

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 733

Miles was just being nosy out of boredom. He wasn't actually expecting Trevor to reply.

Yet, Trevor responded anyway. "What kind of thoughts do you think I'd have?"

Miles then replied, "No idea. Isn't that exactly why I'm asking you?"

Truthfully, Beck was a little curious too.

Although they would occasionally mention Celeste in private, they rarely asked Trevor how he felt about her now.

Back in those years, everyone knew Trevor had always disliked Celeste. But looking back over the past two years, his attitude toward her had clearly changed.

Wynn was curious as well.

Beck and Miles might not know, but she knew that Trevor really had started paying more attention to Celeste some time ago.

Although attention had faded after Wynn saved him last time, she could still feel that he treated her with the same concern as before.

However, the topic of him and Celeste rarely came up between them.

At that moment, Trevor replied, "Their relationship is very good."

Miles froze for a moment. So did Beck and Wynn.

Trevor's response felt incredibly calm. Did that mean that he was genuinely supportive of Celeste and Matthias's relationship now?

No matter how badly things had once been between him and Celeste, had their relationship really softened to the point where Trevor could sincerely wish her happiness?

Beck smiled faintly after snapping back to himself. Honestly, he wasn't particularly surprised by Trevor's reply.

Wynn smiled too after recovering from her surprise.

Only Miles was still feeling bewildered and instinctively replied, "Huh?"

Trevor responded, "Their relationship has always been good. Don't you think so too?"

Miles finally regained his senses. "Oh, okay then."

At that point, they seemed to have exhausted the topic. So, Miles tagged the others again and asked if anyone was free to have dinner together that evening. .net

Meanwhile, Celeste was busy working in her office when Matthias knocked and walked in with a grin. "I have good news for you."

Celeste looked up from her computer. "What is it?"

Matthias smiled. "Prof will be attending the award ceremony this time. If nothing unexpected happens, he'll be presenting you the award."

Celeste froze. "Is it confirmed?"

"Yes."

A bright smile spread across her face. "Senior, dinner's on me tonight?"

"I want a feast."

"Sure."

Celeste laughed. After chatting with Matthias about work for a while longer, she returned to her tasks.

Not long after Matthias told Celeste that Zachary would be presenting her award at the ceremony, rumors somehow spread online.

Over the years, Zachary had rarely participated in award ceremonies like these. So, when people suddenly heard that he would be attending this year's event, most netizens. didn't believe it.

"Mr. Newman barely attends these kinds of events. Sounds fake no matter how you look at it."

"It's just marketing tactics right?"

After all, this year's winner list includes the wife of Mr. Newm student. They're obviously using that for attention."

"Exactly."

However, the person spreading the news sounded extremely convincing.

They even listed the names of the other award presenters, claiming that certain people had already rushed back to the country in advance.

They even posted photos with one of them after their return. So, little by little, people started believing it.
