

The Breaking Point of Love

Chapter 838

Once Wynn snapped out of her reverie, she gave a quiet hum in acknowledgement.

Calvin had only just returned home and was still excited, so he didn't notice that something was off with everyone else. "Okay, then."

After dinner, Wynn stayed with the family and chatted with Calvin for a while before finally heading upstairs.

Back in her room, she took out her phone and stared at Trevor's number on the screen for a long while before finally calling him.

The call went through, but once again, no one answered.

After the call disconnected automatically, she dialled again. But still no answer. After trying several times, she finally stopped and slowly lowered her phone.

Late that night, after Calvin had gone upstairs to rest, Wynn came downstairs. The moment she appeared, Harvey and the others all looked at her.

Wynn slowly shook her head.

Harvey and the rest immediately understood that Wynn still couldn't get through to Trevor.

Harvey frowned, becoming increasingly unable to figure out what Trevor was thinking.

Lilian was the same.

She could understand why Trevor couldn't step in to help them at a time like this. But so much time had already passed, and there was still no word from him.

And he didn't say anything about breaking up with Wynn either.

They had originally planned to give Trevor a little more time. But now that Locket Tech and InnovaTech were running into trouble one after another, they simply didn't have that much time to wait anymore.

Wynn understood that as well.

Although she could tell that Trevor still had no feelings for Celeste, how could she truly feel at ease when he refused to answer her calls or respond to her messages?

With that thought, she stood up and said, "I'll try contacting him again tomorrow."

Linda immediately asked, "What if Trev still doesn't answer?"

Wynn paused before saying, "We'll figure it out then."

With that, she turned and went upstairs.

The next morning, when she woke up and checked her phone, just as she'd expected, there was still no reply from Trevor.

She held her phone for a moment before making another call. There was still no answer.

The group chat was still as quiet as before as well.

Wynn put down her phone after that.

After breakfast, she returned to InnovaTech to deal with a few matters.

Then, after checking the time, she called Miles.

He answered fairly quickly when he saw the call. "It's been a while since we last talked. What made you suddenly call me today?"

Hearing how familiar his tone was, just like it had always been, the hand Wynn had been gripping her phone with slowly relaxed.

She smiled. "What are you up to?"

"Nothing. I'm just bored, actually."

Although Miles's tone remained as casual as it had been in the past after thinking about everything involving Wynn and her family he still felt somewhat uncomfortable speaking with her now.

Wynn said, "I need to talk to Trevor about something, but I couldn't get through to him this morning, so I wanted to ask you."

"Is it urgent? I can give him a call for you."

"No need. I want to go find Trevor myself. Do you know where he is right now?"

She obviously wasn't looking for Miles to call Trevor for her. What she wanted was to find out exactly where Trevor was.

Hearing that, Miles didn't think much of it. "I don't know. I haven't really been in touch with Trevor these past couple of days. How about ask Beck? He might know."

Wynn paused before saying, "There's that trouble. It's...

no need to go to all that actually nothing too important. just call Trevor again later.

"Sure."

Wynn didn't say anything more and quickly ended the call.
