to make things difficult for you on her behalf? Or is it because of Trevor?"

"I think it's the former."

Matthias let out a short laugh. "That's ridiculous. This Narcissa is really not thinking straight if she came to offend a potential partner for some so-called sisterhood."

"Honestly, if the Lackspur family is letting someone this emotional to handle such a huge project, it'd probably be nothing but trouble if we really did collaborate. It's probably best if we don't take it."

Celeste hummed in agreement.

The next day, Celeste and Matthias had a lunch meeting with a business partner. But they unexpectedly ran into Wynn and Narcissa when they arrived.

Matthias crossed his arms and said to Celeste, "Looks like we were right. The heiress of the Lackspur family does seem quite close to Wynn."

Narcissa and Wynn noticed them as well.

Wynn remained expressionless, acting as if she hadn't seen them. But Narcissa curled her lips into a provocative smile and waved at them before walking into the restaurant with Wynn.

"Seriously? What's wrong with her?" Matthias muttered.

"Let's go in," Celeste said.

During the meal, their business partner brought up the Lackspur family.

Due to their previous restructuring, most of the Lackspur Corporation's businesses had shifted overseas. So, their sudden return to Baumond had attracted quite a bit of attention in their circle.

The topic then naturally turned to the major project the Lackspur family was currently working on.

"I've heard they came back well-prepared," the partner said.

"They already secured collaboration with a team in Andostan, and that team just arrived yesterday. Apparently, it's the well-known Team p.MAI."

Both Celeste and Matthias were familiar with Team p.MAI. It was a world class team that had, collaborated with numerous global giants. They were a highly capable team.

The Lackspur family had clearly put in everything they had into this project.

But since Team p.MAI had already arrived yesterday, it meant that the collaboration had long been finalized. So, there was no real need for YodaVision anymore.

This meant that Narcissa's visit to YodaVision the day before, under the pretense of discussing a collaboration, had been nothing more than a deliberate provocation.