

The Breaking Point of Love

c 811

Beck answered, "He knows."

His tone was certain.

Miles also thought that Trevor must be aware of everything. He just didn't expect him to remain so firmly by Wynn's side despite knowing about the relationship between Celeste and Wynn, as well as the history between the Shaws and Rodriguezes.

Ever since Wynn had appeared in Trevor's life, Miles had always thought that Trevor loved her deeply. But he had never imagined that he could love her to this extent...

Miles didn't voice these thoughts aloud, but Beck could already tell what was going through his mind.

After all, he felt the same way. He, too, had never expected Trevor to love Wynn this much.

In fact, many of the guests at the banquet had already realized that Trevor had known all along about the relationship between Celeste and Wynn, as well as the history between the two families.

It was just that when Trevor was there, no one had dared to say it to his face.

Meanwhile, inside the Locket family's car, there was complete silence. No one said a word.

Linda's eyes were still red, and she was filled with uncertainty. She wanted to say something, but seeing everyone's expressions and the fact that no one else was speaking, she didn't dare open her mouth.

Wynn sat with her head lowered, staring at her phone.

Just then, Lilian asked, "Has Trevor still not messaged you?"

Wynn shook her head without saying anything.

Lilian's gaze darkened.

Linda eventually couldn't hold back any longer and asked softly, "Trev... He just left like that without even saying anything. Does that mean..."

She didn't finish the sentence. Did it mean that Trevor was planning to break up with Wynn?

Everyone understood what she was getting at.

Lilian was preoccupied with her own thoughts. She seemed distracted, but still answered calmly, "In that situation, if he had spoken to Wynn he would only be throwing her straight into the fire."

Linda's heart lifted. "So, he was just thinking about Wynn's feelings?"

However, Lilian couldn't guarantee that was the case.

After all, if Trevor had spoken up and taken Wynn away with him, they wouldn't have left in such an embarrassing state. In fact, Celeste might have been the one left

Lilian said nothing, making Linda even more uneasy. But with her aunt refusing to say anything more, she didn't dare ask again.

Silence descended over the car once more. This time, it lasted all the way until they arrived home.

Patricia and Erin had no idea what had happened at the banquet. They were in relatively good spirits, and when they saw everyone return, they smiled. "You're back?"

Before anyone could answer, they asked, "Did Professor Lancaster give Wynn a definite answer about taking her on as his student?"

Lilian shook her head and was just about to say something when Harvey's car also pulled into the driveway.

When the maids saw him arrive, one of them approached him and said, "Mr. Locket, there's a package that was delivered for you this evening."

Harvey was already in a foul mood, so he frowned when he heard that he had a package. After all, he rarely bought anything online.

He had no intention of dealing with an unexpected package at a time like this. But when he noticed the words "Superior Court" printed on the envelope, he paused.

He quickly took it and opened it. His expression changed dramatically the moment he saw what was inside.

Lilian was already in a bad mood and had no interest in paying attention to something as trivial as a package. But when she saw Harvey's sudden change in expression, she owned arvel.ne

"What..." Before she could finish, her face changed as well.

"Is this a court summons?"
