The Breaking Point of Love

Wynn didn't get home until around nine that evening.

When she returned, Harvey asked, "Everything okay at the company?"

"For now."

But if the investors found out that the trouble at Locket Tech's Technology Division was affecting InnovaTech, then it would be a completely different story.

Harvey understood that as well. If they couldn't resolve the crisis at Locket Tech soon, it could very well drag InnovaTech down with it.

He had also been actively trying to negotiate with Velotra, but they refused to budge on their terms. And there was no way the Locket family could afford the compensation Velotra was demanding, even if they sold everything they owned.

If Trevor were willing to step in, they would still have a chance to make a comeback. They would even be willing to give up Locket Tech if necessary.

But Trevor had given them no response at all. After so many days, they still couldn't figure out what exactly Trevor was thinking.

Lilian said calmly, "Let's wait a little longer. Since Trevor hasn't taken the initiative to break up with Wynn, there's still a chance. And if he really intended to end things with Wynn, he would've said so already. He wouldn't have waited until now.

"The fact that he's saying nothing may actually mean there's still hope. Besides, I heard that Lincoln's political opponents have always been looking for something they can use against him. Trevor's silence is probably related to that too."

As she spoke, she patted Wynn's hand. "Don't worry."

"I know."

Wynn actually thought the same way. That was precisely why she had still been able to remain calm until now.

Lilian's reasoning wasn't without reason, so Linda, Ruby, and the others all breathed a sigh of relief.

The next day, after taking Jordyn to the fencing club, Trevor personally went to pick her up that afternoon.

But instead of taking her home, he brought her to the Fleming Manor.

It wasn't just the two of them. Lincoln and Queenie, Teagan, and Tucker were all back as well.

This was the first time they'd seen Trevor since Philip's banquet.

Martha's expression was rather cold. "You're back."

"Grandma."

With Jordyn there, Martha was willing to relent a little. She merely acknowledged him with a cold hum.

Trevor hadn't done anything to help the Locket family during this period, and both Martha, Lincoln, and- Queente knew it. They also knew that Trevor hadn't been in contact with the Locket family lately.

Otherwise, someone would probably have already taken advantage of it and posted it online. So they had nothing to say about that.

If Trevor couldn't even tell what he could and couldn't do at a time like this, he wouldn't be here today However, they also knew that this didn't necessarily mean Trevor had cut ties with Wynn. '

If they really had broken up, then Trevor wouldn't have come back to dinner tonight with only Jordyn.

The more Martha thought about it, the more upset she became. Lincoln and Queenie also frowned. But they didn't continue discussing the matter.

Teagan had contacted Trevor as soon as everything happened as well. She had known about what had happened between the Rodriguez, Locket, and Shaw families for quite some time.

When the whole thing was exposed online, aside from worrying about how it would affect the family, there were only two things that had truly surprised her.

First was that Celeste was Zachary's student, and second was that she was one of Yoda Vision's founders. Even now, she still hadn't fully recovered from the shock of seeing those reports.

She had even called Trevor personally to confirm it.

His answer had been a simple hum of acknowledgement.

Thinking about it now, she looked at Trevor, then glanced at Jordyn, who was playing by herself nearby.

She couldn't help saying to him, "I never would've guessed. She's actually pretty impressive."
