The Breaking Point of Love

Jordyn grew even angrier and immediately started struggling. "Put me down! I don't want you to carry me!"

Trevor looked at her. "Fine. But you have to go downstairs and eat."

Jordyn pursed her lips and turned her head away, refusing to look at him.

Despite saying that, Trevor didn't let go. He simply carried her downstairs.

Downstairs, Peter had already had the food reheated. It was all Jordyn's favorite dishes, and everything had already been served.

Trevor set her down and handed her a spoon.

Jordyn hesitated before taking them. Then, without saying a word, she slowly began picking up food and eating.

Trevor sat down beside her.

Seeing this, Peter asked, "Trevor, why don't you eat something too?"

Trevor shook his head. "I already ate."

Peter didn't press him any further, leaving the father and daughter alone.

Jordyn silently ate her meal while Trevor watched her.

"School will be starting soon. Is there anywhere you'd like to go before then? I can take you."

Jordyn didn't even look at him. "No."

Trevor didn't respond, and Jordyn ignored him as well.

He simply continued looking at her.

At first, Jordyn pretended not to notice, but when he kept staring, she finally couldn't take it anymore. "What are you looking at?"

Trevor suddenly smiled and ruffled her hair. "Just thinking about how happy I am that you're my daughter."

Jordyn was stunned.

Trevor said nothing more. He picked up the spoon beside him and put some food into her bowl.

After finishing her meal, Jordyn turned around and headed upstairs without looking back.

Trevor followed behind her. "Take a shower early and get some rest."

Jordyn didn't answer. But when she returned to her room, she didn't close the door behind her.

Trevor stood at her doorway for a while, watching her, before finally turning away and heading to his study.

Meanwhile, back at the seminar hall, Celeste had just found a moment to reply to a few messages from Matthias when Peter called her again.

After learning that Jordyn had gone downstairs to eat, she finally felt relieved.

Once she finished talking on the phone, it vibrated again. She assumed it was another message from Matthias.

But when she looked down, she saw that it was from Trevor. "You haven't really been in touch with Jordyn these past few days?"

Celeste read the message but didn't want to reply.

Just then, another message from Trevor came through. "If you have time, give her a call."

Celeste read it but still didn't respond.

However, after she finished socializing at the seminar and got into her car, she eventually called Jordyn.

At that moment, Jordyn had just finished taking a shower.

When she heard the phone ringing, she didn't react, It was only after t r ạng several times that she walked over to check. But when she saw that it was Celeste calling, she froze for a moment.

Then she quickly answered. "M-Mom?"

Celeste hummed and asked gently, "Were you taking a shower?" "Yeah. I just finished."

Celeste had originally wanted to ask why she'd suddenly stopped eating and it over she decided not decided not but after thinking bet

bring it

Instead, she asked, "I have some free time these next couple of days. Is there anywhere you'd like to go? I can take you somewhere fun."

"Are you done with work, Mom?"

"More or less. I'll be less busy lately."

"Oh..."

If this had happened before, whenever Jordyn had somewhere she wanted to go or simply really wanted to spend time with her mother-she would have excitedly told Celeste right away.

But this time, she didn't say anything.

Celeste assumed she already had other plans with Trevor, so she didn't press the matter. "It's okay. Just let me know when you've decided."
