

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 732

Looking at the call that had just been disconnected, Nathan immediately called Matthias again.

"Mr. Yoder, Ms. Rodriguez refuses to accept my apology. She also said YodaVision won't cooperate with us "

"I respect her decision," Matthias replied.

Nathan couldn't continue with what he wanted to say.

After speaking with Celeste earlier, he had already vaguely sensed that when she said YodaVision wouldn't cooperate with them, she wasn't speaking out of anger, nor was she deliberately stringing him along.

Now, Matthias's response was just as straightforward.

It was only then that Nathan finally realized that neither Celeste nor Matthias had ever intended to work with them in the first place.

He fell silent for a few seconds before finally saying, "Mr. Yoder, you and Ms. Rodriguez really do have a very good relationship."

Before contacting Matthias earlier, he had genuinely believed there was still room to negotiate. He didn't expect Matthias to actually give up such a lucrative project just to let Celeste vent her anger.

"You flatter us," Matthias replied.

Nathan couldn't say anything.

"Mr. Lackspur, I hope you resolve your company issues soon. I still have work to handle, so I won't be keeping you. Goodbye."

With that, Matthias hung up without hesitation.

Naturally, Narcissa knew her brother had contacted Matthias. She found out about the outcome not long after their conversation ended.

Her expression darkened, and she abruptly stood up. "She should come at me directly if she has a problem. Who gave her the right to—"

"You can go if you want. I won't stop you," Nathan said calmly as he looked at her back.

"But they probably won't change their decision."

Narcissa froze in her tracks while clenching her fists tightly.

But Nathan no longer had the energy to care about her reaction.

While trying to contact Matthias and Celeste these past few days, they had also been looking for alternative solutions. But currently, there was no one in the country capable of replacing Yoda Vision.

Even if there were, their capabilities couldn't compare to YodaVision at all, and that would seriously slow the progress of their project.

There might be suitable options if they looked overseas, but their actual capabilities were uncertain, and negotiating with

be easy. .

Before long, Wynn, Miles, and the others had also learned about Celeste and Matthias's decision.

Miles was genuinely shocked when he heard the news.

"Wait, is this real? If YodaVision took on the Lackspur family's project, they'd make a fortune from it. Did Matthias just give up an enormous amount of money just for Celeste? Are they not changing their minds? If that's true, then Matthias is seriously loyal to her."

No one replied to him after he sent the message in the group chat. However, it didn't mean that nobody had seen them.

Beck merely curled his lips into a faint smile at the outcome, not surprised in the slightest.

Wynn wasn't surprised either. After all, YodaVision was Celeste's company. She had the authority to make this decision.

And since she could decide, there was no reason for her to force herself to endure something unpleasant.

Seeing that there was no response, Miles tagged Trevor. "What are you doing?" Trevor didn't reply.

Instead, Wynn responded a moment later. "Trevor is currently in a discussion with someone at the company. He'll probably only have time later."

"Alright then. I'll ask later."

"What is it? Something important?" Wynn texted back.

Miles was just about to reply when Trevor suddenly appeared and tagged him directly. "What is it?"

Miles immediately sent a smiley face before replying, "Nothing. I'm just a little curious about your thoughts on all of this."
