

The Breaking Point of Love

Chapter 857

Hannah said, "Ordering pies is easy. Who are they for, Jo? And what flavors would you like?"

Jordyn replied at once. "It's for Mom! As for the flavors..."

She suddenly realised that she didn't actually know what kind of pies her mother liked.

"So, they're for Mrs. Fleming?" Hannah was delighted to hear that the pies were for Celeste.

"I know what she likes. I'll have someone send over some pictures of the available designs later. You can choose from them."

Jordyn nodded. "Okay. Thank you, Hannah."

Hannah immediately went to make the arrangements.

There were so many designs to choose from that Hannah suggested ordering several different flavors to cater to the preferences of the other members of the Rodriguez family as well.

Jordyn thought that made sense. Besides, she liked every design and wanted to order a box of each.

Hannah hurriedly dissuaded her. "That's far too many. Mrs. Fleming and her family won't be able to eat all of them. Five or six boxes should be enough."

Jordyn fell silent for a moment. "...Alright."

Once she had more or less finished making her selections, she returned the tablet to Hannah and turned to go upstairs. She spotted Trevor standing at the foot of the stairs.

She had no idea how long he had been standing there. When he saw her turn around, he finally spoke. "Ordering pies? None for me?"

Jordyn walked straight past him. "No."

Trevor turned to watch her retreating figure. "Playing favourites, are we?"

Jordyn had already stopped paying him any attention. She went straight upstairs and returned to her room.

...

The next morning, not long after Jordyn got up, a delivery arrived from Celeste. It contained pies and a moon hare figurine.

Trevor happened to be coming downstairs when he saw the gift box in Jordyn's arms. He had barely glanced at it before she carried it upstairs.

He took note of it but didn't ask any questions. After breakfast, he returned to the manor with Jordyn.

By then, Queenie and Lincoln had already returned, and Tucker was also on holiday.

When they saw Trevor and Jordyn arrive together, with no one else accompanying them, Martha turned to Trevor when Jordyn wasn't paying attention.

"You and Celeste still haven't divorced. It's the Harvest Moon Festival today Couldn't you at least go to the Rodriguez residence and see if you can bring Cel here to celebrate with Jordyn?"

"She has her own plans," Trevor replied.

Martha understood perfectly well what was going on. "You haven't even asked her! If you don't, of course she'll have to make her own plans How do you know she won't agree unless you ask? Cel still cares very much about Jordyn."

Trevor said nothing.

His silence only made Martha angrier. "You simply don't want to go, yet you keep coming up with excuses!"

Queenie, Lincoln, and Teagan had all overheard their conversation. They turned to look at the pair as well.

Martha grew increasingly furious. "All you care about is that woman! Why did you even come back here? Why don't you just go and spend the Harvest Moon Festival with her instead!"

"If I really went, you wouldn't be happy about that either," Trevor replied. Martha was so angry that she could barely catch her breath. "Get out! If you want to go, then go! Don't sit here and get on my nerves! You won't even let me enjoy a peaceful holiday!"

Trevor didn't leave. Instead, he calmly set about brewing tea for his grandmother, his movements practised and unhurried.

Everyone in the family knew that the two of them were very close. They also knew that whenever Martha told Trevor to go and spend the holiday with Wynn

neither of them meant it. Such remarks were simply part of their usual bickering.

As for the current state of Trevor's relationship with Wynn, even the Fleming family didn't really know.

Still, judging by the way things stood, divorce between Trevor and Celeste seemed inevitable.

Trevor had no intention of trying to win her back, and Celeste showed no signs of turning back.

When it came to matters of the heart, there was indeed no forcing things. But.....

Queenie looked at Trevor and said, "Even if the two of you are going to divorce, you'll have to wait a while before doing so."

You're all caught up with The Breaking Point of Love.