

The Breaking Point of Love

Chapter 860

Thinking about why Trevor couldn't step in to help his family, Celeste's face suddenly came to Calvin's mind.

He still remembered Celeste. He had simply never imagined that Celeste and Trevor were actually married. Even more surprising was the unexpected history between her and the Locket family.

The members of the Lockets and Shaws were each lost in their own thoughts, and Wynn had no interest in paying attention to them.

Seeing that Trevor still hadn't replied to any of her messages, she fell silent for a moment before picking up her phone and sending festive greetings to Miles and Beck.

Beck saw her message almost as soon as it arrived. This was the first time Wynn had contacted him in quite a while.

Given the history of hostility between Celeste and Wynn, there was no chance the two women would ever reconcile. So, even if Trevor and Wynn eventually got married, there was no way he and Wynn could remain friends.

With that thought in mind, Beck left her message unanswered.

Meanwhile, Miles was bored out of his mind when Wynn's message arrived. He was momentarily taken aback when he saw it.

Her message didn't exactly make him happy. However, when he thought of Trevor, he frowned slightly before replying anyway. "Thanks! Happy Harvest Moon Festival to you too!"

After seeing his reply, Wynn called him.

Miles saw the incoming call and answered. Before he could say anything, Wynn spoke first. "It's a big holiday. Haven't you gone out to have some fun?"

Miles sighed at the question. "None of you are going out, so where am I supposed to go on my own?"

Hearing that, Wynn narrowed her eyes slightly and smiled. "You're not going out today, but what about tomorrow or the day after?"

"I haven't decided yet."

Her question immediately piqued his interest. "What? Do you and Trevor have plans?"

"No."

Miles wasn't convinced. "You two still haven't made any plans? Seriously?"

"Seriously. Why would I lie to you?"

Miles sighed. "Alright, then..."

Wynn chuckled. "I called because I was worried you'd be bored and wanted to chat for a bit. I have something to take care of now, so I'll hang up first. We'll talk again another day."

"Sure."

After ending the call, Wynn's stiff posture relaxed slightly. Ever since Philip's banquet, Trevor had consistently avoided seeing her, it was impossible for her not to feel anxious. She needed something however small, to reassure herself.

She could still come and go freely at Fleming Group, and Miles was still treating her much as he always had. She finally felt a little more at ease as she thought of this.

If Trevor truly wanted to break up with her or cut ties with her completely, surely he would have given instructions to Fleming Group and Miles by now. The fact that he hadn't said anything meant there was still a chance.

The Lockets and Shaws knew she had been talking to Miles on the phone.

They also knew she could still come and go freely at Fleming Group. That was precisely why, despite Trevor having refused to see Wynn throughout this period, they still held on to hope that he might eventually help them.

After hanging up, Wynn hesitated for a moment before opening her chat log with Beck. But there was nothing there. He still hadn't replied.

Wynn understood that Beck had no intention of responding. When it came to Celeste and Wynn, he had made his choice long ago, and he had chosen Celeste.

She just wondered whether, if one day he were forced to choose between Celeste and Trevor, he would still stand by Celeste with the same unwavering resolve.
