

THE BREAKING POINT OF LOVE

Chapter 749

At that moment, Zachary's friend looked at him and laughed. "If you dislike someone enough to say it outright, then that person must be truly awful."

Zachary and Celeste had not gone very far, so both Wynn and Quentin heard the remark clearly.

When Wynn had politely greeted Zachary earlier, he had responded with cold indifference and acted as if she didn't exist.

Quentin had found that hard to swallow. But now, seeing Zachary and his friend openly take jabs at Wynn, his anger flared even more.

He knew the reason they would mock Wynn to her face was probably that Celeste had misled them. Even so, he was furious that someone like Zachary would condemn Wynn without even knowing the full truth of the matter.

Staring at their retreating figures, Quentin's expression darkened. He wanted to see whether Zachary would feel guilty for believing in slander and hurting a young woman once he learned Celeste's true colors.

With that thought in mind, he wanted to expose Celeste in front of Zachary.

At the same time, Wynn spoke, "Let's eat somewhere else."

She turned and walked away as soon as she finished speaking.

Quentin froze for a moment. He hurried after her after coming back to his senses.

Noticing the strained look on her face, he assumed she was upset and aggrieved by Zachary's misunderstanding.

Just as he was about to comfort her, Wynn cut off his thoughts. "Quentin, I know you're trying to help me. Thank you. I understand your intentions. I'm really fine."

She forced a smile and added, "Didn't you say you wanted local food? There's a pretty good place next door. My treat."

Anyone could tell that Wynn was forcing herself to smile.

To Quentin, she was simply pretending to be okay because she didn't want him to worry. So, seeing that only made his heart ache for her even more.

He wanted to tell her that he had a way to expose Celeste's true character to Zachary. But when he remembered that Trevor was involved, he hesitated and ultimately said nothing.

When Wynn saw that Quentin had given up on confronting Zachary to "clear things up," she quietly breathed a sigh of relief.

Of course, she knew he had misunderstood. It was just that...

Since Zachary was Celeste's mentor, it meant he was fully aware of all the grievances and history between her and Celeste.

In the past, whenever they crossed paths, he had never brought up any of it. Although his attitude toward her had always been distant, he had never openly displayed his dislike the way he had today.

His uncharacteristic behavior was, in fact, his way of telling her that he knew all about the conflict between her and Celeste.

And that he had probably understood her feelings and intentions all along.

After lunch, Celeste went back to the Fleming Group in Zachary's car.

During the drive, she was busy typing on her phone, discussing work matters with someone. When they arrived at the Fleming Group building, she got out of the car with her phone in hand.

After bidding Zachary, she was about to leave when he rubbed his brow and lowered the car window. Then, Zachary handed her the handbag she had accidentally left behind.

At that moment, some of their colleagues were also returning from lunch and happened to spot Zachary in the ear. However, his car drove off almost immediately leaving them no chance to greet him:

Everyone was stunned. They all turned to Celeste.

"W-Was that Mr. Newman just now?"

"You had lunch with Mr. Newman?"

Celeste nodded. "Yes."

"Holy shit!"

Just then, Quentin returned as well and witnessed the entire scene.
