Chapter 1021 Are You Feeling Unwell?

Jenny learned from the internet that Alec and Blake were keeping in contact with each other. She saw the photos published by the paparazzi. There were even rumors saying that they had already gotten back together and were going to be engaged.

Jenny put her phone away. She didn't believe the rumors. She knew Alec's personality well. If he said he wasn't interested in Blake, then he truly wasn't interested. They were together before only as a pretense, much less getting back together now. However, she still felt uncomfortable whenever they met.

On the other hand, she had moved in to live with Evan. She had no right to control who Alec met. That would be selfish.

She no longer pondered the matter and buried herself in her patients' records, forgetting everything else.

They didn't dwindle on the topic of their friendship for long. There was no need to apologize for anything. What they needed to do was to work hard and then meet each other at the top.

"Let's go. I'll treat you to dinner," Stephanie said, patting her on the shoulder.

Jenny hesitated. She was thinking of Evan. She'd promised to accompany him for dinner every day.

"Are you worried about Evan?" Stephanie had heard about Evan from Paul. As for why she and Paul were still in contact with each other, it was because Paul was like an annoying fly. No matter how often Stephanie swatted him away, he'd find a way to come back to her life. It was truly an exasperating situation.

At first, Stephanie had a good impression of Evan. However, once she heard of the request that he had made to Jenny, she changed her perceptions of him.

"Does he want to control you even on this? Rescuing you doesn't mean taking away your freedom." Stephanie was upset.

she misunderstood Evan and said, "He's not taking away my freedom. I matters and meet up with you. You must eat with me today." Stephanie "Would you have gone if he hadn't suggested it?" Stephanie rolled her eyes at her. If Jenny really was the one to suggest it, then she was a fool.

Jenny was silent.

If Evan hadn't brought it up, Jenny wouldn't have offered to take care of him. She still would have been concerned for him, but she wouldn't have gone so far as to move into his house.

"You're still young, Jenny. You have to think about your future," Stephanie sighed. She was worried that Jenny was really going to sacrifice her life for this.

While speaking, the waiter served them their food. Jenny ate, but her mind was elsewhere.

Stephanie asked, 'What about you and Alec? I saw you guys getting close to each other before. I thought you were preparing to be with him again.'

Stephanie was not too sure before. Back then, although she wanted to escape him, she believed he had feelings for her. However, after arriving in Bardoff City and experiencing so many other things, she quickly saw all the red flags in her relationship with Paul.

That insane love was wrong from the start.

Once they were in the shopping mall, Stephanie began clearing the racks.

Although the Walkers were not as wealthy as the Walters, they were still not short of money. Hence, Stephanie could buy anything she wanted without a second thought.

After buying herself a few outfits, she bought some clothes for her parents. Then, she looked at Jenny.

"Is there anything that you like? I'll buy it for you. n

"Really?" Jenny smiled. She swept her gaze around the shop but didn't see anything she liked.

"Really. Who are we? I'd give you my whole person if I could." Stephanie raised her eyebrows flirtatiously at Jenny, who suddenly didn't know where to look.

She pushed her away. "I wouldn't want you.'

"Oh, of course. You already have someone in mind, I know." Stephanie teased her. "The new year is already coming, and you and Alec haven't progressed at all. I'm anxious for you."

"Why are you anxious? It has nothing to do with you." Jenny was speechless as she and Stephanie walked into another boutique.

"Don't you know what first come, first served means? Or is this how the Yews brought you up?" Jenny looked at her coldly, rage steaming off her skin. Melanie had to reconsider her thoughts.

She knew about the Yews. Was she also one of the Ten Elites?

Although Melanie was arrogant, she was not domineering. She knew what her family's position was.

After a few moments, she softened her tone. "Sorry. I didn't notice. Your friend can have it if she likes it."

Jenny was surprised. She thought that she would continue being arrogant. She didn't expect her to cave so easily.

Jenny looked at Stephanie. "Do you still like it?"

"No." Stephanie shook her head. Melanie had already tried it on. Even if she hadn't, Stephanie didn't like wearing the same style as someone else.

The atmosphere instantly grew solemn. Melanie smiled suddenly and pointed outside. "Let's have a chat. I'll treat you all to some smoothies."

Jenny looked at Stephanie, who was equally dumbfounded. However, she did not feel opposed to it. "Alright."

Melanie paid for the dress she had tried on, and they walked into the smoothies shop downstairs.

Jenny couldn't remember the last time she had a smoothie. Most of the time, she had coffee instead because she felt smoothies were too sweet for her liking.

They ordered some smoothies. It was then that Melanie picked up where they left off. "Although I know he still likes you, I don't mind. I think it just means that he has depth. Someone like that is worthy of my affection.'

Her eyes shone when she spoke of Paul. Stephanie felt her chest bloom when she looked at her. She remembered how proud she was to be with Paul before. Then when Paul was unwilling to disclose their relationship and even said he wouldn't marry her, their relationship changed forever.

Jenny rolled her eyes and said, "Does that mean we have to forgive him? Does he think that the world revolves around him?"

If Alec were to do what Paul did, refuse to make their relationship public, refuse to marry her, and then trap her in his house, Jenny would not forgive him either.

Some things were just a matter of principles.

"Of course, not everyone has to forgive him. Like Stephanie. Don't you forgive him?" Melanie said. She continued, "But he has to be given another chance. Stephanie might not be willing to give him a chance, but I do. I believe that he won't make the same mistake again."

Jenny admired her willingness to be a lab rat. "Alright, as you wish."

She couldn't stop anyone from liking Paul. Despite his shortcomings, Paul was handsome and came from wealth. Lots of girls would like him.

"Can we exchange phone numbers? We'll be able to hang out in the future." Melanie took her phone out embarrassedly, blushing a little. She wouldn't have been so arrogant if she had known that she would be friends with them.

Mhm. Have you had dinner?" Jenny went to sit across from Evan.

Evan nodded. "Don't worry about me. I have a personal chef, remember?"

Though having asked Jenny to move in with him, Evan still didn't want to control her too much. He didn't want to upset her, after all.

"Here. Got you a present for New Year's." Jenny handed him a present.

Evan took it, surprised. "Isn't New Year's in two days? Why are you giving me this now?"

Jenny shrugged. "It's all the same to me."

Evan smiled. "Thank you."

"Open it. See if you like what I got you." Jenny beamed at him, hoping Evan's moods might lift with the present she got for him.

"What about you? Any New Year's plans?" Alec asked. He wanted to ask her if she'd like to spend it with him but wasn't sure if she'd accept the offer.

After some thinking, Jenny said, "I'm not sure. Probably like usual spending it with Zack and Gilbert."

Evan would likely join them as well, though Jenny didn't mention it to Alec for fear of his displeasure.

Frankly, Alec had guessed as much too.

"Sounds good. Why don't we light some fireworks together during the night? We can have lunch together." The people of Bardoff City customarily had their New Year's meal as lunch instead, so they'd still be able to hang out for the remainder of the day.

"Alright."
